THE LATE QUEEN.

A Biographical Sketch.

Lying in State.

Last Tributes of Respect.

FAMILY HISTORY.

Her late Majesty the Dowager Queen Emma was born January 2nd, 1836, and was the daughter of Fanny Kekela Young and Naea, a high chief. Her mother was the second daughter of John Young, one of the advisers of Kamehameha the First. She was adopted by Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Rooke, and received part of her education at the Royal School, which was founded by Mr. and Mrs. Cooke. The deceased lady was also instructed by Mrs. Von Pfister, at present residing in this city. On June 19th, 1856, she was married to Alexander Lihohilo Iolani, Kamehameha the Fourth, and on May 20th, 1858, a son and heir was born to them, which caused great rejoicing among the people. The little prince was named Albert Edward Kauikouali, and it was the intention of the royal parents to send him when old enough to England to be educated. But, unfortunately, the little fellow died August 8th, 1862, when only four years and three months old. His death was a sad blow to the parents.

HER CHURCH CONNECTION.

It was in this year that the deceased so used her influence, that a branch of the church of England was established in the islands, a bishop and several clergy arriving here October 9th, 1862. On the 21st day of the same month Her Majesty was baptized in the Anglican faith, and on November 28th confirmed, along with her husband, the day being celebrated as a holiday.

She was greatly attached to the Anglican Church, and attended the services regularly, more particularly those in the Hawaiian tongue, which are conducted by the Rev. Alex. Mackintosh. Iolani College, named after her husband, and St. Andrew's Priory school for girls, will miss her, as she took the greatest interest in their welfare and paid for the education of a number of scholars at both institutions. Up to a recent date she had made it her regular duty to attend service at the Cathedral in the afternoon, and then proceed to the St. Andrew's Priory and take tea with the noble band of sisters at that institution. She used her influence in every direction to press upon her race the importance of being constant in their attendance to divine worship.

A LASTING MEMORIAL.

The Queen's Hospital, which was erected in 1860 and founded by the deceased, will always remain a living monument to the memory of this great and good lady, who was so endeared to the hearts of her people. On November 30th, 1863, her husband Kamehameha the Fourth died, and was buried in the Royal Mausoleum, Nuuanu Valley, February 3rd, 1864.

VISIT TO ENGLAND.

In 1865 the widowed Queen visited England. She left here May 6th in H. B. M. S. Clie, arriving in London July 14th of the same year, and returned home in 1866. While in England she was received everywhere with kindly welcome, and particularly so by Her Majesty Queen Victoria, with whom she kept up a correspondence to the day of her death. It is only a short time ago that the writer read one of her letters received from Queen Victoria. It was a beautiful and touching epistle, and bore evidence of great friendship existing between the two royal widows.

A BREAK IN HEALTH.

The Queen had always enjoyed good health until October, 1883, when she had a severe apoplectic attack. In August, 1884, while visiting Kohala, Hawaii, another attack came on while out riding. This was a very severe one and caused great anxiety. As soon as possible she was brought to Honolulu. Her condition for a time was critical, but by the faithful and constant attendance of her family physician, Dr. Robt. McKibbin, and faithful nursing by her attendants, she recovered, but still she was much changed.

THE FATAL STROKE.

A third attack on Saturday last ended her days on earth, as stated in the following words in that afternoon's issue of this paper: "Our pages were just going to press this afternoon when the startling news reached us that Her Majesty the Dowager Queen Emma died at ten minutes before 2 o'clock this afternoon. It appears she was seized with an apoplectic attack at ten minutes to one. Miss Peabody, her maid, at once telephoned for Dr. McKibbin, and he hastened with all speed to her side. The Doctor at once saw she was in a critical condition, and summoned Dr. Trousseau and Mr. A. J. Cartwright. At the first stroke she went into a convulsion. She rallied so far as to be able to walk round the room. But a second stroke came on, followed very soon by a third one, which took her off at the hour stated above."

LYING IN STATE.

Preparations were at once made for the removal of the body from the room in which she died, to the drawing room where it was to lie in state. At 8 o'clock in the evening a requiem service was said by the Rev. Alex. Mackintosh. A detachment of the Royal Guards were on duty in different parts of the house and grounds. Posters were put up round town early Sunday morning stating that the late Queen would lie in state from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. The body was placed on an appropriately draped bier in the centre of the room. At the head, on a table, was placed the beautiful silver casket by Her Majesty Queen Victoria on the occasion of the birth of the little prince of Hawaii. It was surrounded by most beautiful flowers, arranged in a tasteful manner. At the foot stood a small crucifix, with a background of fragrant white flowers. The remains were covered with a robe of white silk, embroidered with gold. The hands were folded across the breast enclosed in a pair of white kid gloves, with gold and jewelled bracelets on either arm. The features were very natural, though it was evident the body was fast decomposing. On either side were kahili bearers. A guard of honor stood at the head and foot of the bier, consisting of His Majesty's Chamberlain, Col. C. H. Judd, Col. C. P. Iaukea, Col. J. H. Boyd, Col. G. W. Macfarlane, Majors Antone Rosa and E. W. Purvis. The first to take a last look at the well-known features of the deceased were the pupils of St. Andrew's Priory, neatly attired in white dresses with black sashes. Their Majesties the King and Queen and other members of the royal family also paid a visit. From nine o'clock until one o'clock there was a constant stream of people of all classes and nationalities, to take a last look at the face of her who was so universally beloved.

