MATAMORAS, June 15, 1860.

Mr. Editor—The particulars of the defeat which the Liberalists suffered at Guadalajara have come to hand, and although the channel through which they come is Liberal, yet they are sufficiently reliable to enable us to determine that Degan's having at first overthrown not so disastrous as it was at first reported to be. If anything can save Degan from the ill will of his countrymen for his unfortunate affair, it is the fact that he has been the worst of Mexican military leaders, and was actually sick to a victory, when he was unfortunately wounded by the explosion of a grenade, losing his character for skill in the troops getting away, and rather than lose the whole of his army for the sake of capturing the town—which would have been the most probable issue if he had undergone the necessary sacrifice of men, and thus placed himself at the mercy of Miramon's new forces, which were freshly advancing—he gave the order to retreat. He never rallied to restore order with the artillery, baggage and ammunition, and he now probably victorious over, or subjected to the orders of, Miramon.

It appears that Gen. Wolf was intrenched in Guadalajara with a force of 4000 men, and that Degan made an impetuous attack upon the place with 10,000 men, in hopes to take it before Miramon would come up. Gen. Wolf, however, defended the place as a soldier should; and although there was a strong prospect of victory for Degan, yet it would have had to have been won over the best general in the Mexican army, and not until the town had been won house by house. Miramon was on the march to Guadalajara at the time, and it is doubtful, even if Degan had won the fight, whether he would have been able to maintain himself before the furious attack which the Church Presidency would have made. As it is, all this is a speculation, and therefore unnecessary. But it is useful to insert it, in order to struggle the too exhortant claims of the Liberalists as to what Degan would have done if he had not had his leg shattered.

As I said, the Liberal force retired in complete order, taking all its stores, munitions, etc. The retreat was continued (now) to the village of Cocula, about one day's march, where preparations were made for a reorganization. Degollado was now in command, and the muster roll exhibited 10,000 men and 16 pieces of artillery. The troops appeared to be in good spirits, for Maximon who had just lost their commander: but as it was announced that a new election should determine the next in command, the force, the army was again impressed with hopes of success. The election subsequently took place, and Gen. Caravajal was elevated to the supreme command.

This new movement lends some prospect to the declining fortunes of Juarez, and the Liberals have yet a chance if they will abide by the resolutions of the new General. Caravajal is well known on the line of the Rio Bravo as one of the most skillful officers of the Mexican service, and besides his capacity, he will probably proceed at once to organize an American legion out of such foreigners as may be in the army or in the country, who will join him; and with this forlorn hope he will do more damage to the Centralists than with all his other forces. This new element will not be invited from the United States, but will consist of such loose Americans as are at all times dodging about Mexico in search of something desperate and daring, who will jump at the chance to distinguish themselves as artillerists, cavalry or infantry, for the poor pay of being pelted awhile by the Mexicans and to be subsequently turned adrift without pay or reward. I have allucssed too much of the treachery of this people towards any countryman ever to feel satisfied when I see the gallant fellows throwing themselves upon design for the purpose of advancing the good of Mexico, or in fact of any of the Spanish American race. But whatever the record may show, we are still here and some of us never learn by experience, so it will be no difficult task for Caravajal to gather a hundred or two of Americans in his famous "legion," and with this force to sustain and bear the brunt of all the most terrible fights, he will probably alter the face of affairs so that a compromise may be made at least.

The position of affairs at present is settled, therefore, for the relations of parties is not changed from what it was before Degan attacked Guadalajara. Caravajal is at Cocula with 10,000 men, and Miramon, with an equal force, is in the vicinity. Both parties have heavy batteries of artillery, say forty pieces, and both parties feel that the fate of affairs rests on the termination of the fight. I write in the present tense, descriptively, while in truth I should write in the imperfect, for the probabilities are that the struggle has already taken place, and we are to-day thoroughly Church or thoroughly Liberal. All parties admit that this exciting state of things cannot continue longer than after another decisive fight, and the general impression seems to be that a wholesale compromise will be entered into, by which the Church will be the principal gainer. Poor old Juarez has been used so long as the aspirants about him can make him useful, and the tone of opinion seems to be that he ought to retire. I think he stands the almost show of continuing in office of any man in Mexico. Buchanan has been too much for Mar, and the poor old Indian goes down under the weight that the American President thrust upon him for selfish purposes. Mr. Buchanan sought to make a popularity for himself and his friends, and in doing so he made so many requisitions upon the liberality of Juarez that at last the Mexican nation, through its subordinate State Legislatures, had to put a check upon the weakness which was playing wild with the interests and rights of Mexico. In fact, Juarez, Lerdo and Ocampo are voted decidedly more crazy than Mr. McLane, for the latter could not be presumed to know as much about the constitution of this country as the rulers of the State; but as both parties have been running a tilt at the organic act, it is hard to determine which is the most to blame, the Mexicans for pushing to demands which were illegal, and which they had no shadow of right for granting; or the American Government and its representatives in insisting on such concessions.

