Origin of an Arab Proverb.
The proverbs of a people are often illustrated by or take their rise in stories of a humorous character, and Arab proverbs are no exception to this rule. Here, says a contemporary, is an instance. There was a certain shoemaker named Honein, and an Arab came to purchase a pair of shoes at his shop. The usual bargaining began, the cobbler asked twice the proper price and the Bedouin offering half; the son of the Desert, however, was impatient, and, before the proper means had been arrived at, gave up the game of haggling, and went off in high dudgeon. Honein resolved on revenge, and, hurrying forward on the road where he knew the Arab would have to pass, he threw down one of the shoes. Presently the Arab came up, and, seeing the shoe, said to himself: "How like this to one of Honein's shoes! If the other were but here I would take them." Honein had meantime gone on further still and thrown down the other shoe, hiding himself close by to watch the fun. When the Desert Arab came to the shoe, he regretted having left the first, but, tying up his camel, went forth to fetch it. Honein at once mounted and rode off home, well satisfied with the exchange of a camel for a pair of shoes. When the Arab returned on foot to his tribe and they asked him what he had brought from his journey, he replied, "I have brought back nothing but Honein's shoes." And the saying became proverbial for a bootless errand.

Aspirations.
A good story is told in connection with an English Town Council which, after a protracted sitting, was desirous of adjourning for lunch. The proposition was opposed by the Mayor, who, perhaps thought that under the stimulus of hunger his fellow-councillors would be much facilitated in the dispatch of business. At last an illiterate member got up and exclaimed, "I am astonished, I am surprised, and I am amazed, Mr. Mayor, that you will not let us go to lunch." "I'm surprised," exclaimed one of his colleagues; "that a gentleman who has got so much ham in his mouth wants any lunch at all."
