SHIPPING NOTES.

Stur Iwalani left Nawiliwili yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock with the schooner Mary Foster in tow and arrived here at 5:30 o'clock this morning. The Iwalani brought 2,284 bags of sugar. She will sail on Monday at 5 p.m. for Kauai.

Schr Mary Foster brought 200 bags of sugar. She will go on the Marine Railway to be examined and repaired.

The steamer Kinau brought 3,400 bags of sugar, 1 horse, 40 hides, 500 goat skins, 150 packages sundries.

The Leah could get no sugar at Hanalei on account of the fresh having washed away nearly all the cane that had been cut and made ready for the mill.

The Kinau will sail on Tuesday at 4 p.m.

The Eureka received sugar from the Iwalani this morning, and the Consuelo is loading at the O S S wharf.

MARRIED.

At Waikapu, Maui, at the residence of Thomas W. Everett, on August 6th, 1885, by the Rev. Jas. M. Alexander, Mr. Edmund Norrie, of Honolulu, to Maria Lee Richardson, youngest daughter of the late Hon. John Richardson, of Waikapu, Maui.

LOCAL & GENERAL NEWS.

YOUNG people's prayer meeting at the Bethel Union this evening.

A GREAT many people went out to the sale of Mr. Luce's property and effects to-day.

LUCAS'S whistle will blow for the Mariposa to-morrow when the engineer pulls the string.

ALLEN & ROBINSON are rebuilding the wood shed that was blown to pieces during the gale.

MR. Nakamura, Japanese Consul, has been ill for the past two weeks, but is now slowly improving.

WILSON Bros.' blacksmith shop, Fort street, has been sold to the Hawaiian Carriage Manufacturing Co.

EIGHTY-NINE saloon and 202 deck passengers arrived by the Kinau this morning, and there were 29 persons in the Volcano party.

THERE was a large attendance at Lyons & Levey's regular cash sale yesterday, and fair prices were realized. Two horses were sold.

GAME cocks on a war footing are said to have been introduced into Honolulu, and the S. P. C. A. will now have something to live for.

MR. Silva, a young Portuguese formerly employed at Gonsalves' dry goods store, Hotel street, has gone to Wailuku, Maui, to start a skating rink.

THE captain of the Iwalani reports that the bridges on Kauai damaged during the storm still remain in their wrecked state, and no movement toward making repairs is as yet visible.

THE dead body of the Portuguese madman who jumped overboard from the steamer Iwalani, as mentioned in the BULLETIN a few days ago, was recovered at Nawiliwili in a decomposed state.

WOODYEAR'S circus is doing a good business in the Pacific Islands, and will strike Honolulu about the middle of October. So says a letter from the proprietor, dated Luva, Fiji, July 10th, to Mr. James Dodd.

A NEW industry has started a few doors north of this office, on Queen street. It is a hammock manufactory, a business that should do well in this climate. The young men who have embarked in the enterprise deserve encouragement.

NEWS by the Kinau corroborates the estimates of damages to the cane by the storm, given in letters from managers in this paper. In the Kohala and North Hamakua districts the injury is said to have been very slight.

MR. Frank Brown says that about ten million small fishes known as the Halalu appeared in shallow water at Waikiki this morning. They formed a column about 200 feet long and 10 feet wide, and when last seen were seaward bound.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made by Mr. Dillingham for an expedition on horseback next week to Mr. James Campbell's ranch at Honouliuli, of gentlemen interested in a projected colonization scheme and members of the press.

A STRUGGLE for a two-dollar-a-plate supper will take place at Makiki, at nine o'clock to-morrow morning, between the Advertiser and the Saturday Press baseball clubs. At four o'clock the Honolulu and Oceanic clubs will try conclusions.

FIREMEN complain that the water-plugs on Nuuanu street, near the scene of the late fire, are too far apart and are of such a kind that it requires some minutes to find them. They also say that hydrants like the one on the corner of King and Fort streets ought to be placed there.

MR. JAEGER has the case of seeds collected at New Orleans in his office, and will open it to-morrow. The lot includes some upland rice from Florida and Missouri, which, if, as its name seems to indicate, it grows in dry land, should form a valuable addition to Hawaiian products.

THE Chinese Club House opposite the Police Station is up a full story, and the mountain of bricks, that for months encumbered the street, has faded away like a Canadian snow-bank in May, or a Kakaako salt mound in a kona rain storm. Today the iron pillars for the front are being put in position. The building promises to be an architectural ornament to the city.