The decisive battle probably occurred about the 1st of June, in the neighborhood of Guadalajara, and the chances are that Miramon has won the day. His troops are better, his equipments are better, and his energy more progressive and determined. Gen. Caravajal will not have had time to win the confidence of his troops or to restore their feeling of self-reliance. Before Miramon crowds upon him with impetuous order for a battle, if the Liberalists accept the challenge, it will be a disastrous day for them and Caravajal will lose his chance of being President. But if he wisely retreats, and draws Miramon from the support of Wolf and the garrison of Guadalajara, he may make it a drawn battle and achieve a compromise which will settle all difficulties and knock McLane and his negotiations into a complete jumble.

The Progresista, the Liberal organ published in this city, is out with an able editorial which at once settles the point that Tamaulipas is in favor of a secession of some sort, regardless of the imminently Liberal principles which are lisconed on the banners of the Vera Cruz Government. In fact, as the law in Mexico is generally regarded to be for the "spoils," why neither the people nor the "outs" see any chance for themselves but in a pacification, which if it throws them no higher will certainly not lower them any further from the "plunder." It is all moonshine about the spread of liberal principles in Mexico, for it requires public schools and general information to extend enlightened government, and Mexico, instead of improving in intellectual grace, is sinking deeper into priestcraft or rascality. The padres "do" the education, and they either turn out a vaulot or a scoundrel, for if a Mexican ever rises above the sciences of a puny scraper, he is pretty certain to aspire to be a "speculator," with loose ideas of honor or honor. There are some exceptions, it is true, but they are fewer than "angels' visits," and have generally left the country. I hope, therefore, in my next, to be able to give you a definite idea of who has won the day, for there is no question of principle in the matter.

WHICH IS GENUINE?

We are curious to know which one of the two Democratic candidates now before the people for the Presidency is the genuine one? Both are claimed to be Democratic candidates, but we wish to know which is the Democratic candidate. If one is genuine and the other bogus, we want their respective conditions accurately and distinctly settled, so that we may know precisely how to designate them. It will happen, very likely, in the course of the canvass, that we may have to make frequent allusion to both of them, and it will save us much trouble and embarrassment if the matter can be settled in the beginning.

Breckinridge was nominated by delegates representing, in whole or in part, twenty-two of the States, which is exactly two-thirds of the whole number of States, and he therefore comes up to the requirements of the Democratic rule, so far as States are concerned, however it may be in regard to numbers. Douglas was nominated by delegates representing, in whole or in part, an equal number of States with the Breckinridge men, and therefore, in the respect, stands on the same footing. Unable, for ourselves, to decide the question, we respectfully invoke the assistance of our Democratic contemporaries in the solution of the difficulty. Which is the "true Prince?" Which one is the only, genuine, original Josephus "Fuller which king, Reynolds?" In the confusion of the perplexity in which the two Conventions have placed us, we entreat some authoritative exposition of this knotty question.

WOOD'S READER. PART I. By Alphonso Wood, A. M. New York: Barnes & Burr. For sale by Stephens & Seymour, 47 Common street.

This is a clear book apparently of considerable merit, and illustrating a topic which should be understood by every one intending to cultivate the soil in any form from a sugar plantation down to a flower pot.

MARY STUART, Queen of Scots. By G. W. M. Reynolds. Philadelphia: Peterson & Brothers. For sale by Thos. L. White, 108 Canal street, and J. C. Morgan & Co., Exchange place.

This is a romance of the G. P. R. James school, in which the four Marie figure, and steel-clad knights do a good deal of hard riding and fighting. It is quite interesting.

THE REBEL AND THE ROVER. By Harry Hazel. Philadelphia: Peterson & Brothers. For sale by Thos. L. White and J. C. Morgan & Co.

A sea story of apparently small merit.

THE LOVELY BEAUTY. By Mrs. Gray. Philadelphia: Peterson & Brothers. For sale by Thos. L. White and J. C. Morgan & Co.

