THE DAILY BULLETIN.

Pledged to neither Sect nor Party, But Established for the Benefit of All.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 15, 1892.

The Advertiser says this morning, "We are willing to sacrifice piquancy to fairness." This open confession of its practice in the past of sacrificing fairness (and truth also) to piquancy and several other things is refreshing. We hope in the future to see a regenerate Advertiser actually telling the truth, supporting honest deeds, and working for the best interests of the community and country. Keep on, neighbor, you'll get there if you try hard enough.

The Advertiser's bantering, the Liberal, says: "Send for one of these gentlemen to form a Cabinet, they are the only ones who can be called leaders: L. A. Thurston, Juno. E. Bush, H. P. Baldwin, R. W. Wilcox, W. O. Smith, Jos. Nawahi. No matter what the opinion of these men may be, they are too honorable to undermine the throne while they hold your commission." The secret is out at last. If these gentlemen can hold a ministerial portfolio and lead a cabinet of their own choosing, they are then too honorable to try to undermine the throne. If they cannot get that, what then? We hope that the logical conclusion to the above remarks will be immediately disclaimed by the gentlemen referred to publicly repudiating any such intentions or desires.

Mr. T. R. Walker, who is a leading Hawaiian merchant as well as the British Vice-Consul, is not responsible to his Government for everything he says or does except in his official capacity. As a resident of this country he is as much entitled to express his views publicly on the political situation as any other resident, even if the other is a member of the consular or diplomatic corps. But Mr. Walker has in no sense of the word expressed his views on the political situation or its causes or effects. He has simply pointed out that the Advertiser editorially has made statements derogatory to the Sovereign of the country to which he is accredited, which its own proofs and arguments do not bear out, and that these statements may be prejudicial to the interests of this country abroad. Many people, however, desire to suppress any fair or true statement or expression of opinion which does not coincide with their own views and schemes, and this no doubt is the cause of the abuse heaped daily on Mr. Walker's head.

Messrs. Thurston, W. O. Smith and R. W. Wilcox made the most dastardly and outrageous charge last night against political opponents that could be made. They charged the Cabinet and the Marshal with spiriting away or being privy to the disappearance of the Hon. P. P. Kanoa, claimed to be a supporter of the Opposition, in order to prevent his voting in favor of the motion of want of confidence. Notwithstanding the absolute denial of the Attorney-General on behalf of himself, his colleagues and the Marshal, or anyone acting on their behalf, of any knowledge as to the whereabouts of the missing member, or of any action on their parts leading to his absence, these gentlemen reiterated their foul aspersions and vile imaginings in order to make political capital against their opponents and create a feeling that they were capable of any trickery. Their political ruse will, however, recoil on their own heads, as all such despicable, unfounded and cowardly malignings of honest opponents should do.

Alone in a Big House.

There is one man in Bar Harbor who has room enough and to spare, says a Bar Harbor letter to the Lewiston Journal. He has sumptuous apartments, dining room capable of seating several hundred, some fifteen or twenty parlors, mammoth music room, and nearly 600 rooms for his guests should he care to entertain. This fortunate man is George Baldwin Newell, of New York, the commodore of the Mount Desert Canoe Club, and one of the best known society men in the place.

For many years Mr. Newell has been coming to Bar Harbor, and has always had the same room at the Rodiek House, which had become the headquarters of the boating fraternity. When he came this year he was thunderstruck to hear that the Rodiek House was not to open. When he was told that he could not have his old room, so full of pleasant associations, he made up his mind that heroic measures were necessary and proceeded accordingly.

Commodore Newell ordered his luggage taken to his old room at the famous house. He took possession immediately and has occupied his old quarters ever since. He has to have his work done by his own attendants and rooms in peace all alone in this big house of nearly 700 rooms.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Water Question.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—I read the article by A. B. C. in last night's BULLETIN on the water question, and I can say that every word he writes is the truth. For I carried last night one hundred buckets of water and have been doing it for a week. We on Punch-bowl have to stay up until two or three o'clock in the morning so as to get enough water to last through the day. The Superintendent of Water Works is the right man in the right place and does the best he can under the circumstances. But what we want is the Legislature to take the matter up and appropriate enough money for several artesian wells and a pumping plant. Come, Legislature, get a move on you. P. J. V.

Not Quite American.

