The somewhat bizarre action of the Maharajah Duleep Singh in announcing his intention of coming forward as a candidate for the parliamentary representation of Whitby, "at the next general election," without mention of politics and without placing himself in communication with either the political party in the borough, has caused no little surprise, stir, and comment. It may not be generally known that some twenty years ago his Highness with a large retinue was the tenant of Mulgrave Castle, near Whitby, the seat of the Marquis of Normanby, and became very popular in the town and neighbourhood, not only by reason of his princely munificence, but because of his ardour and success as a sportsman and his zeal for public improvement in the locality.

The new Police-master of St. Petersburg, General Gresser, is of a different stamp to the old one. Kozloff's favourite mode of inspection was to drive about full speed in a carriage with a mounted policeman, on special occasions, bawling in front. Gresser, on the other hand, goes about every day somewhere or other in disguise, or on foot in disguise, or on foot in mufti, with a result that two or three score of unfortunates have been caught napping, and the entire force is now nervously kept on the qui vive.

Another three weeks and there will be a regular exodus of noblemen from England, bound for the United States. I am told that during October not fewer than a couple of dukes, one marquis, four earls, a viscount, and two barons will go on a visit to different parts of America.

Some years ago, whilst a hydrophobia scare was at its height in Germany, an ingenious impecunious made a small fortune by advertising an "Infallible Preventive of Madness in Dogs on receipt of a Bank-note for three shillings." Old maids and students showered their thalers on him, and all were obliged to admit that the "preventive" was "infallible." An English lady who had also been beguiled into forwarding a thaler received the necessary instructions in her native tongue, as follows: "Honoured woman! Should your dog suddenly his food refuse; should he himself in the corner lay down without himself several times on his axis to turn; should he your summons reluctantly and without the tail to waggle obey, so is it to be feared that the faithful animal in the first stage of madrage himself finds. In order your true housefriend against this terrible malady and the with it attached fatal consequences to protect, take to the hand a sharp axe, and cut him the tail off, close behind the ears."

A company, with a name as long as your arm, is being started for the purpose of rabbit-farming on an estate situated near Woodbridge and Melton railway stations on the Great Eastern Railway. The promoters of this scheme have the advantage of being able to summon the most astounding figures to their aid. They show that one pair of rabbits may increase in four years to 1,274,440. They are able to state that 200 tons of rabbits are imported weekly from Ostend to London, equal to about 10, 400 per annum. They can point to the thousands of
