The German Emperor has shown the keen interest he takes in the promotion of the study of the Egyptian language for the publication of a dictionary of the Egyptian language, to comprise all words preserved in texts written in hieroglyphics, while references to Demotic and Coptic texts will be introduced as essential to the elucidation of words found in the hieroglyphics. This great undertaking is being carried out under the auspices of a committee appointed by the Royal Academy of Sciences at Berlin and three other leading learned societies. It is estimated that the work will be finished in about eleven years. The completion of the Administration of Antiquities in Egypt, of foreign museums and owners of collections of Egyptian antiquities all the proposed work could only be very imperfect, is being sought, and in most cases, is being granted. This assistance is especially requested in the form of copies, squeezes and photographs of texts, inscriptions or other objects of Egyptian antiquity, the whereabouts of which are unknown. Communications of this nature will be regarded by the committee as confidential, and would be made use of only for the purpose of the dictionary.—London News.

"Would Have Paid $100.00 Per Box," Says He. For what—why Morrow's Kid-ne-oids. They are only 50 cents a box and not by a cent at every first class drug store. There is no doubt but what they are worth it—but can the public afford to pay 17¢. William Nobleman is a well known grocerman of Topeka, 116 Kansas avenue, says this: "I have suffered with a great deal of pain in my back in the region of the kidneys; pain was unmitigated; nervousness; and a general 'all broke up' mentally and physically condition. I lost much time from business, and at one time was confined to the bed for two weeks on account of my disease. My trouble commenced about two years ago and kept getting worse and worse all the time. I read of the remarkable cures Morrow's Kid-ne-oids were performing so I got a box at the Swift & Hilday Drug Co. Four doses gave me relief and one box had completely cured me. If the price of Morrow's Kid-ne-oids were $100.00 per box, knowing what I now know I would have paid it."

Say more if you can. Kid-ne-oids always cures. Druggists 50 cents. Manufactured by John Morrow & Co., Chemists, Springfield, Ohio.

RICH IN GOLD. Stockholder of the Isabella Mine Talks of It. Is Amazingly Stocked With Precious Metals OF A HIGH GRADE. Net Profit of Two Cars of Ore Was $88,629. Earning $100,000 a Month and $2,000,000 in Sight.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Ralph C. Otis of this city was one of the fortunate investors in stock of the Isabella mine shortly before the great find of gold was made last December. Mr. Otis has returned from Cripple Creek, in the neighborhood of which he has spent several weeks, and reports that the Isabella mine is fully as rich as it has been reported.

The Isabella properties, according to Mr. Otis' account, cover 143 acres, and are in the northern part of the Cripple Creek district, about a mile away from Stratton's Independence mine. They include sixteen or more claims. The richest were in a shaft in the Buena Vista claim, from which the first dividends were paid. After the ore chute here gave out a number of other shafts were sunk, and low grade ore giving small profits is still being taken from as many as twenty different shafts.

The next step was to run cross tunnels from other levels toward this same vein. This was done from the fifth and from the seventh levels, and work on a cross tunnel from a still lower level, the tenth, is now under way.

The figures which Mr. Otis gives of the quality of the ore at the different levels are as follows: On the ninth level 800 feet below the surface the ore deposit was 400 feet long and about 100 feet wide. The richest part of it was about 150 feet long and one-half foot wide. The general run of the deposit was worth about $100 a ton, the richest level assays 40 to 50 ounces, indicating that the deposit contained rich ore.

On the seventh level the vein was about six feet wide. From 12 to 18 inches of it assayed ten ounces of gold to the ton ($200), and the rest assayed three and one-half to four ounces. On the sixth level assays ran from 10 to 20 ounces, indicating that the deposit contained rich ore.

Speaking of the mine Mr. Otis said: "I consider the estimate of the gold in sight to be $2,000,000. It is worth from $100,000 to $200,000 a ton, but of course, as the ore is taken out, it is sold at a profit. The ore on the tenth level is as rich as those higher up, and will be as much as 10 to 15 ounces to the ton. The ore on the eighth level is also rich, and is being taken out as fast as it is so soft that picking is all that is needed. The ore on the seventh level is reddish yellow color, and for the most part is oxidized, despite its depth. The facts are, in short, that the mine has been declared a quarterly dividend for February of 5 per cent."

