IN NORTH TOPEKA

Church Women Will Have a Booth at the Fair.

Train Leaves Passenger Waiting on Station Platform.

The ladies of the Christian church plan to have an eating booth at the state fair. They have already made arrangements for their tent space. They plan to have a cafeteria that will seat perhaps fifty persons. Last year they accommodated thirty at a time. The ladies' union of the church conducts the booth and in past years it has always scored a success financially.

The ladies of the Baptist church intended to conduct a similar establishment, but because of the excessive heat and the fact that several of the most active workers are not well, and still others are away, they have abandoned the plan. Instead they have agreed that during the month of August they will have a booth at the fair.

The money will go toward the fund that the Ladies' Aid society raises every year and will go for church purposes.

His Train Left Him.

Five minutes after the eastbound Union Pacific train pulled out this morning, a sad young man might have been seen supporting his falling strength against one of the iron posts about the station platform. The man, an anchovy one seeking consolation, confided his troubles to the officer on the beat who bent his attentive ear on his tale of woe. It was brief and to the point. The fresh morning air had stimulated in a healthy appetite a craving for an extra cream. When the train drew up at the station the hungry one alighted and sought a drug store. The joys of the soda distracted his attention from the passage of time and when he emerged from the store the train had departed. "The darned old thing went right off and took my suit case with it," murmured the said one and he sighed.

IN PINK TIGHTS, BUT DOMESTIC

When a woman can roast a chicken in a chafing dish, serve a square meal upon a suit case laid in the middle of her sleeping car berth and keep her temper, she can safely be set down as domestic. When she can do a couple of turns every day on the flying trapeze or on a bare-backed horse, make all her circus costumes, darn her husband's socks and take care of a baby or two, she is entitled to the blue ribbon for housewifelyness.

Yet the women of the Barnum & Bailey circus, appearing here Wednesday, claim no credit for doing these things. Domestic life under difficulties is so common among them that it is taken for granted.

Fifty girls were exchanging their neat walking suits for pink tights and spangles when a visitor entered the circus dressing room in a not distant city the other day.

Eugenie Siblon, aerialist, sat before a mirrored trunk heading her eyes. In front of another, Ella Iradna, equestrienne, was sewing a pink satin slipper, soles, heels, soles and baby's booties. "For I must feel the horse's back through it, you know," she said.

"Now tell me," the visitor began, "how do you manage to be domestic living in a Pullman sleeper and under a tent?"
