CITY TOPICS

New Orleans has not been for years so full of people as she is to-day. Walk on Canal street about noon, or wander about through those great arteries of trade, Camp, Magazine, Thiboutaux or New Levee streets, and mark the contrast there existing with the scene presented a few months since. See in the hotels how all is life and bustle. Go to the levee when the boats come in, or to the depots when the cars arrive, and see the swarms of visitors flocking ashore or out upon the platform, all intent upon getting into town as fast as possible; visit any of the theaters in the evening, or even content yourself with passing along St. Charles street when the bands are playing, and you will wonder where this immensely increased population has come from to stow itself away quietly into this wide-spread city. And scores of country freedmen, doubtless attracted by the assembling of the Legislature, are to be seen here and there about the streets, toting their carpet-bags or bundles, and carrying the inevitable hickory club. And the increase of crime and casualties of the presence of an augmented population. Within the past week three or four persons have been run over on the streets; and one who walks about town much cannot have failed to notice increased difficulties of rapid permeation. We take it that the non-resident population of New Orleans to-day numbers not less than fifty thousand souls.

There was quite a flutter at the Opera House last evening about the last thing which our readers would dream of. For the first time this season, and, for all we know, since the establishment of the Opera in New Orleans, the "young Douglas of the South," his excellency Governor H. C. Warmoth, graced the fashionable parquette of our temple of music and was the "cynosure of neighboring eyes." The audience was very slim.

Meek says of the Russian acrobat at the St. Charles, that he is only Pan-fau. Oh heaven!

Some butchers the other day presented a petition to the members of the body called the Legislature, which is rather coal. They ask that some law or ordinance be at once passed compelling the closing of what are known as private markets, alleging that the existence of these markets is detrimental to the interests of the city generally, and the city market butchers particularly. They have some justice in their petition, as they state that the keepers of the private markets, being saddled with no exorbitant rent, can under-rent them, and they claim that as they pay the city for the use of the stalls, the city should make such use of them as to them. There is, however, another side to the question. It is that of the citizens who from private markets can save a great deal of their market bills. As to the sanitary objections to the free markets, they could be obviated by placing such institutions under the supervision and control of a commissioner appointed for that purpose, whose duty it should be to see all municipal ordinances strictly enforced. We cannot, therefore, sympathize with the butchers, and hope that their petition will fall still-born amidst the mongrel crowd to which they presented it.

The bill of Rights now before the Legislature is a Bill of Frights. The hall of the House of Representatives is just now surprisingly like what the Academy of Music was a month ago. On the floor can be heard the purest negro oratory, varied sometimes by a horse-laugh when something occurs to tickle the Ethiopian fancy, while a glance up reveals a gallery as packed with darkies as was over the upper tier of the St. Charles Theater. To this complexion have we come at last.

Club life has, of late, been astonishingly on the increase. The thermal fondness of our people for social intercourse, joined with the laudable desire to foster the spirit of good fellowship and brotherhood engendered during the past years of adversity, have probably tended to produce this result. But, be the causes what they may, the community cannot but be the gainer from this concentration of refinement and gentility, as it will afford to those visiting our city a pleasant means of meeting their friends and open to them a new avenue to rational enjoyment.

We were induced to these reflections by a visit, yesterday, to the Texian Club, located at the corner of Camp and Common streets. This club, more than any other, perhaps, deserves commendation for the efforts of the genial gentlemen composing it to extend New Orleans influence by forming social ties with the citizens of the Lone Star State. The sejourner who finds himself the guest of the Texian Club will not soon forget their hospitality, and will not fail to carry away with him pleasant recollections of his stay in the Crescent City.

Under the auspices of Maj. Frank Bartlett, of the governing committee, we visited the spacious rooms of the club. The sitting room we found cozy, quiet and well arranged. There were files of papers, checker and chess boards, and all appliances for whiling away a pleasant hour. But the parlor was worthy of all praise. Glided furniture, chaste in design and neat in finish, highly polished, massive mirrors, an artistic chandelier and a fine rosewood piano formed the garniture of this elegant apartment. Conspicuous among the decorations of the room are the two paintings (mythological allegories) representing Night and Morning. These works of art are the gift of Mrs. Bartlett to the club.

