A TELEPHONE NEWSPAPER.

THERE IS ACTUALLY ONE IN EXISTENCE.

How Six Thousand Residents of the Capital of Hungary Get Their News.

How many people outside of newspaper offices in this portion of the world know that such an institution as a telephone newspaper is in existence? The answer would be "Very few, if any." And yet in Budapest, the capital of Hungary, six thousand subscribers get their daily news through the medium of a telephone, which seems to be a combination of the telephone and phonograph as the voice of the reader is heard much louder and more clearly than by the everyday telephone in use. This novelty in the dissemination of news goes on all day long, from early morn till late at night, giving the very latest news at the expense to subscribers of two cents per day. The telephone newspaper is already a success and it will not be long before it will be found in every city of any magnitude.

A correspondent writes from Budapest to an American paper the following interesting description of the telephone newspaper as he first heard it: "While I was dressing in the morning, the hotel servant knocked at my door and asked if I wanted the telephone paper, he then handed me two receivers about the size of a pocket watch, attached to long cords, which could be fastened to the bed if one felt disinclined to get up, or to the armchair or elsewhere to suit one's convenience. 'The newspaper will begin to speak directly,' remarked the servant, 'and will go on speaking until late in the evening. We don't charge our visitors anything for it, as it only costs us a penny a day.' The Budapest telephone newspaper was founded by Theodor Puskas, a native of Transylvania, and a friend of Edison. His original idea was to start a telegraphic newspaper, but he finally decided that the telephone was the better medium for his purpose, and the first number of the Telephone Hirondo was published on February 15, 1893. Puskas died a month afterward, but his unique scheme has turned out an extraordinary success. The paper is available everywhere in the city, in places of amusement, doctors' waiting-rooms, restaurants, stores of all kinds, offices of merchants, bankers and lawyers, in hospitals and in private houses, for the use of aged people to whom reading is fatiguing. Although the paper speaks all day, the information is carefully classified, and each subscriber has a program by which he can tell what kind of news is about to be given at any period of the day. At 8.30 the day's work is begun by the reading in a clear, sonorous voice, quite free from the nasal twang of many telephones, of the telegrams received in the night from America and the different parts of Europe. At 8.45 follows the daily calendar with metropolitan news, and the list of strangers who have arrived in the city up to the previous night. Then comes official news, contents of the official gazette, etc., and at specified hours are heard, in turn, reports on the opening of the stock and corn exchanges, local and ecclesiastical news, theatricals, art and science notices. From a quarter-past 11 to half-past 11 information is given on foreign, provincial and sporting matters, and then to a quarter to 12 reports arrive from the Vienna stock and corn exchanges, with all sorts of military, court and political items. Early in the afternoon, when the sitting of the Reichstag begins, the Parliamentary report is supplied every ten minutes. The office is in telephonic communication with the Reichstag, and it often happens that important speeches from Ministers and members are known to the public while the speaker is still addressing the House. A short summary of all important items is given at noon, and again in the evening, for those who may have missed any of them. Toward evening, when news is growing scarce, the subscribers are entertained with vocal and instrumental concerts, quartettes and solos—the latter given by the most talented artists of the capital. Literary articles or feuilletons by such favored writers as Maurus Jokai or Victor Rakosy, are often spoken into the telephone by the authors themselves. All this is given to the subscriber for one penny a day, and both wire and apparatus are conveyed to his house free of expense. There are now 6000 subscribers. The organization of the staff resembles that of any other big paper. Ten men with strong voices and clear articulation act as speakers, and take their turn in shifts of two at a time. When any important event is about to be read a shrill warning blast is sounded.

An Important Office.

To properly fill its office and functions, it is important that the blood be pure. When it is in such a condition, the body is almost certain to be healthy. A complaint at this time is catarrh in some of its various forms. A slight cold develops the disease in the head. Droppings of corruptions passing into the lungs bring on consumption. The only way to cure this disease is to purify the blood. The most obstinate cases of catarrh yield to the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla as if by magic, simply because it reaches the seat of the disease, and by purifying and vitalizing the blood, removes the disease. Not only does Hood's Sarsaparilla do this but it gives renewed vigor to the whole system, making it possible for good health to reign supreme.

STEVENSON MEMORIAL.

Contribution Asked from Honolulu for a Memorial in San Francisco.