HOME TALENT.

A young half-white boy named Grube, employed in Mr. Marchant's cigar store, has developed a natural talent for engraving, which promises to distinguish him. He has just engraved the device of St. George and the Dragon in bass-relief on a kukui nut, copying from an English sovereign. Although done with a rude tool made from a file, the work does not reveal a fault to even a skilled eye. The handle of the basket, that the nut has been shaped into, is engraved in relief with the initials of the gentleman for whom the ornament was made. It is said that the lad is to be sent to the Coast, where he will have more scope for the exercise of his rare talent, and be able to add to his self-taught skill the most experienced knowledge extant of the craft.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Board of Management of the Royal Hawaiian Agricultural Society was held Friday evening at the British Club, Chief Justice Judd in the Chair. It was decided that this year's fair be confined to a show of horse stock. No prizes will be offered for other descriptions of exhibits. Saturday afternoon, June 13th, is the date fixed. The Chief Justice, Judge Bickerton and Mr. Chas. Lucas were appointed a committee to prepare the prize list and make arrangements for the show of horse stock, and Messrs. A. Jaeger and J. S. Webb to superintend the arrangements for any other exhibits.

MAUI NEWS.

MR. E. M. Walsh, superintendent of Paia Plantation, arrived in town by the Likelike on Saturday. He reports abundance of rain having fallen on Maui of late. The crops never looked so well at this season before. Grinding is going on briskly at the Paia mill, twenty tons being the regular daily yield. It is found necessary to increase the plant, and Mr. Walsh's chief object in town is to arrange for the importation of a new eight-ton vacuum pan.

PREPARATIONS FOR BURIAL.

Shortly after 1 o'clock the remains were enclosed in a coffin which was then placed in a lead one and sealed up. A beautiful black velvet pall covered this coffin, one that was used at the funeral of the little Prince, and also when his father was buried. The five volunteer companies will take it in turns to be on duty at nights, and the Royal Household Troops through the day. Last evening a detachment of the Honolulu Rifles were on duty. Mr. W. C. Parke has charge of all arrangements for the funeral, which will take place Sunday afternoon, May 10th. The coffin will be a handsome one of kou and koa. The top is being made by Mr. J. H. Wickie and the bottom by Mr. C. E. Williams. The remains of the late Queen will be taken to the Royal Mausoleum, Nuuanu Valley, and in due time laid alongside those of her husband and child.

THE NEWS.

will be carried to the other islands to-day and to-morrow by the different steamers, and no doubt a large number of natives will arrive at the end of the week.

REFERENCES IN THE CHURCHES.

In most of the churches references were made to the overshadowing event, in either prayers or sermons. At St. Andrew's Cathedral the Rev. George Wallace, who preached in the morning, referred at some length to the death of the Dowager Queen. The Reverend gentleman first spoke of the comfort offered to those who have reached a period in life to know something of sorrow and bereavement, in the words of St. Paul to the Ephesians—3:15, "Of whom the whole families in heaven and earth is named." After alluding to the families in heaven and earth, he said those words led to a higher thought, in the departure of one yesterday to a higher and more blessed home.

To the rank and royalty held by her must be added Christian character. How good her example, not only to her own race but to every other nation. Her domestic virtues were fulfilled with fidelity, her character without a stain. She faithfully fulfilled the duties of wife and mother, and her sorrows were borne trustful that God had done all for the best. She will be laid to her rest with pomp and splendor becoming a queen, attended by emblems of royalty and power. How noble her example to the young women of her race. Her praises will be sung by those who receive benefits in the hospital she founded. Her praises will be sung by nations who know and revere her for what she is, as the last representative of a royal line, at one time as countless as the leaves on the mountain slopes. And shall not her praises be sung by this church she has loved so well, and which was established at the request of her and her royal husband. It is a Christian woman we mourn. Her character was modest, gentle, dignified, loving, charitable, and was blessed by all whose servant she was. She came frequently to church and might be seen kneeling at the altar by the side of the poor and aged, her friends. She was mother of the people and queen of her race, and generations to come after her shall call her blessed. Both she and her husband were devoted servants of God. It is confidently hoped ere long a beautiful temple inside and out will be completed and be a fit memorial of these departed servants of God. We think of them to-day as our brother and sister who have gone up on high. The Rev. Alex. Mackintosh spoke feelingly of the national bereavement, in the course of his sermon at the Hawaiian service in the Cathedral at 9:30 a. m. On the same occasion appropriate hymns were sung, and the service was peculiarly impressive.