The following is vouchered for as a fact: During the last session of the Legislature a certain individual had a certain bill he wished engineered through. He accordingly applied to a member of the House, a white carpet bagger, to "take care" of the bill, as the delicate phrase is, promising him $100 for so doing. The offer was accepted. But the legislator did not come up to time. One day passed, two days, three days, a week, and the required bill was not yet introduced. The individual went to the legislator, and, expressing his surprise at the delinquency, asked, in the language of Artemus, the immortal, "Why is this?" The legislator pleaded lack of time—he had been occupied with more important business, it would soon be all right. The individual was satisfied and went his way. But one day passed, two days, three days, a week, and still the bill had not been introduced. Again the individual sought the knight of the C. B. The same excuse as before was offered, when the individual beginning to suspect the reason of the neglect of his business, thus addressed the member from—well, we won't say what parish—“Look here I promised you $100 to get my bill through. Well, here's $25 in cash; I'll give you $25 when the bill passes the House, $25 when it passes the Senate, and $25 when the governor signs it.”

"Ah!" said the carpet bagger, "that looks like business. The bill shall go through." The several $25 were paid in due succession, and in less than a week the bill did go through. This reminds us of a complaint made by a certain member of the Legislature that, at the summer session he had agreed to give his vote on a measure for $50. The vote was given and the measure became a law, but the $50 was not forthcoming. Our legislator told the story, and added that he'd be d-d if he ever gave another vote except for cash.

The moral of the above two anecdotes is that cash must now be paid for all votes in the Legislature. There is now a bill before the Legislature which is of interest to capitalists and speculators in paper. It gives to the New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga Railroad, whose charter was granted last summer, the right to issue bonds to the amount of $12,500 in currency or 27,500 sterling for each mile of the road within the State, the bonds to be payable in not less than forty nor more than fifty years, with interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually at New York or at Liverpool; the bonds to be guaranteed by the State, which shall hold a lien upon that portion of the road within Louisiana and its appurtenances until the bonds are paid, principal and interest. The bill has been read once in the House and will probably come up again to-day.

The inquiring and meditative mind is filled with such suspicions as it contemplates its maternal cocktail, its meridian biters, its post-prandial powder, and its nocturnal night cap. It murmurs deprecatingly perhaps, perhaps vindictively, "I would that somewhere in the marble halls, Amid the remnants of unstarved drink, Or in the dry bar rooms I could meet with him, The Abominable, who unluckily came Into our unsuspecting drinking shops And cast this fustel-ol into our teeth. And had this change, that I might speak my mind, And tell him to his face how much I hate His presence hated both of gods and men."

Meaning probably the New York World's commissioner, who has set the whole drinking community against their liquor. Have we fustel-ol among us? is now the question of the day.

The House yesterday passed a bill appropriating $200,000 to pay the expenses of this session of the Legislature. Now there are 101 members of the House and 36 senators, 137 men, to be paid at the rate of $8 per day for sixty days. This amounts to $87,600. The little sum of $134,240 is therefore left with which to pay pages, porters, etc., and with which also to liquidate small bills for pens, such as the $900 one of the last session, stationery accounts, etc. We say it is left for that purpose, because the general appropriation bill covers the advertising and printing, and there are no other expenses. To persons who do not know the personnel of the Legislature this may seem a large amount to expend for pens and paper. To such we have a word to say. We shall say it in a whisper, so as persons abroad may not know exactly what kind of men now control the State. A vast quantity of pens and paper is used because quite a number of the members are now learning to write, and they use up countless pens and quires of paper daily in making pot hooks and straight marks. When this fact is known, not only surprise will vanish, but we are sure that no one will complain at the outlay. What if the one will complain at the outlay. What if the one will complain at the outlay. What if the one will complain at the outlay.

No one who has sympathized with the late unpleasantness, can have forgotten the lamented Father Turris. Neither can it be forgotten that this venerable prelate before being called among the elected, accomplished his cherished object of founding an asylum for the widows and orphans of the Confederate dead. We regret to say that this institution is in such a condition as to necessitate the aid of our charitable citizens. To meet the exigency the society of the "Children of Mary" have inaugurated—we were going to say a fair—but we are informed that although the entertainment will be conducted by ladies, it will consist simply of music and comedy for the inner man. The entertainment will commence this evening, at the lodge of the Perfect Union on Rampart street, between Main and St. Philip, right hand side going down town, and accessible by either the Dupuy street, Bayou Road and Orleans street railroads, which will land passengers at the very doors of the hall. From the arrangements which have been made, we can confidently say that those who will visit Perfect Union Hall will be fully compensated for their generosity by good fare, excellent music, and last but not least, by being waited upon by beautiful Creole ladies.

No numerous of late have been the robberies of watches and chains that the superintendent of police finds in his possession a list of over one hundred numbers by which to identify stolen timepieces. It would be a wholesome precaution in these times for every one to jot down some where the number which he finds on his watch-case. That little trifling act might prove the means of his recovery, if stolen.
