A good crowd of holiday visitors came trooping into Topeka Wednesday night, to forgothar at the family board on Thursday. Not a few of the homecomers were the teachers in the rural and small town schools.

Miss Corinne Ripley, one of the young Topeka teachers.

The school teaching profession is recognized as one that carries with it a fair share of honors, and it will be remembered that it was the first profession (outside of housekeeping) to which women were admitted.

But I digress. I started to tell about one of the young teachers who is home for the holidays, Miss Corinne Ripley, of 1506 Topeka avenue. This is her first year of teaching, for she was only out of college a short time ago.

She graduated from the Topeka high school, and then entered Washburn. She took the liberal arts course, majoring in English. During her college course she was a popular member of the Beta sorority. The vital interest that some of her friends took in their work as teachers decided her to join the ever-growing procession of chief-dependent women.

She is now teaching in the high school at Silver Lake, and has classes in English, psychology, botany, and sewing. It is sometimes puzzling to see how parents can turn their children over to these young girls for their school training, but those same young girls are making good, and they have a much greater depth than they are usually credited with having.

Except for the Anna Case concert next Monday night, the S. R.'s date book for next week has a "lean and hungry look." It looks as though the gadding for the coming week would be chiefly confined to church bazaars.

And that really is not such a dull prospect after all. The fairs are centrally located down town usually; they are easy to reach in the course of the day's shopping, and there you find a lot of people whom you know, talking mostly about things you want to hear, and you get no end of suggestions about gifts, so while you are always feel a draught in your pockets at those places, and you are likely to go away feeling poorer than the far-famed mendicant in the organ loft, you are pretty well recompensed. The women who conduct the bazaars know their business, let me tell you. The food they sell to you is good, and home prepared by some of the best cooks in town, and the fancy work is hand done, usually on durable material, and you would be well charged for it in any shop.

This is the S. R.'s advance notice that, except for aid society fairs, the week to come is to be as lacking in affairs of general social interest as the week of Thanksgiving just closing.

A Pine Whooping Cough Remedy. Mothers, Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey is just the remedy for your children's cold ailments. The fact is that pine is a quick enemy of cold conditions. Its qualities loosen the mucous in the throat, soothe the lungs and open up the air passages. The combination of honey, soothing and pleasant, with the loosening pine quality makes this an ideal cough remedy for children. Each passing year brings for it new friends. A family of growing children cannot afford to be without it. See a bottle—Adv.
