THE commissioned officers of the volunteer military companies will meet at the Palace, Wednesday night, to discuss military maneuvers.

AT the Volcano House, during the week ending November 28th, the thermometer varied from 50 to 76; the rain fall was 2.71 inches, and the volcano was active.

THE schooner Canute lost one of her boats on the rocks at Pauka, Hawaii. She put into Hilo for shelter, and afterwards assisted the barkentine Amelia in getting off the reef.

MESSES. Fresh & Peacock, wholesale wine and spirit merchants, are circulating a very pretty gotten up card calendar for 1887. Flowers, in various colors, are extremely pretty.

By the next mail for San Francisco, orders will be sent for a number of incandescent electric lights, to illuminate the interior of the Palace, from the basement to the attic.

The schooner Ehukai, which arrived this morning from Waihua, was used rather roughly by the weather. Her main boom was carried away, several coops of turkeys washed overboard, and one of her boats stove in by huge seas.

PURSER Ross, of the steamer Iwani which arrived this morning from Kuan, reports a gale on the up trip, and the decks of the steamer being continually flooded. The steamer Jas. The Palace will be brilliantly illuminated by electricity, inside and outside, for the occasion.

DOING WELL.

A paragraph in the Daily Colonist of Victoria, B. C., announces to the readers of that paper the re-organization of the firm of Langley & Co., wholesale druggist of the city, in which our former townsman, Mr. T. M. Henderson occupies an important place. Mr. Henderson, with his brother, J. M. has been admitted a partner in the firm. His many friends in Honolulu will be glad to hear of Mr. Henderson's welfare in new sphere.

NEARLY WRECKED.

The barkentine Amelia, which has been running here for some time with lumber, from Eureka, Cal., for Messrs. Allen & Robinson, got into difficulty, near Hilo, last Tuesday night. She was off Wainaku with lumber for Hilo, on the above night, when a heavy swell drove her on to the reef. She floated, after 30,000 feet of her cargo had been taken off, but was not much damaged, beyond losing a little copper. It was a close shave, however, as the sea was pretty rough.

HILO NOTES.

The place has been favored with heavy rains. A lumber vessel, bringing a cargo for Richardson and Coan came into port on Tuesday, and was almost wrecked by the waves driving her on the rocks at Wainaku, Wednesday morning. Mr. C. S. Lewis and Miss Lucy Wetmore were united in the bonds of matrimony, Tuesday evening. The decisions of the tax-appeal board were given on Wednesday, granting, either altogether or in part, all the appeals.

LILUOKALANI EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY, 1ST DIVISION.

This Society met at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in the room of Engine Co. No. 1. Princess Liluokalani, President of the Society, presided. The attendance was somewhat slim. Vacancies among the office-bearers were filled. Mrs. W. Hill was elected vice-president; Miss L. Brickwood, treasurer; and Miss Ladd, a directress. A new ward was nominated, and the proper committee instructed to inquire into the case, and have the child placed in school if found to be a fit subject for the society's care. Before the adjournment of the meeting, the Princess President expressed in feeling and affectionate words her appreciation of the members' attention to her wish in several matters enumerated.

THE TEMPLE OF FASHION TO THE FASHIONABLE.

The proprietor of the Temple of Fashion decided sometime ago to clear out his entire stock, and close out the business. He still holds to that determination, and is resolved, if possible, to make a clean sweep by the first day of January next. In order to effect this purpose prices are marked low. It is not his intention either to give away goods or to pay people for taking them, but to offer them at so low a price that it requires more than ordinary resolution to resist the temptation to buy. The stock consists mainly of every description of ladies' and gentlemen's wearing apparel, and a great variety of trunks in which to keep it when not in use. An inspection of the store, which is on Fort street, opposite Spreckels' bank, will convince one that the process of reduction has progressed. But still the Temple of Fashion has enough fashionable material left to decorate many fashionable people, of both sexes, from head to foot.

NOVELTIES AT THE BEAVER.

Mr. H. J. Nolte, proprietor and manager of the Beaver Saloon, has decided to furnish his patrons with something extraordinary for Christmas. Not in the line of eatables and drinkables, although for anything known to the contrary, he may devastate all the chicken coops at the Casino to stock the tables of the Beaver on that occasion. But it is a certain fact that he has already filled his show-cases with novelties, eccentricities, and curiosities in the line of a smoker's outfit, just precisely the articles from which to select a Christmas present for a friend who enjoys a smoke. A small champagne bottle, which to look at is a genuine champagne bottle, but when you handle it you find that it is made of wood, and on pressing a spring it swings open on hinges its full length, and reveals a pretty meerschaum pipe, cigar-holder, cigarette-holder, and a little instrument for clipping off the closed ends of cigars. There are albums, too, which on being opened, disclose to view a similar list to the one just given, with the addition of a match box and the photograph of a winsome young lady. These two distinctive articles are singled out from an innumerable multitude of others, that would puzzle the ingenuity of the BULLETIN pipe-writer to describe; but they are all open for inspection, and purchase, too; and anyone with an inclination that way will be cordially welcomed.

ANGLICAN CHURCH CHRONICLE.

Number 1, Volume 5, of the Anglican Church Chronicle has just been issued, and is unusually full of interesting matter. Rev. George Wallace has retired from the editorial staff, leaving Rev. A. Mackintosh as sole editor. "Under the present conduct the Anglican Church Chronicle will not deviate far from the course it has hitherto adopted. It has endeavored to steer clear of all religion-destroying controversy. There is not a word of acrimony or heat throughout its whole career directed against any Christians differing in matters of polity or customs. If there is one thing above another which the Chronicle has striven not to do, it is that 'falling into the common error of consigning those whose religious views do not coincide with its own, to outer darkness where aer to be found the pronounced enemies of all religion.'" The passages in quotation marks are from the Chronicle's opening article. Every regular reader of this periodical knows how well the editors have succeeded in their purpose. The absence of narrow bigotry has always been a marked and pleasing feature of the Chronicle.
