

THE DAY'S DOINGS.

MORNING.
Final Closing Sale of valuable goods—estate of J. S. Lemon, deceased,—will be held by Mr. Adams, at the Commercial Parlors, at 10 o'clock.

EVENING.
We are asked to call particular attention to the meeting of the Hawaiian Mechanics' Benefit Union, at the Hall of Engine Co. No. 2, at 7:30.

Hawaiian Tribe No. 1, Imp. O R M., meets at the Wigwam, Fort St., this evening, at the 7th run, 30th width.

WOLSELEY'S MASTERLY MOVE.

The Egyptian campaign may now be considered as fairly opened.

The masterly manner in which Gen. Wolseley concealed his designs not only from the enemy but even from his own men, and at one stroke transferred his base of operations from Alexandria to Ismailia, deserves high praise. While even his own officers supposed that he intended to bombard Fort Aboukir, and to land a division east of it to turn Arabi's right flank, he was on his way to the Suez Canal. To mask the movement the fleet threw some shots into Aboukir, while the land force made a feint from Ramleh on the afternoon of the 19th. Early the next morning (the 20th) the sailors and marines from the fleet in the Suez Canal seized Port Said at the north end and Ismailia on Lake Timsah at the middle of the Canal, while a detachment of Highlanders and marines from Suez attacked and routed Arabi's force at Shalief, 11 miles north of Suez, and cleared the railroad to Ismailia. In twenty-four hours the whole canal and its banks was in the power of the English.

During the afternoon of the same day the fleet from Alexandria entered the Canal with Gen. Wolseley and the first division of his army on board. One of the transports was loaded with rails, cars and locomotives for the railway from Ismailia to Cairo. The Indian contingent, which includes three regiments of cavalry, was arriving during the week. The rapidity and secrecy with which this whole movement was executed forestalled any attempt against the Canal by Arabi as well as any hindrances that might have been interposed by European diplomacy.

The strategic advantages of this change of base are obvious. In connection with the blockade of the coast it isolates Arabi from his allies in Turkey and elsewhere, while it outflanks his position at Keft ed-Dawar, and opens the most direct and easy route to Cairo to the English army.

Arabi's position at Keft ed-Dawar is immensely strong by nature, protected as it is on both flanks by extensive lakes and swamps, and he has had ample time to fortify it. Besides the rising of the Nile, which is now taking place, will lay most of the country between Alexandria and Cairo under water. The distance by rail is 131 miles. No season could be chosen more unfavorable for military operations in Egypt than the months of September and October.

On the other hand the railway from Ismailia to Cairo passes for about 20 miles through the desert, and in fact it runs near the boundary between the desert and the green plain of the Delta the rest of the way. The distance by rail is just 100 miles. The freshwater canal from the Nile, which supplies the towns on the Suez Canal, accompanies the railway a short distance. As it is, 50 feet wide and 7 feet deep on an average, it will be of great use in transporting heavy guns and supplies. Cairo is the key of the situation. This is due not only to its importance as the seat of Government and the great centre of Mohammedan learning and literature, containing a population of at least 400,000 souls, but also to its geographical position. It is situated exactly at the apex of the Delta, where the Nile Valley begins, (here only 8 miles wide), on the dividing line between the Delta and Upper Egypt, and lines of railway radiate from it to Alexandria, Damietta and Ismailia. It is, however, at the mercy of any invader who can hold the Mokattam Hills on the southeast, as they completely command the city and its citadel.

General Wolseley is then entirely correct in making Cairo his "objective point." Such has been his energy that in less than a week he transferred his base of operations from Alexandria to Ismailia, where he found himself master of the whole canal, twice defeated the enemy and advanced 18 miles on the road to Cairo.

On the 24th his advanced guard of about 2,000 men with two field pieces held at bay 10,000 Egyptians with twelve guns at a point 10 miles west of Ismailia, between Magfar and Tell el-Mashuta, losing only 19 men killed and wounded. The Egyptians retreated during the night. The next day (the 25th) the English cavalry attacked their rear at the Mahsaneh station, 18 miles from Ismailia, and routed them, capturing five Krupp cannon and seventy-five railway carriages loaded with ammunition and supplies. This last was a serious loss to Arabi, and will be of great service to the English army in bringing up supplies from Ismailia, as they seem to have been in want of rolling stock for the road.

