The trial of President Johnson recalls the attempt made in 1775 to destroy the character of the President Washington, with an intention, had it succeeded, to impeach him. The parties combined to accomplish these objects consisted of: First, the opponents of the funding scheme of Alexander Hamilton.

Washington, in his answer, after observing that to admit the demand would establish a dangerous precedent, concluded by saying that it was essential to the due administration of the government that the boundaries fixed by the Constitution between the different departments should be observed, a just regard to the Constitution and to the duty of his office forbade a compliance with the demand.
