HAWAII'S GREETINGS OVER THE CABLE

or influence, which is impracticable, but in opportunity, equality before the law that protects society and its units, the family and its members, and equality before that deeper law that touches the conscience and holds effort to its unchangeable moral anchorage.

The law of usefulness, the law of brotherhood, of which developed and instructed man is alike the product and the seer, are the safeguards of the multitudes, and when the willing mind supercedes compulsion and these laws are spontaneously obeyed, the standard of American institutions, resting upon personal sovereignty within the limits of the moral code, will be attained and vindicated, and our national flag, dedicated to "Liberty and Union, one and inseparable," will be the stainless emblem of purified self-government.

"Each man shall find his own in all men's good. And all men work in noble brotherhood."

It has been fallaciously said that the globe shrinks in size as the means of rapid communication are extended. The practical annihilation of distance is the motor of intellectual expansion. The invisible tie that brings races, nations and individuals into contact, enlarges the scope and power of nature, lifts mortality towards the arching heavens, and fills the mind with new worlds of breadth and light. It cleans the soul of its paltriness and fires the eye of strenuous youth with the presage of accumulating victories. The snarl of the pessimist becomes a poor echo of expiring barbarism. The faith of the optimist is suffused with an electric glow that brightens the entire horizon, and the bow of promise set in the eternal blue, pours its prismatic colors into the deepest post-holes of mental and moral putrefaction.

Such are the suggestions of the cable. In peace, in good-will, in onward and upward movement, flashed this way through the Pacific depths, in this latest achievement of the Christian and the commercial spirit, even the living dead, in the majesty of silence, may see the fruition of his consecrated labor.

If the electric fluid traverses all space, there is a sense in which the remote stars may listen to your exclamations. The wireless telegraphy of the universe may be charged with a Christmas token, of regenerating fraternity, borne from this tumultuous planet and spreading its thrills through the far-off heavens. From the material to the spiritual is the order of all durable progress, and in this elevating moment, the ancient signal of advance towards the ultimate goal is repeated and emphasized. As the Galilean shepherds heeded the angelic call, so let us accept the invitation of manifest destiny. "Finis coronat opus." Let the end crown the work.

There was a large crowd of interested people around in the cable office in the Young building this morning and the principal topic of conversation was the answer of the President to the message sent by Henry E. Cooper last night.

At 10:10 precisely of the clock in the operating room, the operator was called in the midst of his transmitting. The announcement was that of the President's message. Mr. Dickenson was hurriedly summoned from the superintendent's office by the operator, who left his chair for the purpose. In a moment an enthusiastic group clustered behind the operator and watched his pen glidingly tracing the words: "White House, Washington, January 2--Hon. H. E. Cooper, etc." Those in the party were Secretary Cooper, Mr. Dickenson, Commissioner of Lands E. S. Boyd, Senator Paul H. Isenberg, George R. Carter, J. A. Kennedy, J. W. Pratt and a Bulletin representative. Private Secretary A. G. Hawes, Jr., and Postmaster J. M. Oat joined the party before the receiving of the message was completed.

It took but a very short time for the taking down of this message from the President and in a few minutes it was handed to Secretary Hawes, who was waiting in the receiving room. Together with this message, which was addressed to Henry E. Cooper, there were four or five addressed to Governor Sanford B. Dole. The cable official who handed these cablegrams to Mr. Hawes stated that there were a large number of others for the Governor and that these would be sent up to the Capitol as soon as they could be prepared for delivery.

As soon as the message from President Roosevelt had been received, the wire was open for the sending of messages from bodies of business men of the city and others who had been invited so to do and Mr. Dickenson was kept busy all the remainder of the forenoon taking in the communications from anxious people who stood around. The greatest of courtesy was extended to all and Mr. Dickenson was in turn complimented on the successful establishment of communication between Hawaii and the remainder of the civilized world.

Among the most important messages received the cable office this morning for transmission were those of the consuls of various countries located at this port, telling their respective governments of the establishment of communication between the Territory of Hawaii and the rest of the world.

The majority of the cablegrams presented to the cable officials for transmission were very short but there were some sent out by private individuals which under the regular rates to be asked by the cable company would cost a small fortune.

The program as already published in the Bulletin will be followed. The band will be in attendance and it is expected that there will be two or three thousand people present.

A Chinaman fell at the corner of Fort and King streets this forenoon just outside the store of E. O. Hall & Son. It was thought he had had a fit but he soon began crying out in a loud tone of voice and it was seen that he was in pretty good shape physically. Finally, Willie Kwai Fong came along and asked the fellow what the matter was. He answered: "I am drunk. Yes, I am drunk." The Chinaman was put into a hack and sent to his home.

The Pacific Mail steamship Korea arrived off port from Yokohama and other Oriental ports early this morning after a fast but uneventful passage from Yokohama, which port she left December 24 at 2:12 p. m. Fine weather was enjoyed throughout the trip. The Korea did not try to make speed as she will hereafter run on schedule time. The steamship was docked at the Pacific Mail wharf, as the Channel wharf is filled with freight from the last steamer from the Orient.

The cable ship Silvertown arrived in port at about 11 o'clock today, after having spent the whole night out in the channel. Her work on the splicing of the deep sea cable having been completed at 4:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon and darkness coming on soon after that, the Silvertown remained outside until this morning for the purpose of picking up the mark buoy. Immediately after this work had been completed, she started for port and arrived at the time already given.

The doors of the cable office were closed at about 12:30 o'clock today, indicating that no more messages would be received and further, that the remainder of the afternoon would be given up to the tests which the cable experts will make on the cable from the but out at Sans Souci. These men came ashore between 12 and 1 o'clock and proceeded to Sans Souci.

As to the work of the cable ship on the cable yesterday afternoon it might be stated that shortly after 12:30 o'clock yesterday, the tape in the office of the cable company showed that communication had been established with the ship. It was announced by the experts aboard that half of the distance to the mark buoy of the deep sea cable had been covered, that everything was going well and that the ship would be able to complete her work during the day.

There was a wait of about three hours and then a message was sent from the cable ship that the end of the journey had been reached, the cable buoy picked up and that the San Francisco end of the cable was aboard the ship. Everything was in good shape. After the receipt of a few other messages from the ship, the people in the office here were told to look out for a message from San Francisco in about four hours.

At about half past eight o'clock the long unvarying line on the tape at the cable office showed variations and soon the word "San Francisco" was spelled out as has already been stated in another column.

At ten minutes after 1 o'clock today, the whistle of the Hawaiian Electric Company blew announcing the exercises at the Capitol building grounds which began at 2 o'clock sharp.
