

with "When Johnny comes marching home," etc., until our officers ordered a quietus on that part of the program, as the singing might give our movements away to our friends across the river, with whom we had made coffee for newspapers in the middle of the Bay-Penninsula the day before.

And thus we entered on the campaign that proved to be the turning-point of the great rebellion.

The following evening, June 14, found us near the Orange & Alexandria Railroad, at Catlett's. Following the line of the railroad, we arrived at Manassas Junction on the 16th, where we remained in line of battle, facing toward the old battlefield of first Bull Run and Manassas Gap and Warrenton.

On the 17th, we moved on to the camp of the celebrated "Quaker-guns" of the Confederates of 1861 near Gen. Beauregard.

At 4 a. m. of the 19th, after a hurried breakfast of "hardtack" and coffee, we took up the line of march in the direction of Camp Springs, near Goose Creek.

On the 20th we arrived at Leesburg, in the direction of the rebel camp. We turned a little to the south we crossed the Potomac at Edward's Ferry, and camped that night.

On the 21st we moved on to the camp of the Union forces at Bull's Bluff. Turning a little to the south we crossed the Potomac at Edward's Ferry, and camped that night.

PLEASANT SMILE AND BRIGHT EYES of the giver which had such an exhilarating effect. The old grandfather sat near, somewhat decrepit; but with a strange light in his eyes and the tears trickling down his wrinkled cheeks he shouted encouragement to the soldiers as they marched past the place, regretting that he was not young enough to go with them.

It was an inspiring scene, and I have often wondered what it would have been like had I been there. I have often wondered what it would have been like had I been there.

RESTING IN THE "DEVIL'S DEN." Our column emerged from the cover of the timber at the foot of the hill, and pressed on over the open ground about the run, across which we rushed through a storm of leaden hail.

Our right Caldwell's Division, of the Second Corps, supported by Switzer's Brigade, had advanced somewhat at an angle to our line, their right being as far as we could see almost in our left flank.

fortly still, with the awful roar of battle all around me. I soon realized that the rebels were slowly creeping up on us from the rear, and that the line was very close to the rear.

Without a scratch. About dusk I started to find my regiment. A "back" fire officer told me that the Regulars had been withdrawn and placed in reserve as a support to the troops now at the front.

GARFIELD AT SCHOOL. From "School-days of the President." James A. Garfield was six to school when six years of age. He soon showed that he had a good memory, and great powers of observation, learning a great deal from over-hearing the recitations of the other boys in his class.

Autumn leaves with you work for the winter. Pearlina leaves you little work in washing and cleaning. It leaves your hands in perfect condition after washing your clothes; it leaves your clothes clean without being torn and twisted; it is harmless, efficient, economical. The best thing for all housework is Pearlina: the best thing for you is—try it.
