HEALTH BOARD TO SUPERVISORS

The Board of Health met yesterday afternoon at the usual time and place, the following members being present: Dr. C. B. Cooper, president; Mark P. Robinson, Fred C. Smith, Dr. W. H. Mays, Attorney General Lorrin Andrews, E. C. Winston and John C. Mason.

The first business considered was the report of the committee to confer with the Supervisors. The report was made in the form of a letter, reading as follows:

"On the demand of the Administration for retrenchment in expenditures in all departments, at an executive session held December 31, 1903, by the Board of Health, the positions of the various Government physicians were declared vacant, for the reason that the bulk of the taxes go to county support, and this expenditure, which is almost exclusively a county benefit, should be borne by individual counties. The position of Government physician in the various districts here is analogous to the position of county physician in the counties of the various States and Territories of the mainland, and we believe there is not a single instance where such a provision is not made."

The health section of the County Act is quoted, as "a very wise provision for the carrying out of this most important measure," and the duties of Government physicians are fully quoted from the Territorial law on the subject, after which the letter concludes as follows:

"It is impossible for the Territory to keep up good work and accurate statistics without such a force of trained sanitarians. Our health experience in the past have been bitter and costly enough to warrant every effort to ward off a repetition that could be due to any neglect of the guardians of the interests and health of the Territory.

"Leaving out, as a matter of argument, the required duties of the Government physicians, the duties performed as registrars of their various districts have barely been paid by the small salaries received.

"For the best interests of the individual counties and the Territory as a whole, for the protection of public health and the efficiency of sanitary and health conditions and statistical records of this Territory, we would recommend that the provisions of this Act, as above stated be carried out by the Board of Supervisors in each individual county."

This letter was signed by the members of the committee, viz: Dr. Cooper, Dr. Mays and Attorney General Andrews. The report was adopted. A copy of the letter is to be sent to the board of supervisors of such county. It was decided that the committee should call on the Oahu supervisors to confer with them in regard to the matter of government physicians, call attention to the matter of dispensary, the needs of hospitals, etc.

THE GRIP OF HONOR

Cyrus Townsend Brady,

Author of "The Southerner," "In the Weep's Nest," Etc.

Copyright, 1900, by CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

The murmurs died away as young Brooks sprang up the ladder and reported that everything was ready. The boy officers choked down something that rose in their throats as they walked nervously up and down their divisions. A feeling thought they gave to home, mother, hours of play, so far away. It was the first battle for many of them. Down on the berth deck in front of the hatchway little Payne looked to the priming of his pistols and whispered a word or two to his men, who stood with their muskets pointing down through the gratings covering the hatchway. He wished he had been up on deck with the rest, fighting a great gun or attached to the side of the captain, but the captain had told him that the post of honor and importance was here, and here he would stand. There, on the starboard side, his young messmate and friend, McCollin, gave another careful inspection to his three old 18 pounders, firmly resolved to give such an account with them, if they did not burst, as would decide the action.

Cassell and Mayrant were in the forecastle to fight the two guns there. Mr. Mease, the purser, as brave a man as ever stepped a deck, though no sailor, had charge of the quarter deck guns. Stacey, the sailing master, stood at the wheel to assist in working the ship. Brooks and De Chamillard were on the poop near Jones. Fanning, with his bullets in the mainmast, was anxiously wishing that he, too, might have a place in the center of the conflict, the gun deck, little knowing what decisive moment was in store for him.

They were nearer now, well within gun shot, yet there was no sound from either ship. The tense expectancy of the moment was becoming unbearable to the younger hands. What were the captains of the ships about? Why didn't they fire? Away off on the horizon flashes of light and the deep boom of artillery reverberating across the water told that their consort had joined in battle with the Scarborough. Why were they so slow? Suddenly, in the midst of the silence, broken only by the soft sigh of the summer wind through the top hamper, the splashing of the bluff bows as they forced themselves through the rippling water, came the sound of a hail from the English ship, the words of which were indistinguishable.

"I don't understand you," cried Jones, then he turned to the quartermaster and said softly:

"Over with the helm! Hard a-starboard!" As the wheel was put over by the skillful hands of the quartermaster and his mate the great ship swung slowly to port and rounded off the port bow of the English ship. "This is the United States ship Bon Homme Richard," shouted Paul Jones in reply, at the top of his voice, springing up on the rail the while. "Stand by!" A quiver and shiver went through the ship from her tops to her very vitals. "Fire!"

Streams of light leaped out in the darkness. Clouds of smoke rose at once from the sides of the Richard, only to be met and brushed away by a broadside which had been delivered no less promptly from the English ship.