MURDERED WHILE ASLEEP Victim's Wife Awakes in Time to See Two Shots Fired. Chicago, Feb. 20.—While asleep in his home, 823 North Clark street, John Sundstrom, a shoemaker, was shot and killed by Andrew Nelson, a boarder at the house. Nelson, who is a cousin of Sundstrom's wife, entered and fired three shots into Sundstrom, killing him instantly. Mrs. Sundstrom awoke in time to see the last two shots fired at her husband. After killing Sundstrom, Nelson danced about the room shouting like a maniac. He was finally overpowered by persons attracted by the shooting and taken to the police station. Jealousy is said to have prompted the crime.

A PROPOSAL BY PROXY. [From the Boston Post.] My brother's trouble was summed up in these lines: I swear I adore her each morning I rise, Yet when I'm before her all my eloquence flies.

"All this he confessed to me, his sister. To think of Jack being so in love with a girl was simply rich, and I could not help giving vent to my mirth. Jack, however, could see nothing funny in loving a girl, and being completely tongue-tied in her presence, and left my room, slamming the door behind him in no gentle fashion. Later I went to my brother's room to put away his laundry. I patted admiringly his clean 'ducks.' I always wanted to be a man, but never so strongly as when I saw my brother in all the glory of white duck. A temptation came over me to put them on, and a few moments later found me transformed into a stammering glass man. We were strikingly alike, my brother and I. In fact, when he borrowed my bachelors' suit for his part as a 'new woman' in a play, everyone thought it was I until he undeceived them by attempting to put his hands in his pockets in a truly masculine style.

A brilliant thought, my brother had gone to the city, and would not return until midnight. Why not go and propose for Jack? I would whistle for Marjorie and wait until she came to the door until she stole from under the eye of her father, who did not approve of Jack. I then proposed in the most lovable manner. The difficulty lay in the prospect of being unceremoniously ejected by Marjorie's father. I now really appreciated the difficulties of a man forced to court surreptitiously.

Love of adventure spurred me on, however, and, casting a last admiring glance at the white glass man, I went downstairs. I was much encouraged when auntie called to me: "Why, Jack, it was only a few minutes ago that you were in town." Everything went beautifully. I whistled their private whistle, and was soon rewarded by the appearance of the lady, for the time being, my heart's desire. I have always thought what a perfect proposal I would make were I a man, and I think I did. I led up to it in the most approved manner, and at the proper place drew her hand tenderly to my hands and kissed her hair, her hands, her lips.

She remarked that she had never noticed how much alike my sister's voice and mine were, but was evidently unsuspecting. I own I felt a little guilty; she was so loving, so glad that I loved her, it was so sweet. I was enjoying my novel experience quite as much as Jack could possibly have done, and time flew rapidly as I made plans for our future. I have often wondered how Jack—but that's another matter.

We were suddenly brought to earth by a woman's feet, which I saw in the direction of a hedge. She begged me to fly, and I needed little urging. Jokes concerning the popular methods used by fathers to get their children out of the house, passed through my mind, and the "dash" was "weak" enough to tremble as I pressed her to my heart in a last fond farewell. When I reached home a light was burning in my brother's room. Had Jack returned? Running hastily to my room, I let down my hair, slipped into a dressing gown, and surveyed ruefully the once resplendent "ducks." Why hadn't I remembered that Jack always carried a hush-dust brush with him, and that even a proposal would not make him so far forget himself as to lean against a tree. However, the ducks were done.

I went to Jack's room and peeked in. He was lying face down on the bed. "Is that you, Sis?" he called. "I was thoroughly frightened." "Jack," I cried, "what is it?" "After a few minutes he said: 'I told you about Marjorie. Well, it was a dream. I came out on the nine, and I have been intending just to sit under the old apple tree where we always meet. I reached the hedge and saw her with her head on some lucky fellow's shoulder. Of course, she's not to blame, and I am not worthy of her, but—oh, Sis, couldn't you have helped me?' I drew a deep breath and waded into my confession, not pausing until even the ruined clothes had been owned up to. I think he thought I was crazy; for my mind was so open-mouthed, that when I had finished his sole comment was: 'Well, I'll be darned!'"

