KALIHI CAMP LEASE

The following letters from the Superintendent of Public Works was read at the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday:

Department of Public Works, Honolulu, T. H., Feb. 17, 1904.
 Dr. C. B. Cooper, President of the Board of Health, Honolulu.

Sir:—I beg to hand you herewith a description and blue print of the property belonging to the Bishop Estate at Kapalama, and at present occupied by the pest house and the home for non-leprous children of leprous parents. The total area is 8.8 acres, and this piece of land is a part of that leased by the Government for a Detention Camp, said lease expiring in January, 1905.

As it is my intention to sell at auction the buildings used in the Detention Camp, and as I understand you wish to retain the portion at present used by your Department, I would suggest that you make application to the Bishop Estate for a new lease of the property described in the enclosed letter. In talking the matter over with Mr. Dodge, I believe that the Bishop Estate will make such a lease, and in case the rent paid is satisfactory they will probably agree to lease the property for a long term of years.

The Government has been paying $200 a year for 20 acres, which is at the rate of $30 per acre, and by special agreement the taxes were omitted.

I would also suggest that you obtain the right to connect a 3-inch pipe to the 12-inch main from the artesian well on the mauka side of the road with a supply of water from same, unobstructed by any valves or other devices for throttling or reducing the natural flow of water from the well.

At the present time, the pipe going to the Pest House and Sister's Home runs through the Detention Camp, but I think it would be advisable to have the pipe laid in the street and connecting to the 12-inch main outside of the Detention Camp, so that there would be no trouble in obtaining sufficient water at all times.

As I desire to advertise the Detention Camp for sale at an early date, I would request that you take this matter up with the Bishop Estate at your early convenience.

Yours respectfully,
 C. S. HOLLOWAY,
 Superintendent of Public Works.

The Board spoke in favor of the recommendation and left the matter in the hands of President Cooper.

INSANE ASYLUM PLAN

The following communication from Superintendent of Public Works C. S. Holloway was read at yesterday's Health Board meeting:

Department of Public Works, Honolulu, T. H., Feb. 4, 1904.
 C. Charlock, Esq., Secretary of the Board of Health, Honolulu:

Sir:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of the 4th inst., number 1415, enclosing copy of the resolution adopted by the standing committee of the Insane Asylum, and I note from same that the present asylum grounds have been approved as a site for the new buildings.

I will arrange to have the plans completed at an early date and same will be submitted to the Board of Health for approval.

Regarding the Government rock crusher in the rear of the Asylum grounds, I would say that at the present time there are no funds available for the removal of this plant, and I am seriously considering the advisability of selling the entire equipment at auction, as I believe that the Government has sufficient quarry capacity outside of the Insane Asylum quarry, and I also understand that the latter is about exhausted.

Yours respectfully,
 C. S. HOLLOWAY,
 Superintendent of Public Works.

LAZARRE

MARY HARTWELL CATHERWOOD

(Based Upon the Mystery Surrounding the Fate of the Dauphin, Son of Louis XVI, and Marie Antoinette)
 Copyright, 1901, by the BOWEN-MERRILL COMPANY

I cared no longer for my own loss, as I am afraid has been too much my way through life, or whether I was a prince or not. Like paradise after death, as so many of our best days come, this perfect day was given me by the marquis himself. Eagle's summer dress touched me. Paul and Ernestine sat facing us, and Paul ate cherries from a little basket and had his fingers wiped, beating the cushion with his heels in excess of impatience to begin again.

We paused at a turn of the height before descending, where fields could be seen stretching to the horizon, woods fair and clean as parks, without the wilderness of the American forest, and vineyards of bushy vines that bore the small black grapes. Eagle showed me the far boundaries of Paul's estates.

Best of all was coming to the chateau when the sun was about an hour high. The stone pillars of the gateway let us upon a terraced lawn, where a fountain played, keeping bent plumes of water in the air. The lofty chateau of white stone had a broad front with wings. Eagle bade me note the two doves or pigeon towers, distinctly separate structures, one flanking each wing and demonstrating the antiquity of the house, for only nobles in mediaeval days were accorded the privilege of keeping doves.

