SUPPOSED TO HAVE THE ADVANTAGE.

The new Road Supervisor is supposed to be in a better position than his predecessor for effecting improvements; he is supposed to have the advantages of the favor and support of his superiors. The supposition is reasonable. The ex-Road Supervisor was dismissed from office at short notice; did not voluntarily resign. So he could not have been in favor. The present Road Supervisor was appointed by those now in power. So he is their choice, and it is natural to suppose that he has and will have their support. This means that he will be allowed funds for road work. Of course, no man, however competent, can make and mend roads without money. Money was voted by the Legislature, the year's taxes have been collected, and funds should now be available. The streets of the kingdom should be a first claim on the treasury. If there is not sufficient revenue to satisfy all the legislative appropriations, which there cannot be, the public thoroughfares should certainly be among objects that take precedence, and in the very front of these. Whether our Government think so is questionable. Judging from what one sees, it is pretty certain they do not. But it is quite clear that unless the man who has charge of the roads is furnished with the means, he cannot do what is expected of him by the public. There is no official of the Government so liable to constant abuse as the Road Supervisor, whoever he may be, and probably no official is really less responsible for the causes of complaint than he. He is an employee who operates where and when his superior commands. About the only things he can be justly called to account for are his methods of operation and the character of his work. The Minister of Interior is the man really responsible. He gives the orders, or withholds them, as the case may be, and the Supervisor acts accordingly. At all events, that is how it has been in the past. The Minister has the handling of the money, too, and may withhold it at will. As the present Road Supervisor is the present Minister's own appointee, it is reasonable to believe that the former will have the best support and assistance of the latter, and it is to be hoped the result will be an improved condition of the public thoroughfares.

HAWAIIAN FERNS.

The ferns of the Hawaiian Islands are found in widely varying localities, but are not scattered at random throughout our mountains and valleys. On the contrary, the different families are very choice in their selection of their homes, and confine themselves often within very narrow zones of elevation. It will assist the fern collector to specify these zones, and the families to be found within them. From the level of the sea up to 500 feet elevation grow all the Adiantums, Deparia, Trichomanes, Davallias, Pteris, Doodias, Aspleniums, Aspidiums, Polypodiums, and Vittarias. Between 500 and 1,000 feet; Davallias, Lindsays, Cheilanthes, and Botrychiums. Above the 1,500 feet line appear the Acrostichums, which extend up to 3,000 or 4,000 feet.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 feet are found Trichomanes, Blechnums, Sadlerias, Doodias, and Schizas. The Gleichenias, are found above 2,000 feet elevation, and extend up to 4,000 feet. With them are Hymenophyllums, Gymnogrammes, Marratias, and Aspleniums.

As a rule, the zone between 3,000 and 5,000 feet is the richest in ferns, and best repays the search of the collector. Between 5,000 and 8,000 feet elevation are found Pellaea, Polypodiums, Pteris, and one or two varieties of Danallias.

Above 8,000 feet, some varieties of Aspidiums, Aspleniums, and Acrostichums are found, and one is struck with their changed aspect especially in the matter of scales, hairs, and other protections against the cool air; as well as the stunted, rigid forms of some varieties that have, apparently strayed from their true homes.

As a matter of course we may expect to find ferns—in these islands—growing wherever there is moisture and shade, nor will we be often disappointed. There are a few varieties however that are very local, and these will be mentioned further on.

In collecting ferns for preservation and growth the student should be provided with a convenient case in which to place the fronds material for the collecting of spores, and a container for roots of plants to be grown. In order to make this impediment as light as possible I would advise that it be arranged as follows: The case for fronds is best made by procuring two pieces of that kind of stout galvanized wire netting which has a mesh of about one half inch aperture. This comes in rolls, the wires being (not intertwined) but soldered together where they cross. These pieces should not be less than 12 inches by 14 inches in size, and the edges all around should be turned down to stiffen them. There should be a number—say 50—sheets of good "book" paper provided of the same size as the case, and the whole should be bound together by two stout straps.