"I can't say he was pleased, but my dejection touched him, and he refrained from any harsh remarks. He took 'the goods the gods provided,' and 'they lived happily ever after.' It was a most interesting and the nicest proposal a girl ever had was the one under the old apple tree. KIPLING ASKED QUESTIONS [From the Washington Post.] "One bright morning a few autumns ago," said a young officer of the artillery, "I was on duty at the arsenal, and was strolling along the river walk at the arsenal—I was attached to one of the heavy batteries there and was of the opinion that I was a very important man. I was walking down the walk I saw a man sitting on the ground, idly dangling his legs over the Potomac. He was taking a sun bath all by himself, and he looked perfectly contented with his own lot. As I approached him I saw the crunching of the gravel under my boots, and he turned and looked at me with some interest. He was a plain looking man, of about thirty years of age, that had a stubby mustache, much bitten, a very square jaw and strong chin, and he wore gold-rimmed spectacles. "Morning, left man," he said pleasantly enough, and by his way of handling my military title I knew he was from the other side. "Morning," replied "Brilliant weather, isn't it?" "He rose from his sitting posture on the coping, brushed off his trousers and looked down the river. "Fine old stream this, eh?" he said. "Teems with story and legend, too, I've heard—first of the Indians, afterward of the Johnny Rebs and the Yanks, eh? Yellowish water, Reminds me—it's like what you'd fancy the Ganges to be in color."

Some Women Doubt Many women think the bearing of children is a necessary period of great pain and distress. They doubt whether any medicine can relieve their sufferings. Well may they hesitate about taking those injurious internal mixtures so widely sold. But they may place implicit faith in the following Mother's Friend which is a softening, relaxing and soothing liniment for external use. Doubling women should get a bottle at the drug store for $1, and test it. There is no possibility of its doing harm, and there is every likelihood of its saving them many hours of pain. THEY ARE FIGURES. They Show That Topeka is Paying Too Much For Water. Municipal Ownership the Only Panacea For the Trouble. POSITION OF MR. DREW His Stand Admits of No Possible Question. He is a Man Who Has Been Thoroughly Tried.

The people of Topeka are now having good cause to think about the water question. Those who have used water know in an indefinite sort of way that they have been paying for the water company, but there are few who have taken the trouble to study the question and make a comparison of figures to see what is the condition that prevails in other cities.

The voters of Topeka know that next Saturday's primary election will be a test of the strength of the water company. Every friend of the water company is arrayed on one side of the fight. Every enemy is being used and political jobbery of the worst kind is being resorted to. Stories that are being circulated among the voters to prejudice them against the candidate who has made a record in the city council opinion in favor of the interests of the people as against the grasping power of a New Jersey corporation.

Colonel James Drew stands like a wall of adamant against all these attacks. He has been a citizen of Topeka for thirty years and he has been tried in the crucible of public opinion. The water company expects no quarter from him. The story of the wrongs that Topeka has suffered at the hands of the water company is a long one. When the question of voting bonds for a new water plant to be owned by the city came up the Commercial club took up the matter and the committee was appointed to make a thorough investigation. That research developed the fact that Topeka is paying for its water much more than any other city which has had the temerity to call itself "The Topeka Water company."

The report of the committee resulted in a unanimous endorsement of the waterworks bond proposition by the Commercial club. The document was an interesting one and was carefully read by the members of the city council. One of the oldest citizens of Topeka, figures were collected showing a comparison of the water tolls in Topeka with cities which own their own water plants and the following figures are taken from the report of the committee:

