TAILOR MADE FASHIONS.

Some Popular Materials—A Beautiful Thin Traveling Dress For Summer.

The coat of summer tailor made gowns that are made in the skirt and coat style—all are not—is left entirely open in front or is held together by one or two buttons only. The vest worn beneath it may be tight fitting and made of pique, or it may be full, of linen, mousseline de soie, silk or nainsook. If a Louis Quinze effect is desired, the coat must be a little longer in front than it is at the back, with large revers, wide at the top and tapering to the lower edge of the coat. The godets of the basque must be rather pronounced, and it should be short at the sides, not falling below the hips. These coats are lined in front with the goods of which they are composed and are adorned with stitching and fine pearl buttons only.

When tailor made bodices are tight fitting, they are lined with satinette, like any other corsage, the seams being carefully finished and boned. If they are half fitting or are to be worn over a silk or cotton waist that allows them to be removed at pleasure, so the lining will be likely to be seen, they are lined throughout with surah, satin merveilleux or silk serge. In this case the seams of the outside and the seams of the lining are sewed separately and pressed open with a warm iron, and the seams of the lining are then sewed against the seams of the outside, thus making a fair and smooth interior to the garment.

Serge, light cheviots, clairettes and thin cloths, besides the plainer canvases, are employed for tailor gowns for warm weather. Alpaca and mohair are also used and are very light and cool unless they are too heavily lined.

An illustration is given of a traveling costume of thin cloth in a light sable tone. The skirt is quite plain. The jacket has a plastron effect in the front, which is loose. A close row of small pearl buttons fastens the plastron at each side. The collar is of velvet. The felt hat, which matches the gown in color, is much like the derby in shape and is finished with a plain ribbon band.

White Petticoats For Light Dresses—Accordian Plaited Skirts For Summer.

Embroidered crape in large weaves is a feature of one of the newest and most expensive of fashionable mourning costumes.

White lawn, cambric and muslin petticoats are again in vogue for wear with light muslin and nainsook gowns. The best ones are those of what is called umbrella form—that is, with a flaring double or triple flounce about the foot. Lace and embroidery form the adornment.

Accordion plaited skirts will be worn during the warm weather, but only in thin and flexible materials.

White gloves are still the rule for dress occasions. They may be of mode or glace kid, according to the taste of the wearer. Glace kid is of course much more durable than mode, since it does not become soiled so easily and may be cleaned with less difficulty.

Small handkerchiefs of batiste, with a wide border of rose or blue or lavender and white embroidery, are carried with many varieties of costume, but the fine white handkerchief edged with valenciennes lace is more delicate and pretty than even these.

Green is having a decided vogue. When properly selected and employed, it is very refined and exclusive in its effect, but some of the harder shades, such as the keen emerald tones now sometimes seen, are crude and unpleasing. All the olive and gray greens are artistic and satisfactory, especially when combined with black. Green and brown is also a good combination, and green and blue is a strikingly fashionable one.

The sketch given today shows a gown of linen and taffeta. The skirt, of linen, has a flowered pattern. The bodice is of green glace taffeta in the bolero style. At both back and front are two large plaits, forming bretelles. The bolero opens in front over a chemisette of white lawn incrusted with lace. There is a very large, flaring collar of taffeta, beneath which, at the back, is a large bow of black satin, with a paste buckle. The belt is of taffeta and the sleeves of linen.

PURIFINE
Is the disinfectant that the world is talking about. In the United States its merits are becoming known. The people are using it. Purifine possesses many points in its favor over other preparations. It is odorless, and in employing it as a disinfecting agent, does not create another odor as offensive as that which it subdues. Non-poisonous too. That's an advantage—children will meddle; servants misunderstand; then there's trouble. Some one is poisoned.
Those who use it speak its praise in convincing language. Here's one from the Department of Medicine in the University of Michigan.
"We use Purifine and find it very good for deodorizing sinks and boxes, etc., and for washing sponges used about subjects for dissection. W. A. CAMPBELL, Demonstrator of Anatomy."
