HEAD' UBERTAKES TO KEEP A HOTEL.

CITY HOTEL, N. O., May 29, 1868. 'He's a pretty good fellow, but he can't keep a hotel.'

I arose early in the morning, put on my Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes, a span new billed white shirt with frills, my diamond pin which I bought of the original Jacobs, & a new scarf with all the colors of the rainbow, and boots that reflected my face.

The next that came to get a room was a colored member of the legislature. I told him we kept a white man's hotel and couldn't accommodate him. He got indignant, and asked me, "If I went back home, would you let me stay here?"

Then came another, who was dissatisfied with his room. So I put him in a room with several times, when I came to the door, cook, watchman, baggage master, and of 3 bell boys. I told them to remove Jones Smith's baggage from 65 to 57.

Mark the result, as I perceived. Bye and bye came a man who registered Sam'l Jones and lady. I put "Sam" in 104 and "lady" in 80. Evening came, and I was congratulating myself on being able to keep a hotel.

I went in the "P. P." and found 2 women enflamé, as we creoles say, and walking the floor and crying like mad. As quick as I went in they were gone, and I was left with a stranger man in my room! What do you mean, sir?

I began to be frightened, and I stammered, "I put a man in your room?" "Yes, you did, sir?" "What is the number of your room, madam?" "87, you wretch!"

I thought I was all right now, sure; but pretty soon there was another jerk at the P. P. bell. I had a long talk with the wrong speaking tube, instead of calling to the chamber maid on the ladies' side, I called the chamber maid on the gentleman's side!

The other lady, who had been married and lost her husband in another room, complained to him, as soon as she found him, and he came to pay me a visit at the office.

I began to quake. "Why didn't you put her down as your wife?" said I. "I refer to the register. There it is, you see, Samuel Jones and lady! It don't say anything about her being your wife. I keep a respectable house."

THE GREAT WATER HOUSTE.

FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF SOUTHERN YOUNG MEN. CAN ANYTHING BE DONE?

The great trouble under which we of the South are laboring is not that, as a people, we are bankrupt, but that we do not make sufficient use of the means at our disposal. There is little philosophy or common sense in our back upon our bright past or bewailing our dark present.

It is not that we are so backward as we are commonly supposed to be, but that we are so backward in our progress as to be so far behind the times. We are to use the tools we have, and not to waste precious time hunting, begging or stealing others.

Presently we came to a stand—the public stand—and stopping at the bar, went through the leg stretching process, a la Doctor Squeros of Dottedboys Hall. Ben Zeane, true to his name, stretched himself three or four times, calling each drink a quarter stretch.

"Here, Oates, you hold these stakes," at the same time putting a roll of greenbacks in my hands. "What stakes are these?" I inquired, eyeing attentively the money and the man.

"No, sir," I indignantly replied, "I'm no Hippogagus." Ben stepped in here and kindly explaining that the stakes were for the heat, not to eat, prevented a difficulty which might have proved serious.

"Come, Felis," he said, "let's go up stairs." So we got ourselves seats on the upper floor and a good crowd gathered around me, some one said "Saddle up." Half a dozen riders, with blue caps, red caps, and gray caps, appeared on the track, and in short order got astride their steeds.

Then the man came and got stakes, saying how he'd known that mare was "good for two beats." Ben and I rushed down stairs and went out on the track. The winning rider came galloping up to get the purse. On the (hot) spur of the moment he looked Percy. He took the money, and he made his mare go again.

FELIS GATES ON THE METAIRIE.

FOR THE NEW ORLEANS SUNDAY CRESCENT. I have been devoting myself of late to ethnology, and have discovered that the best place for studying the origin and progress of races is on the Metairie Course.

"Well," said Ben Zeane to me one day, says he, he says, "Felis, will you go to the Mettery with me to-day, and see the two races?" "I will, Ben," I answered. So we stepped into a carriage, painted yellow, which was awaiting its near the Clay Statue, and were whirled at the dizzy height of a mule's speed to the Halfway House.

"Umph," he said, rather cynically, "I suppose they are naturally fond of Oates and would like to eat you up." Presently we came to a stand—the public stand—and stopping at the bar, went through the leg stretching process, a la Doctor Squeros of Dottedboys Hall.

LETTER FROM BRENHAM, TEXAS.

Special Correspondence of the Crescent. BRENHAM, TEXAS, May 22, 1868. The crops in Texas, both corn and cotton, so far as I can understand, are fine.

The crops in Texas, both corn and cotton, so far as I can understand, are fine. In this immediate section they never were better, and the freedmen have worked much better than could have been expected. This is due to the fact that there has been owing to the intelligent bureau agent (Judge Wood) at this place, in all our gulf coast counties the planters, in consequence of three successive failures in the cotton crop, have been driven to the more honest and reliable labor of the freedmen.

Every body in this section seems to be rejoiced at the acquittal of President Johnson. His acquittal was contrary to all expectation—not that any of us believed in his acquittal, but we all knew mad rules the hour and day, and that fanaticism, religious or political, knows no bounds south of Heaven or Hell—to the latter place, fortunately, it now seems to tend.
