MANAGER.

Discussing the statement that his motive in so disposing of his property was to avoid its possible confiscation, he ridiculed such an assumption. He had no fear of such an emergency arising, he said. Although the people who at present controlled that country were desperate enough to do almost anything to injure him, his property was beyond their reach.

But it was when he spoke of the assertion that he was out of the politics and would remain in San Francisco henceforth that Mr. Spreckels grew particularly vehement in his expressions.

"Out of politics?" said he. "Not much! I will leave here the 9th of next month, but where I am going don't matter. My time will come," he concluded, and there was an intensity of feeling in his manner of expression that boded ill for the men who he says have sought to murder him.

"The biggest liars on earth," Mr. Spreckels said, "are now residents of Honolulu and vicinity. If you were with them and of them you could cut a man's throat and they would go into court and swear you didn't do it."

The Star and Advertiser, he furthermore intimated, were usually published concurrent with the sailing of vessels for the United States. In these issues inflammatory articles were given prominent place and statements of uprisings and insurrections discussed that existed only in the broad-gauge imagination of the writers.

"These reports are sent out to excite alarm in this country and cause our people to think that some action on the part of this Government is absolutely necessary. The royalists constitute fully three-fourth of the voters in Hawaii, and these annexationists know that if the people are ever given an opportunity to express their free will the present Government would not last a day.

"I know the best course this Government could pursue would be to establish a Minister there, under instructions that, if by any overt acts of the royalists his interference should be necessary, he should take action. Then allow the people to rule themselves, as they have been accustomed to and as they now by a large majority desire. The country itself under annexation would be of no more value to the United States than a big cow pasture, but with proper action on the part of this Government the trade of that country could be controlled, which is about the only feature of the whole matter anyway."

Mr. Spreckels ridiculed the report of an outbreak, and spoke highly of the deposed Queen and her adherents. He said that had it not been for her the marines of the Boston would have been killed, but that she had always been guided in her actions by a desire to rule in peace with this country.