A handsomely bound volume of some 600 pages, containing apparently, in the form an interesting romance, moral lessons upon the influences surrounding childhood and youth.

HAWKSVIEW. By Holme Lee. New York: W. A. Townsend & Co. For sale by Thos. L. White.

The writings of this author are very highly spoken of, and a glance at the volume before us justifies the reputation. The style appears to be very good and the matter quite interesting.

LYRICS. By Owen Meredith. Boston: Ticknor & Fields. For sale by J. C. Morgan & Co.

This is a poem by a son of the celebrated novelist, Bulwer. We can only say for the present that it is very handsomely bound and printed, but have not time to enter upon any discription of its merits.

A SOUTH SIDE VIEW OF SLAVERY. By Nehemiah Adams, D. D. Boston: Ticknor & Fields. For sale by J. C. Morgan & Co.

This work touches on topics of the greatest interest, purporting to be views of a Northerner on a personal inspection of the workings of slavery. It deals with Uncle Tom's Cabin, with British interest in slavery, and with the political aspect of the case.

HARPER'S MONTHLY, for July. For sale by J. C. Morgan & Co.

Full of interesting matter.

BACHELORS' HALL AT BILOXI.—It will please the unmarried gentlemen public to know, that a real, genuine "bachelors' ball" has been opened at that gayest of neighboring watering places, Biloxi; and it is true to its name, for it has been gotten up for unmarried gentlemen, exclusively and alone; and Smith and Mills will do well, for they know how to do it. Smith is not the famous John, but Wm. Smith, known as Bill Smith when a boy, but since manhood known all over town as "Smith the Rigger." Though a rigger he will run no rig on any one who calls for something to drink, and sustains to sleep. Single gentlemen will find "Bachelors' Ball" a place hard to leave, when once they stop there. No offense is meant to the ladies, but bachelors will be bachelors, and a place has been provided for their express accommodation. We refer to the card of Messrs. Smith & Mills, in another column.

CONVICTED.—Harmoney, who was arrested some time ago in Montgomery, charged with having stolen $50,000 at different periods, from the Adams' Express Company, and brought to trial on a civil suit, has confessed a judgment in favor of the company, and plead guilty. When first arrested in Montgomery, Harmoney gave bail, which he afterwards forfeited, and was rearrested in New York, when about to leave for Europe. Judge Shorter sentenced him to ten years imprisonment in the Penitentiary. A large portion of the money was recovered last August through the efforts of detective Pinkerton, of the Chicago police. Great credit is due to H. B. Plant and H. Sanford, General Superintendents, who conducted the case on the part of the company. Their energy and perseverance was mainly instrumental in bringing about the successful issue of the trial.

The steamship Cahawba, Capt. Smith, leaves at 8 o'clock this morning for New York via Havana, with $20,000 in specie for Havana, and the following passengers:

For New York.—Thos. Merlin, S. Hosmer, H. A. Owen, J. A. Sheridan, A. Pollock, W. C. Fee, H. Kerr, S. L. Richmond, Gardner, W. C. Overbury, S. Hill, Sergeant, C. W. Perryman, Mrs. Perryman and child, Mrs. Sergeant, H. Harrison, Anderson lady and daughter, Mrs. L. Calahan.

For Havana.—C. Herrer, lady and child, R. J. Rivas.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION BY AUCTION.—See to-night's advertisement in which Messrs. Soniat & Co. offer for sale, at the Exchange, this evening, at 7 o'clock, the valuable property on the corner of Bayou Road and Claiborne street, with all the other valuable real estate shown in the first and fourth Districts. For particulars see advertisement.

THE UNRESERVED SALE of fine horses, elegant carriages, buggies, etc., advertised by Montgomery & Co. in this paper, will take place this day. Those in want of a good horse, a fine top or open buggy, should attend and purchase, as it will be without any reserve. For particulars see advertisement.

LOST—$10 Reward.—See advertisement of small pocket book, in left of R. Griffiths, corner of Camp and Gravier streets.

MORGAN'S RESTAURANT.—Notice is given elsewhere that this house will close on the 30th of June. It opened on the 1st of October, when the proprietors expected only a season of trial.

Local Intelligence.

THE RAIN is here at last; and the town with its dusty streets, and the country with its parched fields, and the hot, dry atmosphere, alike breathe forth thanks for the blessed rain.

