school architecture. Beside the two large study halls for the Junior and Senior Departments respectively, there are four smaller class rooms, a chemical and physical laboratory, a refectory, where hot lunch is served each day, and a carefully selected library, to which the pupils have access at all times and which they are encouraged to use regularly.

The Residence, to which only twelve boarding pupils are admitted, is supplied with steam heat, electric light and modern sanitary plumbing. It is furnished throughout in the most thorough and substantial manner. The table is that of a private home rather than that of a boarding house. The pupils are treated as a part of the household, presided over by the House Master and his wife, who, with the Assistant House Master, do all in their power to make the daily life in the Residence that of a cultured home.

Special attention is paid to the health and physical development of the boys. The Medical Director, a practicing physician of Washington, gives each boy a thorough examination at the beginning of the year, and delivers a series of lectures, each term, on diet, exercise, accidents and similar subjects. The Physical Director, a former Varsity Captain and a graduate in Physical Culture, coaches the teams, takes the boys on cross-country runs and bicycle trips, and has general charge of the School's athletics. Each boy, at the time of en-are contented and happy; their physical well-being is considered of primary importance; every facility is offered, under the guidance of a trained Physical Director, for indoor gymnastics and outdoor athletics; the individual, not the class, is the unit; thorough instruction is given by a large corps of able specialists; each boy, unhampered by petty rules, is expected to be a gentleman and is treated as one; and the instruction interests the pupil, stimulates him to scholarly effort, and affords thorough mental discipline.

The School is endorsed by the ablest educators of the country and supported by many of the leading men of Washington; it possesses all the health-giving advantages of a country location—fresh air, bright sunshine and ample athletic grounds, and yet is within twenty minutes' ride of the residence section of the city; it surrounds its boarding pupils with the comforts and the refining influences of a cultured home, and it is able to afford, through its large faculty, all the advantages of private instruction together with the stimulus of class room competition. In brief, it is a modern school, planned along modern lines, equipped with every facility for thorough and comprehensive teaching, and embodying the latest and most progressive educational ideas.

A MODEL DAIRY.

One of the most extensive dairymen in the District of Columbia is Mr. E. Endres, who resides in a handsome rural home within sight of the village of Tenleytown. Mr. Endres, like all

A POPULAR SECRETARY.

Few men have labored more zealously in a good cause than Dr. John W. Chappell, who has been the secretary of the Citizens' Northwest Suburban Association from the hour of its formation, and to him the organization is largely indebted for the success it has achieved. Dr. Chappell is a well-known member of the medical fraternity of the District, and an extensive practice attests his popularity in the Tenleytown section. He was graduated in 1881 from the Columbian Medical College of this city, and shortly afterward entered the field of practical experience in the pursuit of his profession. He is one of the oldest members of the Citizens' Northwest Association, and has been a faithful worker for the advancement of the interests of the section which it represents. He is at present chairman of the Committee on Public Health of the Medical Society of this city and vice-president of the Medical Association of the District of Columbia.

A Prominent Clerical Gentleman.

It is not often that an organization formed for business purposes has on its list of members the names of so large a number of ministers of the Gospel as are taking an active part in the affairs of the northwest association. Prominent among the clerical gentlemen who are lending their influence to the promotion of suburban growth, is the Rev. J. MacBride Sterrett, Assistant pastor of Epiphany Episcopal Church and professor of philosophy in Columbia University. Dr. Sterrett is the owner of a handsome home on the Pierce Mill road. It is known as "Springland," and is a place of exceeding beauty from any point of view. Dr. Sterrett is fifth vice-president of the Citizens' Northwest Association, and, notwithstanding his numerous pastoral and professional duties, finds time to attend its meetings and otherwise aid it in the prosecution of its plans for the improvement of the territory within its large jurisdiction. He is the owner of considerable property in the northwest district, and is evidently a firm believer in the wisdom of the Solomonian admonition which advises us that "in multitude of counsellors there is safety." His genial manner toward all with whom he is thrown in contact, regardless of their station in life, has endeared him to the people. In a very practical way he exemplifies the proverb that "a merry heart doeth good like a medicine."

A NATIONAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Among the numerous architectural attractions of the northwest section of the District, none is more admired by visitors than the National Cathedral School for Girls, which stands at the corner of Tenleytown and Woodley roads, on the summit of Mount St. Alban. This handsome structure, the gift of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, was erected at a cost of $200,000. The material used in its construction is Indiana limestone, and the style is that of the Italian Renaissance. Provision has been made for the accommodation of one hundred boarding pupils and the same number of day pupils. The building is fire-proof throughout and is provided with every modern convenience. The fan-blast system is employed in heating and ventilating the cathedral school and the sanitary arrangements are as nearly perfect as they can be.

The institution was opened on October 1, 1900, under the direction of Miss Lois Adelaide Bangs and Miss Mary Bartlett Whiton, A. B., ladies already distinguished in the field of educational work among girls. The course of study embraces English, Latin, Greek, French, German, History and Geography, Mathematics, Science and Sacred Studies. The "supreme importance of English for English-speaking people" is a feature of the work of this institution which is impressed upon the minds of pupils. Every lesson, it is explained by the principals, is made "a part of the pupil's training in English, and her standing in any subject depends in part on her clear and correct English in recitation." The primary department of the school, admirably adapted to the requirements of little folks, receives the same care and attention that are given to the advanced grades.

Many distinguished names appear in the list of gentlemen who compose the Board of Directors. Among them is that of the Right Rev. Henry W. Satterlee, who is president of the body. The Hon. George F. Edmunds, formerly United States Senator from Vermont; General John M. Wilson, LL.D., of the United States Army, and Admiral Dewey are also members of the board.

A RISING YOUNG ATTORNEY

Among the young men of the city who have won distinction at the District bar none is held in higher esteem by his legal associates than Attorney A. E. Shoemaker, whose offices are in the Columbian Building on Fifth street. Mr. Shoemaker made his appearance at the bar in 1893, and at once entered upon the practice of his profession. Coming to Washington at an early age from Montgomery county, where he was born, he passed through the various branches of the public schools of the city, graduating from the high school some time prior to 1888, in which year he won his first diploma as a graduate of the university department of Georgetown College. He is the attorney of the Anti-Saloon League, and for some time has been an active worker in the Order of Good Templars and has twice filled the chair of Grand Chief Templar of the District of Columbia. He is now the sitting Past Grand Chief Templar, and in addition to filling that office holds a commission as a deputy of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge of the World. He is a member of the Citizens' Northwest Suburban Association, and has done much to promote the interests it represents.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

Delivered by President Louis P. Shoemaker, of the Brightwood Citizens Association, in introducing President H. B. F. Macfarland of the Board of Commissioners.

Mr. President of the Board of Commissioners:

The Brightwood Citizens Association welcomes you this evening as a guest, not only because of our appreciation of the public service already rendered by you, but because we feel that you are interested in the general welfare of the people, and desire to be brought personally in contact with them and their necessities.

We further feel that your presence indicates your approval of our organization and the efforts we are making to assist you and your associates in the arduous duties our Commissioners are called upon to perform.

Your presence is also an encouragement of the policy which has been for some time in force by this association to bring our members and the purposes of our organization in touch with prominent officials and citizens of the District, so that they may understand not only the local needs and necessities in behalf of our territory, but the general public improvements we have advanced and shall continue to advance in behalf of the entire District; believing as we do, that any appropriation of money to be expended in the District and every public improvement established although general in character becomes to a very great extent a local benefit.

It has been and I hope it will continue to be the effort of this association to broaden its influence and to not only support but inaugurate measures of a general character involving the welfare of the entire District. This policy is illustrated by the numerous resolutions which have been favorably considered and adopted by this organization within the last two years.

We have advocated the improvement of Rock Creek Park which is located in our section of the District and we have set forth in the most formidable way possible, the importance and actual necessity which exists and has so long existed for the extension of Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets, not alone in our interests and for the benefit of our section, but for the benefit of the old city of Washington so that the Capital of the Nation can go on in its ordinary development.

It has for many years been circumscribed by reason of inadequate street facilities to secure the ordinary improvement of approximate territory. We have also given our support to efforts which have been made by others and we have gone far enough to advance the dredging of the eastern branch and the reclamation of land adjacent thereto as a sanitary necessity; the importance of the construction of the "Memorial Bridge" or suitable bridges over the Potomac River and Rock Creek; the construction of a municipal building, and the establishment of adequate sewer facilities east as well as west of Rock Creek, which are absolutely necessary to enable our people to build and reside in those in the new Washington and beyond the old city limits.