A correspondent in this morning's Advertiser, who apparently is an American of the spread-eagle type, states, "These islands are American as much as Australia is English or Algiers, French." Australia is English by right of discovery and exclusive settlement. Algiers is French by right of conquest and military occupation. Hawaii is American by right of neither of these claims. If the other statements of the correspondent are not based on any greater truths than the above, the whole of his assertions fall to the ground, as simply the bluffing assertions of one who desires to create the feeling that he is the spokesman of a party. SPECTATOR.

Something New in Ranges.

The PACIFIC HARDWARE CO. (L'd), have just received an invoice of the M. & D. WROUGHT STEEL RANGES which are superior to anything of the kind yet invented. They have been adopted by the United States Navy and are in use on the Charleston, San Francisco and Boston and other new vessels. Also on several of the new vessels lately built for the trade between San Francisco and this port.

An examination of these Ranges will at once show their many advantages over all competitors.

Take Good Care of the Children.

If you have children you will be interested in the experience of Mr. John Cook, of Pilot, Vermillion Co., Ill. He says: "Two years ago two of my family, a young man and a girl, had very severe and dangerous attacks of bloody flux. The doctor here was unable, after a week's time, to check or relieve either case. I threw the doctor overboard and began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Improvement was seen very soon and my children arose in a few days from what I feared would be their death." For sale by all dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., Agents.

Old Rags Wanted.

Clean white rags, suitable for bandages, are wanted for use at the Bishop Home and the Boys' Home, Leper Settlement, Molokai. Ring up 281 Mutual telephone, and they will be sent for; or leave the same at the office of the Board of Health, or at J. T. Waterhouse's, Queen street.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Evening Session.

The Assembly again reconvened for the further consideration of the want of confidence resolution at 7:30 p. m. sharp. The interior of the House was filled to suffocation almost, but many representatives of the fair sex gave a relief to the heavy air which surrounded the general multitude.

Rep. Waipulani said that Rep. Wilder had stated that the supporters of the Lottery scheme were supporters of the Cabinet. He was satisfied that could not be so as he supported the Cabinet but did not support the Lottery.

Rep. Wilder—You don't! Well, I am glad to hear that.

Rep. Waipulani (continuing), said that in the resolution forwarded from the caucus there was no right reserved that the members of that caucus should form that Cabinet or that they could discharge the new Cabinet on appointment. The Queen had complied by the appointment of Messrs. Peterson and Macfarlane. The letter sent to Her Majesty was not from the House but from the members in their private capacity as citizens in caucus. That was the reason that audience was refused to Rep. Bush: he would not have been refused as a member of the House.

Noble Peterson said just before recess the House had heard an hour's oration on representative government. It was a grand oration, full of glittering generalities. It told enough to fill a constitution, but contained very little on the matter before us to-day. The hon. gentleman said they had taken a stand for representative government, and they intended to follow it to the end. In 1890, when the Reform party was put out, did it insist on the King sending for a leader of the National Reform party? That was the time when they should have taken this stand. The hon. Noble had a great deal to say about the rule of the majority, etc. Majority of what? Of the people. The most he had heard of that was from three Nobles. One of them went to Hawaii to be elected by his own plantation. Another bethought himself of his own homestead and remembering his early piety and goodness, thought they would give him a chance. Another went to Maui because he wanted to be elected as he said, and was not running for fun. What did the speech amount to? The only thing in it is the complaint that two of the old Cabinet had come back, and the Premier had not consulted his colleagues in the House. The speaker then read the resolution presented to Her Majesty. He had been called in accordance with that resolution to form a Cabinet. The objection had been made that he was not a leading member of the opposition. One Noble had said, Who's Peterson? Who'd think of calling him? The man was probably so filled with a consciousness of his own importance that the rest of the world looked like pigmies to him. He had been asked if he would confer with a committee of the caucus, and he had said he would do so. False statements had been made about him.

Rep. Smith rose to a point of order. The hon. member was talking solely about himself. No want of confidence motion against him had been brought in.

Noble Peterson said that he was explaining the situation. The discussion in committee had been private, yet a column and a half account of it appeared in the Advertiser which contained, however, some suspicious omissions. His last proposition had been to give the Reform party three men, he insisting on but one, the present Attorney-General. This offer was refused. The next morning he renewed his offer. The answer was, "it is impossible." I therefore told the Queen I could not form a Cabinet owing to the obstacles placed in my way—intentionally as I thought—though I did not say so. She then called Mr. Macfarlane. This statement shows that Her Majesty has done everything she could. The majority which voted out the last Cabinet was drawn from three parties, why then should her choice of a premier be confined to any particular one. (The speaker then read the resolution under consideration.) The resolution alleges as a reason why the Cabinet should be voted out that it does not possess the confidence of the House. That can only be determined after a vote. The only other ground is as to the coming back of members of the old Cabinet. He said that members of the old Cabinet should not come back. But he had been advised that it was less objectionable to call one who had not been premier—and two-thirds of this very majority had agreed to take Mr. Parker back. He would ask Rep. Smith and others if that was not so?

