The Daily Bulletin.

MONDAY, NOV. 6, 1882.

Henry was a good boy, but, unfortunately, was not possessed of tact. I do not know that you understand precisely what tact means, therefore I will illustrate. One day a gentleman was walking along the street, when all of a sudden an avalanche of dust descended upon him from a second-story window. Henry, who was standing near, saw the accident, but he did not have tact. It seemed so funny to see a strange gentleman suddenly subjected to a dust shower that he laughed aloud. But John was entirely unlike Henry. Notwithstanding that it was he who had precipitated the dust upon the strange gentleman, he was in the street and addressing the strange gentleman in a moment. He said he was exceedingly sorry that such an unfortunate accident had befallen the gentleman, and volunteered to brush the dust from the latter's clothing; but while pretending to do this he rubbed chalk all over the gentleman's back. The gentleman thanked John for his kindness, and said that he should be only too glad to do him a favor. John, you see, had tact; but Henry, who saw the whole transaction, did not offer to assist the gentleman. He simply laughed. This angered the gentleman, and by his efforts Henry was discharge from employment, while John secured a remunerative situation. There is nothing like tact.—Boston Transcript.