We cannot refrain, Mr. President, from expressing to you our high appreciation of the efforts you have personally made to secure from Congress the amount necessary to gratify some of the actual needs of this community, and as these efforts have been crowned with signal success, although perhaps not equal to your expectations and desires, we tender to you our sincere thanks.

You will not feel, Mr. President, that you have been invited here to enable us to catalogue you. I have too much respect for the dignity of your office and my admiration of your virility is too great to justify me making such an effort. I am privileged, however, and it will not be considered an act of supererogation on my part to allude to facts.

You have had the ability, strength of character and courage of your convictions with reference to our affairs, enabling you to go before the Committees of Congress and otherwise to make known to the public the actual needs of this community, thus securing to a great extent relief for the taxpayers. If you can accomplish this in so short a time you can imagine what we expect from you during future years of efficient service.

PERSONAL.

Prof. Court F. Wood, the popular principal of Wood's Commercial College, who is a member of Naval Lodge, No. 4, and of Washington Chapter, No. 6, was made a knight templar in De Molay Mounted Commandery on March 28, and expects to attend the annual conclave with the other six knights this summer.

RECITATION HALL, WASHINGTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

trance, is given a careful physical examination, and a special set of exercises is recommended for him. The School is equipped with a gymnasium and a complete athletic field, with tennis and hand-ball courts, a foot ball and base ball field, and a standard quarter-mile track. Immediately adjacent to the Recitation Hall are the private Golf Links of the School, a fine nine-hole course. Thus there is every opportunity for that active exercise which not only provides for the boy's enjoyment, but develops his vigor and health.

The Washington School has no fixed curriculum, no grades, no "forms"; each boy follows that course of study best adapted to his individual needs. He can pursue the standard subjects, or, if his parents prefer, can study others not required for admission to college, such as civics, geology, or colonial history. If at entrance a boy is "backward" in one study, he will not be retarded in others, nor will he, later in his course, be compelled to review the work of an entire year merely because he has failed to "pass" in one subject. On the other hand, if he has special talents, his work may be mapped out so as to secure their fullest development. In a word, the course is fitted to the leading citizens of the section, is a member of the association and is always interested in any movement having for its object local improvements. As a dairyman he is deservedly popular. Every year he pays a visit to the most prosperous dairy sections of the Shenandoah Valley, where he makes purchases of a number of the finest cattle money can procure. These animals take the places of those at home that he thinks should be disposed of. In this way Mr. Enders supplies his numerous customers in the city with the best and purest milk. A visit to his place will reward any one who feels an interest in viewing a well-kept dairy establishment. It is a model of neatness and good order.

JOHN E. MORROW.

It has been nearly thirty years since Mr. John E. Morrow began business as a blacksmith and wheelwright in the District. The shop he opened was a small one, but it returned Mr. Morrow a reasonably fair measure of compensation for his labor, and he was satisfied. In the course of a short time, however, to the boy, not the boy to the course. The teaching force of the School consists of nine thoroughly competent teachers, drawn from the best colleges of the country. The Head Master, a Harvard graduate, has taught at Harvard and also in public and private schools, and has studied the educational problems presented both by the schools of this country and by those of Europe. The broad school policy which he is thus able to lay out combines the result of practical experience with that of the highest educational thought.

The other members of the School Faculty are also experienced teachers and each is a specialist in his particular line of work. The fact that these men have been trained in several different colleges and have had practical experience in various institutions adds to the broad and cosmopolitan character of the School.

In the Washington School the boys

the little establishment began to attract attention throughout the neighborhood. People learned that Mr. Morrow turned out only first-class work and patrons flocked to him by the score. As the years have sped by the number has steadily increased and has often exceeded the capacity of the establishment, which, of course, has kept pace with the march of improvement. In addition to the high regard entertained for him on account of his scrupulous methods in his business relations with the people, he is known as one of the most enterprising citizens in the section in which he lives. As a member of the Citizens' Northwest Suburban Association he has earnestly advocated and practically aided to the extent of his ability every plan proposed for the advancement of that enchanting quarter of the District. His place of business, as every one knows, is on the Broad Branch road.