Some questioning was indulged in by Minister Neumann, Rep. Smith, Noble Young and Noble Baldwin and then

Noble Peterson continued, saying: They admit the soft impeachment. The only other objection is that the caucus was not consulted. Where are the authorities for that? It is a thing unheard of. Does Mr. Gladstone consult the member from Tipperary when he forms his Cabinet? They put all this opposition on principle, but it doesn't appear where the principle comes in.

Rep. Ashford was disappointed in not hearing an argument from the last speaker. He continued at length and closed by saying that he could see the blacksmith behind it all; he is handling them; he is the one who seized the Minister of Finance by the throat, flung him into his Cabinet and said "sit there" and the member sat. Those four gentlemen have that man as their master to-day and they have to bow down and respect him as such.

Noble Neumann said I wish the gentleman would not be abusive. Rep. Ashford (continuing)—The question is, shall this Legislature be supreme or shall His Eminence the Marshal be supreme? That is the question.

Minister Neumann—The Marshal is not supreme; that statement is untrue. It should not be made. Rep. Ashford—Thought I heard a voice say that that was untrue. Will the Attorney-General say that instead of going to his office last Monday he did not go down on Merchant street between Brown's and Luce's stores and advise with His Eminence?

Minister Neumann—That statement is untrue.

Rep. Ashford I did not hear; did you say that was true or untrue? Minister Neumann—I said that it was untrue! More, I say that it is a lie. (Applause)

Rep. Ashford was sorry to hear such unparliamentary language. Did not say that he knew that the Minister was there; he had been told so. Minister Neumann—It does not refer to you if you did not say you knew but is intended for your eyes.

Rep. Ashford said that the Marshal had a monopoly of the spying business. He himself had seen some of the Ministers in company with the Marshal. All know that opium is being brought in by the ton; that vice is running riot and with the consent and connivance of the Police Department of which the Marshal is the head. All know this Cabinet is the creation of that man. Everything that came from that man including the present Cabinet must smack of the fa and smell of opium. He would not go so far as to say that the present Attorney-General wants to keep in the Cabinet, but will say he is only keeping it warm for another gentleman in the House. He spoke at greater length and ended by saying that the question was simply this, "if God be God follow him, but if Bolobola be God follow him!" Rep. Nawahi wanted argument on the resolution nothing outside. If this resolution was adopted it would be cited in the future as a rule: it would be a very bad precedent as no one would then care to come in if any Cabinet could be removed immediately on taking their seats.

Rep. Kamatoha stated, in answer to a charge of Noble Thurston that some of the 31 caucus members had gone back on their promises, that the Queen having accepted the proposition presented and acted in accordance therewith they were not pledged to any more. Enough talk had been indulged in and so he would now move the previous question.

Noble Thurston (rising quickly) said that he would like to know where Noble Kanoa was. He knew that he (the member) had been looked for, but could not be found. It was promised that he was kept away against his will. Probably locked up in the Palace. If the Cabinet were aware of this it was a dastardly outrage.

Minister Neumann said that he had heard something like that mentioned some while ago; he judged there was no truth in the rumor, but had sent to the Palace and had been informed that the missing member was not there. The Cabinet knew nothing of the whereabouts of Noble Kanoa.

Rep. Smith would move to adjourn until to-morrow at 10:30 o'clock; everybody should be in favor of fair play. Noble Kanoa was taken away by the Marshal. Do not say that the Cabinet were aware of the action. Do not say that P. P. Kanoa is now in the Palace, but do say he was called out by a note and he went away with the Marshal. He is not at his house; he cannot be found.

At 10:15 the motion to adjourn to 10:30 a. m. was put amid considerable confusion, Rep. R. W. Wilcox, Rep. White, Rep. Bush and Rep. Ashford all attempting to obtain the floor. Rep. Wilcox finally obtained possession and stated that he was now opposed to the Cabinet. If Noble Kanoa had not been taken away by the knowledge of the Cabinet it had been accomplished by some of their subordinates.

Noble Neumann denied emphatically that the Cabinet had any know-

"German Syrup"

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain, or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as children's troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Rosch's German Syrup the favorite family medicine.