How greedily the dry ground drank in the first delicious draughts! How willingly the dust, tired of flying, subsided into mud! How keenly did the panting cisterns and shrieking gardens enjoy the heavenly moisture! Who can imagine the voluptuous variety with which the starved swamp gorged on long lost food! How shall we describe the joy which swelled the hearts of the suburban gentlemen, as they heard the sonorous song of the pure spout-water, ringing within their long-empty cisterns.

The sun sat in at about one o'clock yesterday morning, and increased, with intermissions, to heavier and heavier installments, and yesterday morning and forenoon it had become a regular, good old-fashioned New Orleans rain. The streets were flooded; the banquettes were covered with mud; the retreating torrents went submerged with whole fleets of planks, barrels and other floatable gear; people kneaded up the unbearably bedraggled mud, and that, too, was welcome; the levee was washed, and all the swamped contents in a perfect conformance of joy; even the servants who scrubbed the mud from the sidewalks were jubilant, and enjoyed their old-time labor, just for the sweetness of the change.

Our vegetable friend, the oldest inhabitant declares that he never before saw such a drought in the Crescent City, and never saw a drought followed by a rain so much needed—so thankfully welcomed by the people, for and over so evidently refreshing to vegetation in town and country.

Yesterday's rain was enough for present purposes, but so long has it been coming, that there must be many more baptisms of the kind before any one can say he has the heavens. "Hold enough!" And, in honor of the rain, we cannot do better, in the way of compliment to it, than to quote one of the first of American poets, who has a word for summer rain:

How beautiful is the rain!
After the dust and heat,
In the broad and busy street,
To the weary wight,
How beautiful is the rain!

How it clatters along the roofs,
Like the tramp of hoofs!
How it gushes and struggles out
From the throat of the over-flowing spout!
Across the window pane
It pours and pours;
And swift and wide
With a muddy tide,
Like a river, down the gutter roars
The rain, the welcome rain!

The sick man from his chamber looks
At the rapid brooks
To feel the cool
Breath of rain like pool;
His feverish brain
Grows calm again,
And he breathes a blessing on the rain!

From the neighboring school
Come the boys,
With more than their wonted noise
And commotion;
And down the wet streets
Sail their mimic fleets,
Till the treacherous pool
Engulphs them in its whirling
And turbulent ocean.

In the country on every side,
Where, far and wide,
Like a leopard's tawny and spotted hide,
Stretches the plain,
To the grass and the grain,
How welcome the rain!

THE FIRE ALARM TELEGRAPH.—Firemen and others will be pleased to know that the Board of Assistant Aldermen last night took action on the evil of false alarms by telegraph. Read the proceedings published elsewhere.

THE DARKEY LOTHARIO.—We were in error yesterday in stating that Thomas J. Martin, the free colored musician and seducer, had been sent before the Criminal Court by Recorder Emerson, for threatening the mother of one of his victims. He was simply sent to prison, in default of $1000 bail, to await his examination before the Recorder, on the 17th proximo. From the temper of the pith around town, in regard to his base actions, we believe he is safer in prison than out of it.

A TOP-HEAVY BUSINESS.—Yesterday, during the rain, two young ladies who had been in a book store on Chartres street, hailed, or rather beckoned, an omnibus, bound up town, to stop and take them in. The omnibus stopped. The sweet was sloppy, they had no umbrella, the rain was falling.

An elegant looking one-armed gentleman with an umbrella politely offered his assistance and his umbrella, and he was so graceful and prepossessing in his manner, that his polite attention was not declined. Whilst he shaded them with his umbrella in his only hand, he held the omnibus door open with the stump of his other arm, (he had on a shanghai coat with large loose sleeves,) and the ladies got in, rewarding him with the sweet smiles of acknowledgment which they felt in duty bound to return. The omnibus rattled on, and the handsome one-armed gallant walked down street, the ladies looking admiringly after him.

As the omnibus rattled on, one of the ladies exclaimed to the other, "Good heavens, I've lost my bracelet!" Their consternation was such, that the other passengers stirred up the straw and looked everywhere, but no bracelet was to be found. It was a valuable ornament, set with turquoise and diamonds, and worth $110. Thinking the bracelet might have been dropped at the bookstore, the ladies got out of the omnibus at Lafayette Square, and got into the very next down-town omnibus, to return to the bookstore.

