AN UNFORGIVING SPIRIT.

This morning's Advertiser assumes the role of a prosecuting attorney who, not satisfied with having procured the conviction and sentence of a prisoner, follows the victim of the law with unrelenting malice beyond the sphere of his duties. It goes out of the province of an advocate of justice to insist upon revenge to the bitter end, in its efforts to influence in that direction the executive powers which, while invested with the execution of mandates from the courts, are above the courts in possessing the function of remitting penalties to prisoners. The Advertiser indulges in special pleading at length to induce the Executive to act differently toward the small remnant of prisoners of the insurrection from what it has done toward the great majority of them, including a number who were at the very head and front of the offending. It would have the Government be implacable and relentless for policy in the case of some few of the prisoners, after it has shown mercy for the sake of expediency—to the great bulk of them.

Like other advocates of a bad cause, the Advertiser makes things appear different from the facts. It says, "With the exception of the release of members of the rank and file on the Fourth of July this paper has opposed every movement pointing to the conditional and unconditional pardon of the leaders of the January fiasco." This passage would lead an outsider to believe that only followers—or "dupes" as they have been called—of the insurrectionary movement have been released. The fact is that some of the prime movers are at large in this country, not to mention a number who enjoy liberty in other lands. There is little or nothing in the cases of those remaining in prison to afford ground for any more apprehension of mischief on their part if released than may be felt with regard to any prisoners who have been released. No such fear is now felt with regard to any of the offenders of January, whether in or out of prison. And, as the Advertiser makes it faintly appear that its motive is the public security, it ought to produce some tangible reason for thinking that making an exception of the four or five broken men still incarcerated, so as to make them bear the penalties that have been lifted off others equally guilty, will have any practical effect in determining the continuance of domestic quietude.

Our contemporary would have the rebels still in prison suffer vicariously for the alleged "attitude" of their friends outside. Of these it remarks: "Provided they showed a disposition to accept the situation, gave up the idea that powder and bullets were the proper weapons for political warfare and, if they must continue to oppose the present conditions, would resort to the numerous legal methods at their disposal for settling political differences, then, and then only, would the Government be justified in extending its pardoning power to those who were still suffering the penalty for instigating rebellion among the ignorant classes." Pray, who gave them the idea that "powder and bullets were the proper weapons for political warfare"? Leaving out any reference to the genesis of the present establishment, what was the "attitude" of some of the ill-advised supporters of the Provisional Government and the Republic, for a long time prior to the outbreak of January? It was that of a bully with a chip on his shoulder, daring the opposition to make appeal to "powder and bullets" instead of to the United States Government, that had taken the question of the revolution of 1893 as one belonging to itself to adjudicate. When the United States and the other Powers recognized the Republic, a number of oppositionists did accept the situation, confined themselves to constitutional and loyal opposition with regard to measures, and used their influence to induce others to adopt a similar attitude.

However, the challenge was accepted, and a clumsy essay at war took place. The bellicose oppositionists were vanquished and, with the exception of a few who gave their lives for the cause, all were imprisoned. Now, since most of the prisoners have been released, the Advertiser wants the course of mercy blocked, because it assumes that those released and their friends are only sorry that the movement did not succeed, and that they are only standing on the outside to await an opportunity for another uprising in the hazy future. Here again the facts do not bear out the argument of the vindictive organ. The register of oaths to the Constitution belies it emphatically. Many of those who have come out of prison, including some sent there upon trial and some who were set at liberty or exiled temporarily without trial, have given in their adhesion on oath to the Republic. There is reason to believe that their number will be greatly increased when the Executive shall have performed full and unreserved clemency to the extent of opening the prison doors to those remaining behind them.

It is unreasonable to expect that such a violent change as that of January should be universally accepted by the people of all parties in one year or even five years. Ten years or perhaps a generation will not obliterate the sense of suffering wrong in the hearts of a large proportion, especially of the native Hawaiian population. Think of the generations in which the Jacobite sentiment survived in Scotland after the cause of Prince Charlie was practically lost. There is a lingering sympathy, after the lapse of thirty years, for the "lost cause" in the Southern States. Coming home to these islands, even, nothing but the disaster that overtook the Hawaiian so-called "national" cause in 1892-3 welded in a kind of way the Queen Emma and Kalakaua factions after a score of years' separation.

The trouble with the Advertiser is that its self-interest ever since 1892 has made it always eager to represent everybody and everything "not in accord" in every detail with the policy or the personnel of the administration as treasonable and inimical to existing public order and tranquility. Conciliation instead of irritation would, it is safe to say, have prevented the outbreak of January. Let us have conciliation now, the first step in which is clemency to crushed conspirators.

Hawaii can easily get along without sugar, according to the distinguished fair journalist now visiting the islands. It would not cause a ripple on the sea of national prosperity to wipe out the many millions of capital now invested in sugar plantations and mills, and let everybody live on wind while coffee and fruits for canning were being developed to take the place of our present mainstay! Let rice go too; it was a mistake ever to have allowed the Chinese to spoil our picturesque swamp lands! Miss Field is not going to write as she is reported to have talked, after she has had time to investigate the conditions of things here for herself.

How is it that wooden ceilings are allowed to be put in new buildings within the fire limits? Intending builders whom it may pay to have a similar exemption from the law would doubtless like to know how to get the "pull."

Massachusetts is one of the richest of the States, having a valuation of real and personal property amounting to $1,584,756,802.

Timely Topics

The able address by Mrs. Sturtevant-Peet, president of the California Woman's Christian Temperance Union, on the occasion of the annual convention of that body in San Francisco, contained a passage which takes strong ground on the benefits of the bicycle. In speaking of physical culture and the relation of the clothes to the subject, she said:

"All know the value of a strong unhindered body. For this reason the banishment of the corset and restricting bands is a foregone conclusion. * * * Dress reform has pressed its claims for forty years, with little progress till the bicycle, that graceful, silent steed of motion, dashes through and bursts open the door of prejudice. This mystic wheel that we meet on every road and street is the mute but telling advocate of dress reform. * * * It has its virtues as well as its charms. It invites, yea, demands, simplicity in dress. It encourages physical exercise and utterly refuses to carry a drunken rider. Unlike the horse, it balks when touched by the hand of inebriety. It inconveniences and discourages the use of cigars and cigarettes to the number of 65,000,000 a year. In short, the wheel is a reformer, and, though, it came not through the virtue of moral conception, we should welcome its presence as we do the advent of every new invention and corporate edict bearing the balm of sobriety, with the promise of stronger and better men and women."

This is a straightforward expression from an able woman who led the California forces of one of the greatest National organizations ever instituted for the uplifting of the race. The dignity and earnestness which characterize her opinion cast into the shades the hallow objections which some physicians have made to the bicycle. Mrs. Peet gives us to understand that in the sole aspect of requiring women to dress sensibly this simple instrument of locomotion has accomplished more at a dash than the preachers on sensible dress for women have been able to bring about in nearly half a century. With so eminent an indorsement as this, even the most timid woman who is not held in what amounts to physical restraint by father, husband or brother from obeying an instinctive impulse to dress rationally and enjoy life and health on a bicycle, may at least console herself with the reflection that her impulse was right and lament that she was born a few years too soon.

In addition to the above Mrs. Peet might have mentioned the saving in labor attained by the patent sprocket attached to the Tribune wheel, which amounts to over 15 per cent, no small desideratum when ladies are concerned. The Tribune is the wheel par excellence for ladies' use, it has the newest patents and improvements and can be run with 15 per cent less work than any other wheel in existence.