At its meeting last night, the Honolulu Scottish Thistle Club considered a circular, inviting contributions toward a memorial to the late Robert Louis Stevenson in San Francisco. The circular says:

"Robert Louis Stevenson is dead, and with a sense of our debt to him for all he has given us—the delight of his art, the freshened zest for life—some acknowledgment seems fitting. 'He dwelt for a time with us, and added a distinction to our cosmopolitanism, to our picturesqueness, by recognizing both. It was here in San Francisco that he suffered and enjoyed such a varied fortune, and here he played out part of the drama of his life. 'With this in mind, it is proposed that a simple drinking fountain be set up as a memorial to him, in the old plaza (the heart of the life he found so interesting)—a memorial to him, and the chance for the cup of cold water to the stranger and the waif left by the ebb tide. 'You are invited to subscribe to this memorial.'"

The State of Georgia has developed greatly since the war, the estimate now reaching the respectable total of $251,963,124.

ONLY TWO MORE DAYS

AND THE BICYCLE CONTEST WILL BE ENDED.

Monday and Tuesday Next Will be the Last Days in Which Ballots Will be Printed.

On Wednesday next, at 12 o'clock noon the committee which has in charge the BULLETIN'S Bicycle Contest will assemble for the last time, and after counting the ballots cast in the previous twenty-four hours will declare the final result, and the young lady who has obtained the highest number of votes will receive as soon afterwards as possible the most popular ladies' wheel as determined by the count. Subscribers of the BULLETIN should save all the ballots of the last two days and deposit them in the box before Wednesday at noon. Today's ballots must go in before noon of Tuesday. The contest is so close at present writing that an extra effort for the last three days may win the wheel for any young lady. The result of today's count shows that Miss Annie Clark's friends have been working hard for her since yesterday, that young lady having gained 172 votes in the day's balloting, which again puts her in the lead. Miss Newton takes second place with 412 votes, while Miss Mabel Robertson is still a good third.

In the contest for the most popular wheel, the Monarch still leads with 3812 votes. The Rambler put on a sport today but only succeeded in decreasing the Monarch's lead 125 votes. There was little difference in the vote for the other wheels.

The following table shows the complete vote up to noon today:

DID IT WITH ONE ARM.

One of Buffalo Bill's Experiences in a Dice Game in Chicago.

Major John E. Burke vouches for a good story of Buffalo Bill when that worthy had settled down from his roving career to "ranching." A time came to send a big bunch of cattle on East to the market, and Buffalo Bill concluded to go on to Chicago and arrange the sale. He met five or six of the big cattle barons, all just spoiling with money. Cody had a little wad himself. They met in the Palmer House, and were good-naturedly quarreling as to who should buy the next bottle of wine. Everybody wanted to buy, so it was settled that they should throw dice, reversing the general game, by "sticking the high man." Matters became swift in a little while, and before long they were throwing for a pile of double eagles and greenbacks.

At this point One-Armed Ike, a well-known confidence man and one of the best sharpers in the country, became aware that all these people were in town with money to burn. He wanted a little of it, so he dressed himself to play the part of a cattle raiser from Texas. In this guise he walked up to Cody's party with the breezy Western style so well known and introduced himself.

"I've just sold a big bunch of cattle boys, and I'm full of money from feet up. What'll ye have?"

His advent pleased the party. All were looking for sport, and here was a jolly, good-natured fresh Texan, with an odor of the mesquite about him. The alleged Texan was soon tossing the dice with the rest, and before the party broke up the one-armed scamp had about $1,700 of Buffalo Bill's coin and the rest of the party were poorer to the tune of $2,000 to $3,000. The Pinkerton people became aware of Ike's game, and early next morning a detective hunted up several of the cattle barons and told them they had been "skinned." They were mad clear through and hunted up Cody. The latter was still in bed when they burst into the room.

"Get up, Bill. We've been done by a shoe-string gambler. Get on your outfit and let's corral the—." The facts were laid before Cody, who said nothing, but crawled out of bed and dropped on his knees in the attitude of prayer.

"What'll ail you, Bill?" said one; "get a move on, get your traps on and be— quick about it."

"Gentlemen," said Buffalo Bill, still to all appearances praying, "drop on your knees and pray; this is a matter for prayer," and burying his head in the bed clothes he shook with laughter.

"What'n thunder ail you?" yelled one of the party, much incensed.

"Pray, I say, pray," said Cody; "you fellows want to thank God that he only has one arm. Think what he would have done to us with two arms."—Philadelphia Inquirer.
