A SUGGESTION.
The steamship Umatilla which departs from this port to-morrow afternoon, will carry away an unusually large number of passengers, besides a full cargo of domestic produce.

In view of the fact that we are constantly hearing of people in all parts of the world displaying the most lamentable ignorance as to where our beautiful islands are situated and what they are like, we would suggest to those leaving for foreign parts, that they can be of great assistance in spreading correct information about the islands.

ANGLICAN DIOCESAN SYNOD.
The first session of the Third Diocesan Synod of the Anglican Church in Hawaii was opened Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock, by a celebration of the Holy Communion in the Cathedral.

THE SWISS WARBLERS AND MALTBY.
A very good house greeted the Swiss warblers and Maltby the cyclist last evening. The entertainment was a brilliant success, the Swiss warblers being received with the most enthusiastic approval.

PARACHUTE DESCENT AT BARNES.
A large crowd assembled in the grounds of the Red Lion Hotel, Barnes, yesterday afternoon, to witness the balloon ascent and parachute descent of Professor Williams, an aeronaut described as "the American firm of Messrs. Williams and Young."

A CONVENTIONAL TRIP TO THE VOLCANO.

Seven of the teachers, after the severe strain of the Convention and Normal Class, decided that a trip to the Volcano would be just the thing to recuperate their tired brains, and so started off on the morning of the 29th April, with a stranger from San Francisco and the guide, making in all, nine.

After a few hours of travel, the party arrived at the site of the old Halfway House, and there took lunch. Everything was very dry, and there was some difficulty in finding water. This is the result of the recent drought.

Before breakfast the next morning, five of the ladies took the sulphur bath, which refreshed them a great deal, and they recommended the bath to all tired travelers.

After prayer by the Bishop, who presided, the Treasurer, Henry Smith, read his report, which was accepted.

MARK TWAIN.

THE LATEST ASPECT OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Following is the full text of the speech delivered by Mark Twain at a banquet recently given in New York to the baseball players who went around the world:

"Though not a native, as anticipated by the Chairman, I have visited, a great many years ago, the Sandwich Islands—that peaceful land, that beautiful land, that far off home of pure and repose, and soft indolence, and dreamy solitude, where life is one long, stumberless Sabbath, the climate one long, delicious summer day, and the good that die experience no change, for they but fall asleep in one heaven and wake up in another. And these boys have played baseball there—baseball, which is the very symbol, the outward and visible, and such a struggle of the 'raging, tearing, howling nineteenth century! One cannot realize it, the place and the fact are so incongruous; it's like interrupting a funeral with a circus. Why, there's no legitimate point of contact, no possible kinship between baseball and the Sandwich Islands; baseball is all fact, the islands all sentiment. In baseball you've got to do everything just right or you can't stay there. You do it wrong to get it right, for if you do it right you get it wrong; there isn't any way to get it right, but to do it wrong, and the wronger you do the righter it is.

"The natives illustrate this every day. They never mount a horse from the harbor side, they always mount him from the starboard. On the other hand they never milk a cow on the starboard side; they always milk her on the harbor; it's why you see so many short people there—they've got their heads kicked off.

"When they meet on the road they don't turn out to the right; they turn out to the left. And so, from always doing everything wrong and first that way, it makes them left-handed—left-handed and cross-eyed; they are all so.

"In those islands the cats haven't any tails and the snakes haven't any teeth; and what is still more irregular, the man that loses a game gets the pot. As to dress, the women all wear a single garment, but the men don't. No, the men don't wear anything at all; they hate display. When they wear a smile they think they are over-dressed.

"Speaking of birds, the only bird there that has ornamental feathers has only two, just barely enough to squeeze through with, and they are under its wings instead of on top of its head, where, of course, they ought to be to do any good.

"The native language is soft, liquid and flexible, and in every way efficient and satisfactory, till you get mad. Then there you are; there isn't anything in it to swear with. Good judges all say it is the best Sunday language there is, but then all the other six days in the week it just hangs idle in your hands. It isn't any good for business, and you can't work a telephone with it. Many a time the attention of the missionaries has been called to this defect, and they are always promising they are going to fix it; but no, they go fooling along and fooling along, and nothing is done.

"Speaking of education, everybody there is educated, from the highest to the lowest. In fact, it is the only country in the world where education is actual and universal. And yet every now and then you run across instances of ignorance that are simply revolting—simply degrading to the human race. Think of it—there the ten takes the ace! But let us not dwell on such things, they make a person ashamed. Well, the missionaries are always going to fix that, but they put it off, and put it off, and put it off, and so that nation is going to keep on going down, and down, and down, till some day you will see a pair of jacks beat a straight flush.

"Well, it is refreshment to the jaded, water to the thirsty, to look upon men who have so lately breathed the soft airs of those isles of the Blest, and had before their eyes the inextinguishable vision of their beauty. No alien land in all the world has any deep, strong charm for me but that one, no other land could so longingly and so beseechingly haunt me, sleeping and waking, through half a lifetime, as that one has done. Other things leave me, but it abides; other things change, but it remains the same. For me its balmy airs are always blowing, its summer stars flashing in the sun, the pulsing of its surf-beat is in my ear; I can see its garlanded crags, its leaping cascades, its plummy palms drooping by the shore, its remote summits floating like islands above the cloud-rack; I can feel the spirit of its woodland solitudes, I can hear the splash of its brooks, in my nostrils still lives the breath of flowers that perished twenty years ago. And these world wanderers who sit before us here have lately looked upon these things! and with eyes of flesh, not the unsatisfying vision of the spirit. I envy them that!

"Yes, and I would envy them somewhat of the glories they have achieved in their illustrious march about the mighty circumference of the earth, if it were fair; but no, it was an earned run, and envy would be out of place. I will rather applaud—add my hail and welcome to the vast shout now going up from Maine to the Gulf, from the Florida Keys to frozen Alaska, out of the throats of the other 65,000,000 of their countrymen. They have carried the American name to the uttermost parts of the earth, and covered it with glory every time. That is a service to sentiment; but they did the general world a large practical service also—a service to the great science of geography. Ah! think of that!—we don't talk enough about it, we don't give it its full value. Why, when these boys started out you couldn't see the equator at all; you couldn't walk right over it and never know it was there. That is the kind of an equator it was. Such an equator as that isn't use to any body. As for me, I would rather not have any equator at all than a dim thing like that that you can't see. But that is all fixed now; you can see it now; you can run over it now and not know it's there, and so I drink long life to the boys who plowed a new equator round the globe, stealing bases on their bellies!"
