Boys! or Girls!

You like boys best? Well, each one to his taste. A man-child was the hope of the Hebrew woman; and what mother of to-day is not prouder of having a boy than of having a girl? It will be so, no doubt, to the end of the chapter; but, all the same, one boy is more troublesome than six girls, and gives his mother more anxiety, take it all in all, than twenty. He cries more from the first. He tumbles about more. He has more little illnesses, and he is hungrier. He has a much greater objection to learning his letters, and he does more mischief.

Look at Mrs. B.'s four girls now, all in a row, like a set of steps, one flaxen head just a little below the other. What meek little things they are. How fearful of being called naughty! They spend hour after hour dressing little dolls with bits of silk, or playing fox and geese on a slate.

They work book marks and draw pictures. They learn their lessons, as in duty bound, and when they "go out with mamma" they are as particular about the conventionalities and as careful of their clothes as she is herself.

"What good children you have," say her friends; and, indeed, they are good.

But Mrs. C.'s boys! Good gracious! How often has Tommy "snooped" preserves? What day passes that Jim does not fight with Charlie? And what from glue to liquid blacking has not Billy spilled on the home carpets? They write on the doors with lead pencil; they chalk and cut and tear all that lies in their way. They scrape acquaintance with any amusing ragamuffin they meet, and put all sorts of unpleasant things into their pockets. At any hour of the day or evening they coolly walk off, and come back when they choose; and they express themselves as desiring to learn nothing, and seem to carry out their intention. A complete scouring three times a day only keeps them partially clean, and they have no regard whatever for public opinion.

After awhile, when Mrs. B.'s meek little girls are well-behaved young ladies, she will see with approval certain well-behaved young men pay them addresses in proper form under her own roof; and will make up the wedding garments, and invite the wedding guests, and really feel as though she had done it all. While Mrs. C., at home during the long evenings, will wonder what can keep those boys out so late, and be shocked and horrified by the news that one of her offspring is "engaged," without a word of advice from her, either to some girl she never heard of before, or to the last girl of all others she would have chosen had she been consulted.

Ah! a boy is something to be proud of, perhaps; but for solid comfort it may be you'd better choose a girl. M.K.D.
