STRANGE THINGS AT SEA.

A Cloud Cradled Frog and a Cat That Would Not Drown.

A remarkable story about the American ship Iroquois picking a live frog off a cloud in midocean excited a murmur of comment along the water front, and had the story come to port with almost any other man but Captain Taylor it might have been doubted. Taylor's reputation for veracity is well established in Portland, so the strange story was taken without a grain of salt and with only a few drinks of whisky. An unusual tale of the sea always brings to mind another, and the frog story of the Iroquois was no exception.

"There's strange things happen on board ship, sometimes," said Al Betts, the well known river pilot, "and scraping frogs off the clouds with a topmast is not the strangest. I remember an occurrence on board the old clipper Plum-duff, which was so remarkable that I am frequently accused of handling the truth in a careless manner when I relate it.

"The Plumduff was en route from Calcutta for the Columbia in ballast, and I was first mate under Captain Timbertoes. Among other live stock aboard was a maltese cat. The cat behaved very well for the first week or two, but when we got over the equator she made the night hideous with her incessant yowling. Old Timbertoes had the goat and did not sleep well anyway, and this infliction nearly made him crazy, so one night he came out, and, finding the cat in a good, convenient position, kicked her over into the sounding sea.

"The only witness to the deed was a lascar sailor at the wheel, and when he told the rest of the crew we almost had a mutiny on our hands, as they prophesied all sorts of bad luck would happen to the ship. Nothing came of it, however, and as we were in good ballast trim we came flying along in rattling shape, and about 90 days after leaving the Ganges our mudhook went down in Astoria harbor. In due season the custom house boat came out, and when the officers clambered aboard Denny Curran, the boatman, slacked away on his lanyard and his boat came around under the stern. A moment later we heard a yell, and Denny was coming up the ladder hand over hand as though the devil was after him, and in his boat, making a united chorus of 'meows,' was our old maltese cat and five half grown kittens.

"When Denny recovered his breath, he stated that, as his boat swung around under the stern, the animals immediately sprang off the top of the rudder, and the unusual sight nearly frightened him to death. We then went back and made an examination of the rudder and found that with her claws the abandoned cat had scratched a cavity out of the top of the rudder, and while the lascar sailors had been mourning her death she was engaged in rearing a family. The rudder, being high out of the water, of course prevented her getting wet very often, and a number of fishbones still reposing in the cavity indicated the diet which had kept her alive. She was taken ashore, and I think Scott Johnson, the Astoria stevedore, has some of her descendants yet, and to this day they will eat nothing but sea fish."—Portland Oregonian.