Goans and curses and yells and cheers rose from the blood stained decks upon which men writhed in the agony of ghastly wounds or lay contorted in hideous death where they had fallen, for at close range both broadsides had done fearful execution. The desperate men ran the huge guns in and out and loaded them with frantic energy and kept up a continuous cannonade upon their foes. The roar of the great guns drowned every other sound as the two ships sailed side by side in bitter conflict, but the trained ear of the American captain had detected another sound coincident with the first broadside which told a tale of disaster. When the loggers had been applied to the priming of two of the 18 pounders they had exploded with terrific concussion, killing and wounding nearly every man of their crews.

McCollin, who commanded the battery, was struck by a piece of iron and received a dreadful wound. He remained at his post, however, clinging tenaciously to a broken stanchion for a moment until he recovered himself a little. As the frightened and appalled men shrank away from the remaining gun of the battery, not yet discharged in view of the dreadful explosion, he seized the hot iron from the dead hand of the captain of No. 1 gun, and setting his lips grimly staggered over to the last cannon.

"Don't do it, sir!" hoarsely cried the old boatwain's mate who served under him. "It'll blow up with ye, as the others ha' done!" There was no reply. McCollin was beyond words. With set lips and grim face, in silence he wavered on before the awestruck men. With tottering steps he reached the gun and applied the iron. There was a blinding roar and the gun whirled in rapid recoil from the force of the discharge.

"Load it again," said the gasping boy, striving to stop the blood with his hand against his side. Before the men who, inspired by such heroism, had sprung eagerly forward, could reach the piece, an 18 pound shot from the Seraphis' lower deck struck it fair and square on the trunnion and dismounted it. That battery was useless. The explosion had made a gaping hole in the side of the Richard, through which the red lighted side of the Seraphis but a short distance away could be seen plainly. The deck above and below was badly shattered by the blowing up of the guns.

"All the men alive of this division," said McCollin thickly, "will find places at the divisions on the gun deck. We can do nothing more here. Goodby."

The ships were nearer now. The rifles of the Frenchmen were cracking and the fire from the great guns was continuous. The Richard had drawn well ahead, and fearful that the Seraphis would cross his stern and rake, Jones now shivered his headsails, threw his aftersails aback, checked the way of his own ship, and the Seraphis, firing madly into the smoke-drawn ahead of the Richard, Jones then put his helm up to try to cross her stern and rake. The quick handling of the English ship frustrated this plan. The bow of the Richard struck the port quarter of the Seraphis. The two ships hung together a moment, boarders were called on both sides, but before they could be used the two ships drifted apart and formed a line ahead, with not a single gun bearing on either ship. The roar of the guns gradually subsided, and even the crack of the small arms died away. The smoke drifted slowly off to leeward.

Prisoners Are To Work On The Roads Under Luna Pro Tem

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Oahu met in the usual place at 8 o'clock last night and after an hour and a half with salaries, adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning. The full board was present as were also Warden Henry of Oahu jail, Attorney Rawlins and Clerk Murray.

The first business taken up was the matter of the status of the prisoners at Oahu jail and the probability of the county being able to secure labor for the streets and parks from within the walls of the penitentiary. The situation was admittedly seriously complicated by the absence of Sheriff Brown, who left for Lanai in the Ironquits yesterday without having qualified as sheriff of the County of Oahu.

Mr. Henry expressed the opinion that Governor Carter would very probably allow the Territorial prisoners—those whose sentences are for a year or more—to go out on the roads and work for the county, provided the Board would furnish the requisite lunas. Next came some facts and figures about the prisoners at the jail. They were fat, were well fed, properly clothed and abed and lived on 21 1/2 cents a day.

Mr. Lucas wanted to know where the sheriff was. He had left no bond. He was anxious to get the prisoners out at work today. Mr. Henry answered that this was impossible. The lunas were scattered all over the city and could not be found at a moment's notice. It would be Friday before they could be re-engaged and sent out with the prisoners.

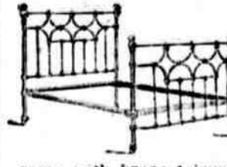

Mr. Henry was of the opinion that the prisoners might be sent out under Road Supervisor Vida until such time as the sheriff should qualify. Attorney Rawlins contended that these prisoners, according to the County Act, must be under the sheriff.

After much discussion Mr. Gilman finally moved that seven guards over prisoners loaned by the Territory be employed until further orders, six to be paid a sum per day not to exceed $2.55 and one not to exceed $3.85.

The bond of Andrew Brown, Superintendent of Water Works, placed at $5000, was approved, the Pacific Surety Co. being Mr. Brown's clerk. A seal for the county clerk and recorder's office was adopted. The seal of the District Magistrate of Wahiaina was found to be correct and satisfactory, and was approved. The salaries are W. H. Kaimali and John H. Kea.