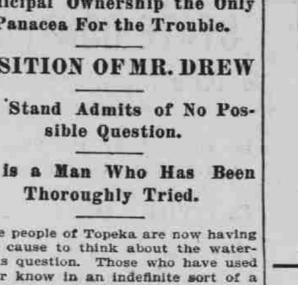

Table with 3 columns: City, Population, Total Cost. Topeka, Kan., 44,000, 15.50. Manchester, N. H., 44,000, 12.50. Brockton, Mass., 37,000, 12.50. Holyoke, Mass., 27,000, 9.00. New Bedford, Mass., 41,000, 11.75. Salem, Mass., 21,000, 12.00. Springfield, Mass., 44,000, 17.00. Birmingham, N. Y., 35,000, 14.00. Springfield, O., 32,000, 16.00. Youngstown, O., 33,000, 15.00. Dayton, Ind., 30,000, 12.00. Hockford, Ill., 23,000, 12.50. Springfield, Wis., 25,000, 12.00. Winona, Minn., 18,000, 12.50. Lincoln, Neb., 15,000, 13.00. Emporia, Kan., 8,000, 8.50. The figures are on the basis of a family occupying a house of from five to eight rooms which include modern conveniences, a horse and carriage and two or three milk cows.

It does not take a great deal of discrimination to see that Topeka people should have some relief and they should expect it from the people who have always upheld the cause of the water company and fought its battles in the courts. The committee included in its report the following extract from the American Waterworks Manual: "Of the 3,196 complete works in the United States, 1,660 are municipally owned by municipalities, which they supply, and 1,489 by private companies. One of the most significant things regarding ownership is the fact that the tendency to public control in the larger cities. Of the 50 largest cities in the United States, only nine are now dependent upon private ownership. About 100 cities and villages have changed from private to public ownership, and only one-tenth of the number from public to private. Massachusetts takes the lead of the states in changes from private to public ownership. Thirty companies located in different cities, have made public ownership generally through purchase."

These things show that municipal ownership of waterworks systems is recognized everywhere as desirable. A plan of allowing a corporation to control the supply to the people of one of the essential elements of physical security, especially those which are owned by municipalities, which they supply, and 1,489 by private companies. One of the most significant things regarding ownership is the fact that the tendency to public control in the larger cities. Of the 50 largest cities in the United States, only nine are now dependent upon private ownership. About 100 cities and villages have changed from private to public ownership, and only one-tenth of the number from public to private. Massachusetts takes the lead of the states in changes from private to public ownership. Thirty companies located in different cities, have made public ownership generally through purchase."

GOULD AS A COLONEL. He Will Be Urged to Head the Seventh New Jersey. Y. Bamford, who has placed his resignation to accept the colonelcy of the Seventh regiment of the New Jersey national guard, to succeed Colonel Charles Y. Bamford, who has placed his resignation in the hands of Adjutant General Strydom, it is probable that Colonel Bamford will be retired with the rank of brigadier general. The acceptance of the resignation of General Pieme as commander will be followed by a reorganization of the New Jersey National Guard. Seward, commander of the Second brigade, will be promoted to general and his resignation will be effected under his resignation. There is general among the officers to have Mr. Gould accept the colonelcy of the Seventh regiment, and no effort was made to induce him to become Colonel Bamford's successor.

SPREWALD HAIR MARKET [From the New York Herald.] In the lower German Spreewald there is a famous market for women's hair, supplied almost entirely by peasants. The average age between the ages of 12 and 13. The industry is carried on chiefly by old women, who secure orders from wealthy patrons, and, with a sample of the sort desired, set out among the Spreewald peasants and tempt the girls, or rather their parents, to give them what they seek. The selection of girls of the age mentioned is that they are young enough to have perhaps a second or even a third crop of hair to reward other journeys into the region. The sum usually paid for a "crop" ranges from $4.50 to $7.50, according to color, thickness and length. There is an understanding among the women in the nature of a "trust" to keep down prices among the peasants as much as possible. These women go to a town or village and stop at the chief tavern, whence the news of their arrival quickly spreads among the girls of the age mentioned in the care of mothers or other relatives. Brides are the easiest victims, for the sum received is a very material aid in the establishment of the steamships Werra and Fulda and as soon as those boats have been refitted they will be run from the Pacific coast to Alaska. Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Miller's Glycerine. For sale only by Crosby Bros., sole agents for the famous Reymier and P. & L. kid gloves, all the desirable shades. Gloves fitted and warranted.