Opposite the ladies' entrance to the City Hotel the omnibus stopped, and a gentleman got in. "Why, Fanny," said one of the ladies, "that's the gentleman that helped us in into the other omnibus!" "No it ain't," said the other; "that was a one-armed gentleman, and this one is not!" Their surprise was noticed, and their remarks overheard by the new passenger. He looked every way but at them; and after riding only a square or two, pulled the strap and got out. As he left his seat, the ladies saw the lost bracelet where he had been sitting. They were too glad to recover the jewel, to watch which way he went, or to raise an alarm about him. They got out at the first convenient place, took the next up-going omnibus, and, we hope, got home with easy hearts and dry feet.

All the circumstances showed the gallant rainbeau to be a thief, with his arm doubled up in his sleeve for thievish purposes; and that he was so much surprised at meeting the ladies in a back-going omnibus, and at finding they recognized him with both hands out, when he had only one before, that he became scared, and left the bracelet behind him, to prevent an alarm or a pursuit.

TEXAS IN SAVANNAH.—W. H. Bailey, alias Blair, the dirty rascal who cheated the negro Texas and other negroes out of their watches, (after a fashion which we have fully described in these columns,) was yesterday overhauled by Recorder Emerson, and sent to the Work-house for six months. None of the watches so infamously obtained were recovered; but Texas, having been presented with another watch by the police, expresses himself satisfied; and he had ample satisfaction in looking at the dirty robber whilst he was in the cells.

When Texas heard of the man's arrest, he went into the corridor between the cells, (he is porter of the locking and basenesses to all parts of it at all times,) he took a good look at the man through the bars. Bailey had his hat pulled down over his eyes, and seeing Texas looking at him with a half comical expression, fiercely demanded to know what he was looking at. "Why, nothing in particular, massa," he answered. "Only here it is two years since you was here, you know, and this time nothing on the side of de house which made me know it was you, and I was only wondering what you was in for, and how long you was going to stay, and how you like de cell, and all dat sort of thing."

Texas went into the cook's room, and said: "Here mind; I'll tell good news to the poorest class as can put 20 cts. upon de counter; and you bet I have to let me back into de Work-house, and I'll treat the hot, to-night, and rotted up de Work-house yesterday, you can see all de cells in the Black Maria. Texas was among de spectators. Mr. Bailey walked out stiffly, without looking to the right or to the left, and as he passed, Texas politely lifted his cap and showed all the fruzzy in his head. Texas is satisfied.

SEARCHING.—Edward Galvanky (old name for an Irishman) was arrested on Magazine street yesterday afternoon, by officers Simpson and Dempsey, on the charge of having seriously stabbed John McCabey. Recorder Emerson will look to him a good time.

RUNNING TO FIRES.—A German woman named Wash, the National, 21 years of age, living near the end of the Common street shell road, at the New Canal, was crushing a coal for kindling with a hatchet, on Monday last, when the head accidentally flew off, and struck her on the head with a stone, and that at the same time he was severely assisted and abused by Peter Hanon, Armand Lelo, and John Carney and others. Warrants were issued for the accused, who are youngsters and old enough to be at work.

DISMISSED OFF A STONE CHAT.—Henry Neal was arrested yesterday afternoon on Orleans street, by officers Langston and Delaney. He was charged with attempting to run off Theodore Hubert's stone girl Gem. Whether it was true or not, the accusation of the attempt is not to be sneezed at.

TAKE HIM TAIL HOME.—John Wilson made examination at the Third District, on the charge of having sold to F. H. Montesa, for $60, a bob tail horse which Montesa now believes was stolen from Frank Berger.

FIRST DISTRICT COURT.—Judge Bond.—Joseph Scully, f. m. c., was yesterday tried for the murder of Celeste Taggert, the slave mistress with whom he had lived, and whom he stabbed and killed, at her residence on St. Joseph street, some time ago.

Smith was jealous of a Frenchman who had captivated him in the affections of the copper colored Omer, and, as it was generally believed, went to the house that night to kill the Frenchman instead of her.

Smith was defended by Messrs. Field and Taylor. Dillon. The jury, after an absence of ten or fifteen minutes, brought in a verdict of manslaughter.

COMMON COUNCIL.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.—Met last evening, Mr. Nixon in the chair.

A communication from the Mayor announced to the Board a few of the principles by which he will be governed. It is his first intention to insure the enforcement of all laws without exception.

He insists upon the prevention of gaming by the police, himself, as head of the department, to set the example.

On the score of health he is anxious for the cleanliness of the streets, and will accord any efforts towards draining the swamps in the rear of the city.