In gathering fern fronds care should be taken to select those on which the spores are well developed. It will be found that—as a rule—the ripier spores are on the lower, and older pinnae, and with the pocket lens with which, of course, the student is provided, the sori should be carefully examined and the shape and position of the indusium noted.

In all cases at least one or two specimens of each variety gathered should include the whole of the fronds, including—where possible—a portion of the root (rhizome). In case the fronds spring from a trunk which is cumbersome to carry, its length, size, and manner of growth, i. e. whether erect or trailing ("decumbent") should be noted. In laying the fronds between the sheets of paper care should be taken to arrange them as open as possible, as, in case the pinnae overlap each other they frequently cling to each other provokingly. Where, though, the frond is too wide or long for the case it can be folded upon itself, bits of paper being laid between the folds. At times the collector will be strongly tempted to slight this part of his collecting work, but after a few trials of the hap-hazard, slovenly style of doing the work, he will become a convert to the methodical if slower plan.

A "note" can be made on the paper on which the frond is laid of the location where it was gathered, and if the roots are gathered for growing, the soil and degree of moisture and shade in which it grows should also be noted.

A CORRECTION.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—In your issue of yesterday, a paragraph appeared headed "Trustees of Kawaiahae Seminary," which needs correction. It should have been stated that in addition to those chosen to fill vacancies on the Board of Trustees, Hon. W. R. Castle is also a member of that Board remaining over from the former Board. The closing sentence of that paragraph is also liable to produce a wrong impression. No change whatever has been made in the relation which the Trustees hold to the school, nor in the responsibility which devolves upon them to see that the school is managed in accordance with the same general principles under which its care was committed to the former Board.

The only change made is in placing two ladies upon the Board, and in arranging that hereafter, one Trustee shall go out each year, and their successors shall be elected for a term of five years. The Board now consists of Mr. J. B. Atherton elected for one year, Mrs. P. C. Jones, 2 years; Mrs. C. M. Cooke, 3 years; Rev. E. S. Timoteo, 4 years; Hon. W. R. Castle, 5 years.

MAUNA LOA!

LOOKS LIKE ANOTHER FLOW.

The Kinau brought news this morning confirmatory of what we published a week ago, respecting indications of an outbreak on Mauna Loa. The following letter is from a responsible gentleman at Hilo, who is known not to be in the habit of making exaggerated statements:—

About 8 A. M., Feb. 17th, a dense column of smoke was seen to shoot up from the terminal crater of 181 on Mauna Loa. Parties watching it distinctly saw the dense puffs of smoke—starting from the said crater and descend the side of the mountain, continually rising in a line following the flows of '56 and '81, apparently rushing down the side of the mountain at a tremendous rate. D. H. Hitchcock starts up with a party on the 18th, he being sure that this is no mere spurt, but the final outbreak of pahoehoe that has been predicted as sure to follow the recent flow in Kau.

Hilo, Feb. 17, 1887.
Mrs. E. P. Baker, of Hilo, writes, under date of February 17th, to the Rev. E. C. Ogel of this city as follows:—"My husband has not yet returned from the mountain. He reached Kapapala just in season to send a few lines by the mailman, who reached Hilo last evening. Mr. Baker writes, 'I can give no details. Am greatly exhausted. Have had the most severe and even terrible experience of my life, though I am no stranger to the hardships of mountain climbing. But I am glad I went.' A telephonic message just received says, 'Fire on the mountain—another lava flow.'"

A postal card from Hilo says:—A lava flow has broken out on the side of Mauna Loa and is evidently running down the mountain towards Kapapala, or in that vicinity. It seems to be going very fast and we can plainly see it from here. The light was seen last night from Keau, spouting lava below Mokuaweewo on the Kau side of the mountain. I think it will be a big flow and those who went to the volcano by the last steamer will have a good view of it.

ATTRACTIONS ON HAWAII.

The Kinau will leave on the regular "Volcano trip" on Monday, at 4 o'clock P. M. According to latest accounts from Hawaii, published in to-day's paper, those who go by this trip will have an opportunity of seeing unusual volcanic activity at Mauna Loa. "Taffy" appears to have returned home, and to be in waiting for visitors. The latest intelligence from Kilauea speaks of unusual activity at Halemauau, also.