THE Volcano party, nine ladies and twenty gentlemen, by the Kinau spent two days on shore at Hilo. A portion of them went riding, some to the plantation mills and others on a visit to Rainbow Falls. Two days of pleasure were had at the Volcano. Some of the party made two or more descents into the crater. Halemauau lake was very active and the Little Beggar was truly distinguishing itself. The road was in good condition and the trip taken all in all was indeed pleasurable.

A MURDER STORY.

Some days ago a clipping from an American paper, containing the following, was handed to a BULLETIN reporter:—

"NEW YORK, May 11th.—A Tribune's Bridgeport, Conn., despatch, contains the death-bed confession of Baldwin Janser, a Danish sailor, who died at Honolulu in January. This confession explains the murder of Captain Colvocoresses, of the United States Navy, who was killed in 1872 in Bridgeport. His satchel, containing valuable bonds, was missing, and a seal ring from his finger was gone. He had over $25,000 insurance on his life, and the theory was advanced by interested insurance companies that he had committed suicide. The confession of Janser was corroborated Friday by the receipt of the stolen ring." Diligent enquiries in every quarter likely to contain the information, have failed to reveal any account of the death at Honolulu, at the time mentioned or any other time, of the Danish sailor named above. No Baldwin Janser died in the hospital. Mr. Hendry, the Danish Consul, never heard of the man. Captain Brown, agent of the Board of Health, has no record of a Dane dying here since 1880, and one who died in that year was not a sailor. Still, the above story appears to have all the elements of authenticity. It is possible the murderer died at sea near Honolulu. But if he died on shore here, who knows anything about it, and to whom was the confession made?

CELESTIAL PHENOMENA.

HALO ROUND THE SUN.

On Wednesday, July 29th, about 1:30 p. m., there appeared a large and complete halo round the sun. The sky was full of a mist, but no rain was actually falling anywhere in sight. Small halos round the sun may often be observed by means of a smoked glass, but so large and complete a solar halo as that noticed (about 3° in diameter) or one which is visible to the naked eye and lasts for some time, is rarely seen in the tropics. Our informant was on the Waianae road, about four miles north of Honolulu, when he and other travelers stopped to look at the above interesting phenomenon. It was probably caused by the refraction of the sun's rays from myriads of ice-crystals floating in the air, not from drops of water as in the case of rainbows. There were heavy thunder-storms next day.

METEOR SEEN OFF WAILAUA.

A brilliant meteor was seen in the northern sky, off Waialua on this island, about 7:30 p. m. on Thursday last (July 30th). It suddenly appeared in the sky, at a point about fifteen degrees from the Polar Star, on the side opposite to that on which the "pointers" of the Great Bear lie, and a little above the continuation of an imaginary line drawn from them through the Polar Star. From this spot it ran downwards in an almost perpendicular course till within a few degrees of the horizon, when it disappeared. Its light, undimmed from first to last, was about eight times as bright as that shed by either of the two planets nightly seen on our western horizon, and no detonation or sound of any kind accompanied either its appearance or its disappearance. It looked like a globe of fire of a bluish-green color, and ended its course, not by bursting into fragments, but as if suddenly extinguished.

A PEEP INSIDE CHINATOWN.