He favors city railroads. And will earnestly cooperate in any good scheme of affording a sufficient supply of water. The communication was ordered to be spread on the minutes.

Another communication was received referring to the celebration of the approaching 4th of July.

A communication from the Board of Assistant Aldermen invited concurrence of this Board in the resolution for refixing the time of public opening of the Shell road, and said on the table subject to call, as was also a resolution for going into the election of officers.

Other resolutions sent up from the Board of Assistant Aldermen were referred.

A resolution from that Board, appropriating $1,000 for expenses on the Fourth of July next, was concurred in.

Petitions were read and referred, or tabled subject to call.

Mr. White offered resolutions authorizing the Mayor to employ seventy-five additional policemen, and to publish a notice of opening sundry streets. They were referred.

Mr. Harrison offered a resolution annulling the contract for paving Water street, heretofore awarded to Geo. Cronan; referred.

The Board then went into executive session.

BOARD OF ASSISTANT ALDERMEN.—Present a quorum; Mr. Bakewell in the chair.

Alcide Monroe, by message, recommended an appropriation and the appointment of a committee for the property celebrating the Fourth of July.

Mr. Leefe offered a resolution to expend $1,200 in the celebration. After discussion, the resolution was so amended as to refer the disbursement to the hands of a joint committee and adopted.

The Mayor, in another message, explained the principle upon which he intended to discharge his duties, and recommended, among other things, the uniforming of the police. Referred.

The Comptroller reported adjudication of contracts; lost.

Cleaning privies of Parish Prison, City Jail and Recorder Joubon to Wm. Piper, at $1200 per annum.

Square block paving of Bourbon street, from Canal to Esplanade, to L. Burgi, at $4.17 per square foot yard, etc., etc.

Square block paving of Toulouse street, from levee to Main, to L. Burgi, at $4.20 per superficial yard, etc., etc.

Square block paving of St. Peter street, from Levee to Main, to John Coleman & Co., at $4.23 per superficial yard, etc., etc.

All referred to Finance Committee.

The Treasurer reported a fund on hand of $13,— 42 to date. Referred.

The Board of Aldermen reported concurrence in sundry resolutions.

A resolution inviting the Board of Aldermen to a joint session, at the next meeting, for the election of city officers and the official journal, was adopted and sent to that Board.

A resolution was offered to raise the salaries of the Recorders' clerks to $125 per month, and those of the deputy clerks to $75 per month. Referred.

A resolution was offered, instructing the City Physicians (Dr. Dulcey) to look into small-pox matters at Dr. Ambert's hospital in the Third District, and to report thereon. Adopted.

A resolution was offered to prevent a certain number of copies of the Digest of the Laws of Louisiana. Referred.

Petitions were read by title and referred to the appropriate committees.

The Finance Committee reported the usual resolution for paying bills, which was adopted.

No report from the Street and Landing Committee.

The Police and Health Committee offered several resolutions of minor interest, which were adopted.

The Police and Fire Alarm Telegraph Committee reported the Telegraph to be in successful operation; alluded to the late false fire alarms sounded through the telegraph; expressed the belief that these alarms were started by thieves, for the purpose of seeing how the telegraph worked; and offered a amendment to the telegraph ordinances, authorizing the Superintendent of the Telegraph to offer a reward for the detection of persons sounding false alarms, and authorizing the courts of competent jurisdiction to punish such offenders, when arrested, by a fine of not less than $10, nor more than $100, or a proportionate term of imprisonment.

After transacting some other business, of no public importance, the Board adjourned.

DRESS TRIMMINGS AND FANCY GOODS.—Ladies who have not yet left the city can make quite a saving by calling during the to-morrow morning view of the recently selected prices. Messrs. F. & L. Pilie, at 123 Canal street, also, a good selection of Laces for dress goods, and a variety of articles to make room for their coming fall stock, and hope all to call as soon as can, as if there is any remaining after they will be obliged to have and sell them at any sacrifice to have room.

MUSIC.—Go to Hall's, corner Union and Baronne streets, for the latest piece of music published.

Mr. John C. Breckinridge to the President.
Gen. Zachary Taylor to the Presidency.
A meeting was held and addressed by several distinguished speakers, in this city, last night, in favor of some fourth or fifth ticket, which is said to be highly recommended for success in the event of its failure by the action of the Baltimore Democratic Convention.
There was extensive parade and torch-light procession, which terminated in front of the Bee office, where some speeches were made.
A brief account of the proceedings will be found in the columns of this paper.
