SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 6, 1898.

THE SUNDAY CRESCENT.—The Sunday Crescent, in all respects, is a paper which we offer as creditable to the literature and journalistic enterprise of New Orleans.

The Weekly Crescent, issued every Saturday morning, contains the news of the week by telegraph and mail, editorials, local matters of interest, financial and commercial summary, state of the markets and a collection of interesting miscellaneous articles.

See Supplement.

The fact that during and since the war the negroes have diminished rapidly in numbers, is denounced by Greeley as a base copperhead lie. That estimable but intense philosopher insists that the new condition in which the negroes find themselves is good not only for their morals but their health.

Among the demonstrations of homage on the part of Mr. Weed's paper to sound statesmanship and anti-radical policy, is the criticism on the suffrage clause of the platform just accepted by Grant that it "declares that in one part of the country where colored suffrage is likely to prove ruinous it may be established and enforced by superior power, while in another part, where such suffrage would be too inconsiderable to be noticed, it may be left to the people who have already declared against it."

It is no doubt safe to say that the late course of the class of journals referred to has a significance which is anything but favorable to radical ascendancy in the future; for this course is a tacit recognition of the increasing power and ultimate triumph of reaction, on the part of editors whose coolness and shrewdness of observation are not surpassed in American journalism.

The Oregon election shows that the great Democratic reaction against radical tyranny is increasing in volume and momentum. Oregon has not before voted with the Democrats for nine years, but now her Democratic majority is larger than was ever before given to any party in that State.

In six of the Southern States which have held elections on the Black Crook Constitutions, the total vote for those Constitutions was 416,227, out of a registered vote of 867,837. Thus less than one-half of the registered voters voted for the Constitutions.

It is noticeable that, in all the clamor about corruption in regard to the impeachment trial it is only the votes of Republicans that are in question. Nobody tried to buy a Democratic vote; and no Democrat acted as an agent in the matter.

"THE NATURALIST."—The June number of this periodical comes to us, through Simon, of Baronne street, with an intimation from the editors that in order to enable them to continue its publication at its present price, they need increased support.

ONE OF THE ILL OMFENS FOR RADICALISM.

The New York Sun is coming into line with a class of journals which serve the party in power as a certain class of courtiers served the reigning sovereign in England when it seemed uncertain whether the Stuarts or a new dynasty would obtain permanent occupancy of the throne.

The volume before us is the first of a series of six in which will be completed the Appleton edition of the works of Charles Dickens. As a specimen of publishing skill, judgment and taste, it is admirable, and should commend the edition to all who desire to enrich their libraries with the productions in suitable and lasting garb, of the most popular novelist, and the most gifted and accomplished humorist and caricaturist of the time.

THE GREAT IMPEACHMENT TRIAL OF ANDREW JOHNSON, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. Philadelphia: T. B. Peterson & Brothers, New Orleans, George Ellis, opposite the Post-office.

Mr. Ben Butler asked: "Do you know of any money contributed for political purposes?" "I do, sir; I helped to raise $30,000 not long ago for such a purpose." (The ears of the committee pricked up at once.) "You will state to the court what use was made of it." "It was used," replied Mr. Weed, "to enable the Republicans to carry the New Hampshire election."

GEN. BUCKNER'S ACCESSION TO THE LOUISVILLE COURIER.—We heartily congratulate our valued contemporary, the Louisville Courier, on the accession to its chief editorship of General S. B. Buckner. His personal announcement of the event appeared in that journal on the 1st inst., and is distinguished by characteristic grace of expression and modest manifest of sentiment.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE.—Nothing is more significant of a hopeful and fruitful vitality still remaining in the South, than the revival and maintenance of its chief seats of education and learning. And no examples of this kind may be cited which are more auspicious than those offered by the University of Virginia and Washington College.

NEW FOUND FRIENDS OF THE PRESIDENT. "Mack" writes from Washington as follows: "If proof were wanting of the adhesion to the party of the friends of the administration, it would be furnished by the list of callers at the White House since the verdict of acquittal was rendered."

THE CHINESE EMBASSY AT THE COOPER INSTITUTE. The following is an incident of the visit of the Chinese embassy to the Cooper Institute: "On the roof they took a lesson in the topography of Manhattan and Long Islands, and the Jersey shore. In the school of design for women, the girls looked sweetly upon him; they were curious, half-coquettish at the handsome young Chinese attaché of the embassy, and two or three of the most girlish and frolicsome of them sought an introduction to the fascinating Pong-yue, a handsome, well-dressed man of the party."

How to CURE A COUGH.—The moment a man is afflicted he has taken cold, let him do three things: First, eat nothing; second, go to bed, cover up in a warm room; third, drink as much cold water as he can; and in three cases out of four, he will be well in thirty-six hours.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

BRACHVOGEL. An historical novel. By A. E. Brachvogel, translated from the German by Therese J. Bradford. Complete in one volume. Illustrated by Gaston Fay. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1868. New Orleans: J. A. Gresham, 92 Camp street.

The continued issue in elegant style by the Appletons of German works of fiction on a ground-work of historical facts, indicates a growing demand for such productions on the part of the American reading public. Judging from the specimen before us, and from several of its predecessors, this fact, we take it, attests improvement of the popular taste in respect to literature of the fictitious order.

THE WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS. With illustrations by George Cruikshank, John Leech and H. K. Browne. Pickwick Papers, Barnaby Rudge, Sketches by Boz. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 1868. New Orleans: J. A. Gresham, 92 Camp street.

THE PURPOSE OF THIS NOVEL is to give in the story of the Count de Camors a panorama of Parisian life, with all its contrasts of light and shadow, its tragedy and airy gaiety. The qualifications of the author for such a task are of a high order. His "Poor Young Man," familiar to many American readers by a dramatic version of it in English, stamped him as a leader in a new school of French novelists—a school which treats the wilds of fiction in pursuit of some great moral, or perhaps political reform.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS, ETC.

Tilton accepts Grant. Elizabeth Cady Stanton walks into the Chicago platform with her sleeves rolled up and gloves off. The Herald recommends Chase and Dix to the Democracy.

An anti-tobacco club in Pennsylvania is discussing the "virtues of camomile flowers." H. G. is said to have experienced a change of hat.—[New York Mail.] Everywhere endeavor to be useful, and everywhere you will be at home.

The Herald doubts if Grant, in the event of his election, would not play the role of the sphinx of the Tuileries, as he have a policy of his own, but says his declaration to the contrary will do for electorizing purposes.

Mr. Ben Butler asked: "Do you know of any money contributed for political purposes?" "I do, sir; I helped to raise $30,000 not long ago for such a purpose." SOUTHERN ITEMS.

A libel suit has been instituted by Charles H. Hopkins, Jr., against the editor of the Savannah Republican. It is said that all the wheat in middle Alabama has been harvested. The yield was very good, but the quality is rather below the average.

The Alexandria Democrat of the 3d says: "Old Red, having reached within two feet of last year's height, has at last subsided, and on Sunday night commenced falling. This is good news to all, and, we think, fears of an overflow can now be banished."

The Montgomery Advertiser says: "I learned looking gentleman, who wears spectacles, and who was conspicuous at the radical meeting Saturday night, draws up regularly every day at the city soup house. He was elected by the 26th ward to a judgeship of one of the Montgomery beats, at the late so-called election. This 'soup drawing' is a material plank in the 'God and morality' platform."