Yesterday forenoon, in the company of Deputy Marshal Dayton and Officers Fehlberr and Marcos, our reporter went on a visit of inspection to the lately raided gambling premises in Chinatown. Going along Meek street the party paused occasionally to look and listen. Upon either hand could be seen, in back shops, groups of Chinese undoubtedly engaged in gaming, while around and overhead was heard the click of dominoes. As the law stands, gambling may go on right under the eyes of the police, but if money is kept out of view no conviction can be obtained. Going through a narrow alleyway from Hotel street, a quadrangular court is entered. Here is a scene, of which even the dingiest and ugliest exterior shell of Chinatown affords no index. The center of the court bears resemblance to a deserted gipsy encampment, only that the cooking utensils are left behind. Open fireplaces, containing only black and cold embers, are surrounded by pots hung on crossed sticks, with a few iron and tin vessels lying about. Narrow stairs—one flight at each angle—lead up to a verandah running round three sides of the square. Groups of Chinese lounged about the doorways on the ground floor and along the upper verandah, except that side of it off which the raided gaming room opened. A native woman and young girl were listlessly lolling at the foot of one of the stairways. The Celestials looked with as little concern as possible upon the intruding officers of the law. Upon the side of the square next Hotel street rose an indescribably conglomerate fabric. There was a substructure consisting of a crazy and dilapidated shed, its wall made of slats an inch or so apart. It looked as if originally built for a henhouse. Perched upon the sloping roof of this shaky hovel, braced and levelled up with an ingenious arrangement of scantling, was an entirely distinct and never, but scarcely more substantial or elegant-looking house. Passing up stairs the now desolate gaming apartments are entered. Two small, roughly-walled rooms, with a table in each, constitute the suite. The game is conducted by means of tickets, that may be sold all over town, but the manipulation of them is done entirely within the inner of these two rooms. The tickets are brought to the clerks at the outside table, who check them and pass them through a small slit, whittled out in the crack of the wall, to the managers inside. When a ticket takes a prize, or otherwise, the fact is posted on the wall of the outer room, where investors in them can read their "luck" at any time. A window opens out from the inner room to a narrow space between that and the next rookery, and a person can easily obtain hand and foot holds to let himself down to the ground, in case of the den being surprised. Once an officer caught a fellow by the heels, in the act of departing by this very window. A look out of the rickety opening revealed the interior of a bakery on Hotel street, where batters and batches were being industriously compounded in casks and tubs. The back door of the inner room was fitted with a heavy bar, effectually preventing forcible entry by any means short of battering the door to pieces. This is one of the notorious gaming resorts of the Chinese quarter. The game pounced upon yesterday is said to be a thorough winkle, designed by rascally Chinese to rob their more simple countrymen without a semblance of fair-play.

POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY, Aug. 7th.

Eight Chinamen charged with gaming were, at their request, remanded until the 8th inst.

Four men, charged with burglary at the residence of H. Luning during the night of the 5th inst., were remanded until the 11th inst.

Kahimoka was fined $5 and costs for drunkenness.

Lokai, charged with failure to support his wife, was ordered to remedy his conduct in that respect.

CIVIL COURT.

THURSDAY, Aug. 6th.

Lyons & Levey vs. W. L. Wilcox, assumpsit for $7.14. Judgment for plaintiffs. Appeal noted to Intermediary Court.

E. Oakley vs. E. B. Thomas, assumpsit for $194. Continued until 20th. A second case between the same parties, for $199.42, was continued until the 24th. Cecil Brown for plaintiff; H. E. Avery for defendant.

C. J. Hardee vs. W. H. Cornwell, assumpsit for $90, also continued.

SCIENTIFIC.

In the official report of the geological survey of Wisconsin, some curious statistics are given as to the amount of water taken from the earth by trees. It is stated that the average exhalation from soft, thin-leaved plants in clear weather amounts to about one and a quarter ounces, troy, per day of twelve hours for every square foot of surface. Hence, a moderate-sized elm raises and throws off seven and three-quarters tons of water per day.

China, with its enormous population and its sewage-laden rivers, at the mouths of which large numbers of the poorer classes live in boats, would seem to be a country particularly exposed to the visitations of cholera. The cause of the empire's exemption from this pest is said by Mr. Mattieu Williams to be the tea drinking habits of the people, which lead them to boil all their water, and take it hot before it has time to cool and receive any fresh supplies of disease germs.

A patent has been taken out in France by M. Tichenor for a process of butter making by electricity. It is stated that the milk being placed in a vessel of special form, a pair of electrodes is introduced and connected to a dynamo capable of yielding a current of forty volts, when in from three to five minutes the butter accumulates at one end of the poles in the form of little balls. The claims include the removal of rancidity from butter and the manufacture of cheese by the help of the current.

The way to get the better of the bilious system without blue pills or quinine is to take the juice of one, or two, or three lemons, as appetite craves, in as much water as makes it pleasant to drink without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning, on rising, at least half an hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficiency, without any of the weakening effect of calomel. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juice, which is always most corrosive, invariably produces inflammation after a while, but properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its medicinal work without harm, and when the stomach is clear of food has abundant opportunity to work over the system thoroughly.

Speculation, a valuable horse belonging to Claus Spreckels, and a half-brother of the great Dexter, died lately at the Aptos ranch. The horse was valued at $30,000.