Arabi is massing men and intrenching at Tel el Kebir, 31 miles from Ismailia, but it is probable that a decisive battle will be fought near Zagazig, which is an important railroad centre, and a town of 40,000 inhabitants, 48 miles from Ismailia. A decisive victory there would probably settle the fate of Cairo and of the campaign.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The American tern Mary Dodge arrived yesterday from Humboldt, with a cargo of lumber for Messrs. Wilder & Co.

H. B. M. S. Sappho returned from Hilo yesterday, and stopped at Puna to allow the Captain to see Pearl River for the first time, and returned to harbor last evening.

No dust yesterday, but lots of mud

The Bridge on School street has been widened to the same width as the street.

A very interesting article headed "Honolulu Reminiscences" will be found on our front page.

The Hon. Mr. Cleghorn and Mr. Wodehouse arrived in town yesterday by the Sappho, from their tour of inspection on Hawaii.

We are happy to state that Mrs. Marshal Parkes is recovering from the illness that has prostrated her for so long.

Is it a fact that the Government is paying $2 and $3.50 for lime per barrel to loyal houses when it can get it as good in open market for $2.25? Who will answer this question.

The BULLETIN is getting just too smart. Yesterday we got 24 hours ahead of time in our report of an entertainment, but still the fact stated came true last night, only even better than we said.

We call the attention of express-drivers and all those interested in horses to the illustrations, of the effects of that diabolical invention, the over-check rein, on horses, in a small paper, entitled "Our Dumb Animals," now on view in J. W. Robertson & Co.'s window. Every one should see it and contrast the natural and unnatural positions.

SWEETLY, yea, soulfully she gazed upon him and said "O! Alge non de Jones McCarthy, can you ever forgive me?" And he said "What? my own, Yum," and no more was heard for they disappeared within the portals of the California Manufacturing Co.'s establishment on Queen street, where the rest of their conversation can be obtained from the manager.

A resident on Emma street informs us that the water pipe in Emma Square has burst, and the greater portion of the Square is flooded with water. Whose business is it to attend to this?

Some people want a French Post-Master General, why not have a Chinese one too? More Chinese correspondence passes through the office than of the other.

We interviewed His Ex. J. M. Daggett yesterday, and found him genially reserved on all matters of importance, but communicative on "the boys of Nevada." His Ex. gives one a desire to know a few more of them.

We hear there is some prospect of a rifle match being got up between picked teams of Hawaiians from Hawaii and Honolulu. It will be a most interesting affair if it can be properly managed.

We understand that differences in politics have so far separated two former bosom friends that they are going to expose each other's record in the newspapers. Those who can read Hawaiian will have the advantage over the rest of us.

Mr. James W. Robertson has on exhibition at his store, a Martini-Henry rifle, which was picked up on the battle-field of Chorillos, in Peru. It is well worthy of inspection, and perhaps may turn in useful if the truculent talk comes to anything.

"ANOTHER good man gone slightly wrong." A charming cherub formerly employed in a prominent firm here announced his intentions to his employers to go to California by a certain vessel. Everything went on swimmingly until, one day, about three weeks before the vessel was to leave, the guileless innocent went out collecting as usual, but did not return. At night the gay shop-owner learned that his whilom employee had departed by another vessel that day, and now he doesn't know whether he has got away with anything or not. O, ye tears!

A horse harnessed to a buggy was found early yesterday morning lying down in Hotel street opposite the Hotel. Apparently the animal was nearly choked, and some good samaritan assisted to unharness it and put it on its legs again. Whose was it?

We direct our readers' attention to an article in to-day's issue on the recent battles in Egypt, specially written for the BULLETIN, by a gentleman who is thoroughly qualified to speak with authority on the matter from his personal experience in that country.