There was a pleached walk, like that in the marquis's garden, of branches flattened and plaited to form an arbor supported by tree columns, which led to a summer house of stone smothered in ivy. We walked back and forth under this thick roof of verdure. Eagle's cap of brown hair was roughened over her radiant face, and the open throat of her gown showed pulses beating in her neck. Her lifted chin almost touched my arm as I told her all the Mitau story at her request.

"Poor Mme. d'Angouleme! The cautious priest and the king should not have taken you from me like that! She knew you as I knew you, and a woman's knowing is better than a man's proofs. She will have times of doubting their policy. She will remember the expression of your mouth, your shrugs and gestures—the little traits of the child Louis that reappear in the man."

"I wish I had never gone to Mitau to give her a moment's distress."

"But that was a strange thing—that you should fall unconscious!"

"Not so strange," I said, and told her how many times before the eclipse—under the edge of which my boyhood was passed—had completely shadowed me. At the account of Ste. Pelagie she leaned toward me, her hands clinched on her breast. When we came to the Hotel Dieu she leaned back pallid against the stone.

"Dear Marquis du Plessy!" she whispered as his name entered the story.

When it was ended she drew some deep breaths in the silence.

"Sir, you must be very careful. That Bellenger is an evil man."

"But a weak one."

"There may be a strength of court policy behind him."

"The policy of the court at Mitau is evidently a policy of denial."

"Your sister believed in you."

"Yes, she believed in me."

"I don't understand," said Mme. de Ferrier, leaning forward on her arms, "why Bellenger had you in London and another boy on the mountain."

"Perhaps we shall never understand it."

"I don't understand why he makes it his business to follow you."

"Let us not trouble ourselves about Bellenger."

"But are you safe in France since the Marquis du Plessy's death?"

"I am safe tonight at least."

"Yes, far safer than you would be in Paris."

"And Skenedonk is my guard."

"I have sent a messenger to Plessy for him," Mme. de Ferrier said. "He will be here in the morning."

I thanked her for remembering him in the excitement of her coming. We heard a far, sweet call through a cleft of the hills, and Eagle turned her head.

"That must be the shepherd of Les Rochers. He has missed a lamb. Les Rochers is the most distant of our farms, but its night noises can be heard through an opening in the forest. Paul will soon be listening for the sound. We must drive to Les Rochers tomorrow. It was there that Cousin Philippe died."

I could not say how opportunely Cousin Philippe had died. The violation of her childhood by such a marriage rose up that instant a wordless tragedy.

"Sir, we are not observing etiquette in Mont-Louis as they observe it at Mitau. I have been talking very familiarly to my king. I will keep silent. You speak."

"Madame, you have forbidden me to speak."

She gave a startled look and said: "Did you know Jerome Bonaparte has come back? He left his wife in America. She cannot be received in France because she has committed the crime of marrying a prince. She is to be divorced for political reasons."

"Jerome Bonaparte is a hound!" I spoke hotly.

"And his wife a venturesome woman to marry even a temporary prince."

"I like her sort, madame."

"Do you, sire?"

"Yes; I like a woman who can love."

"And ruin?"

"How could you ruin me?"

"The Saint-Michels brought me up," said Eagle. "They taught me what is lawful and unlawful. I will never do an unlawful thing to the disgrace and shame of my house. A woman should build her house, not tear it down."

"What is unlawful?"

"It is unlawful for me to encourage the suit of my sovereign."

"Am I ever likely to be anything but what they call in Mitau a pretender, Eagle?"

"That we do not know. You shall keep yourself free from entanglements."

"I am free from them—God knows I am free enough—the loneliest, most unfriended savage that ever set out to conquer his own."

"You were born to greatness. Great things will come to you."

"If you loved me I could make them come."

"Sire, it isn't healthy to sit in the night air. We must go out of the dew."

"Oh, who would be healthy! Come to that, who would be such a royal beggar as I am?"

"Remember," she said gravely, "that your claim was in a manner recognized by one of the most cautious, one of the least ardent royalists in France."

The recognition she knew nothing about came to my lips, and I told her the whole story of the jewels. The snuffbox was in my pocket. Sophie Saint-Michel had often described it to her.

She sat and looked at me, contemplating the stupendous loss.

"The marquis advised me not to take them into Russia," I acknowledged.

"There is no robbery so terrible as the robbery committed by those who think they are doing right."

"I am one of the losing Bourbons."

"Can anything be hidden in that closet in the queen's dressing room?" mused Eagle. "I believe I could find it in the dark. Sophie told me so often where the secret spring may be touched. When the De Chaumonts took me to the Tuilleries I wanted to search for it. But all the state apartments are now on the second floor, and Mme. Bonaparte has her own rooms below. Evidently she knows nothing of the secrets of the place. The queen kept her most beautiful robes in that closet. It has no visible door. The wall opens. And we have heard that a door was made through the back of it to let upon a spiral staircase of stone, and through this the royal family made their escape to Varennes, when they were arrested and brought back."

We fell into silence at mention of the unsuccessful flight which could have changed history, and she rose and said, "Good night, sire."

Next morning three was such a delicious world to live in that breathing was a pleasure. Dew gauze spread far and wide over the radiant domain. Sounds from cattle and stables and the voices of servants drifted on the air. Doves wheeled around their towers and around the chateau standing like a white cliff.

I walked under the green canopy, watching the sun mount and waiting for Mme. de Ferrier. When she did appear the old man who had served her father followed with a tray. I could only say, "Good morning, madame," not daring to add, "I have scarcely slept for thinking of you."

"We will have our coffee out here," she told me.

A VALENTINE DANCE

The Valentine social and dance of Olive Branch Rebekah Lodge at Progress hall last evening was a very successful affair. There were in the neighborhood of sixty couples present, thus making the event a social as well as a financial success.

The hall was very prettily decorated with flags and pennants from various ships in the harbor. In the center of the hall was a large heart made of pink and green paper and running from this point to every part of the room were strings of smaller hearts, alternating pink and green. To carry out the general scheme, the dancing programs were heart-shaped cards. Among the dances was one with Leap Year privileges, giving the ladies the choice of their own partners.

Howard Adams was floor manager and the reception committee was composed of the following: Miss Mabel Eruns, Miss May Weir, the Misses Gurney and Miss Thora Oes.

In the mauka alcove was a valentine postoffice. Miss Weir was saleslady, dispensing comic valentines, and Miss Mabel Eruns was postmistress. The valentines were placed in envelopes and directed to different people in the room. The names were announced and the recipients marched up to the post office to receive their mail.

SANITARY MATTERS

The petition of Mr. Edmunds, manager of the Inter-Island Live Fish Company, was granted at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Health. The company will have stores in various parts of the city in which live and refrigerated fish will be sold.

Young Tuck was granted permission to establish a general market at the corner of King and Kekaulike streets.

The committee appointed to examine the duck ranches at Kalia was granted further time, the weather during the past week having prevented its investigations.

A committee reported on four houses on Dowsett Estate land in Iwilei, stating that they were insanitary and recommending that they be destroyed. Dr. Cooper stated that the building yielded the Territory a revenue of about $1000 a month. If they could be repaired it would be better.

A letter was read from Superintendent McVeigh reporting that some damage had been done at Kalaupapa by the recent storm. The Board decided to postpone action in the matter until a more detailed report was received.

CEMETERIES DISCUSSION

The Board of Health at its meeting yesterday afternoon had quite a discussion regarding Kawaihoo cemetery. President Cooper stated that the cemetery question was becoming a serious one. The best thing would be to close up all the cemeteries in the heart of the city.

Governor Cleghorn, who has looked after the beautifying of the cemetery and who had been invited by Dr. Mays to be present at the meeting, spoke strenuously against closing.

Kawaihoo cemetery possessed plenty of virgin soil and was a very sanitary one. It was necessary to dig ten feet to reach water. Governor Cleghorn further stated that he had seen cemeteries in the midst of many of the principal cities of Europe.

The matter was finally held over for further consideration.
