

VISITORS GIVE THEIR IMPRESSIONS

Here is what they say:

President D. G. Holt—One is charmed with the tropical verdure, entranced with the quaint, soft, sweet, melodious music, soothed by the balmy climate and impressed with the commercial importance of Honolulu.

Mrs. Edgar Johnson—This is surely the most hospitable place in the tropics, but I certainly miss our splendid lemon orchards.

C. F. Holland—Since leaving Los Angeles our excursion has been an almost continuous round of pleasure. Pleasant surprises awaited us on every hand. But, in addition to this, we have received a more lasting benefit in the way of education. Every facility has been afforded us to gain for ourselves a full knowledge of these beautiful islands from an economical, social and political standpoint, and the information and data collected will be rich material for use in advocating the cause of the people of the islands. Their universal courtesy and kindness has endeared them to every member of the Editorial Association.

Miss Ethel B. Powers—I have been impressed not only with the marvelous beauty of Honolulu and the surrounding country but with her importance as a coming commercial center. The time most soon come when the world will realize that Honolulu is to become the stepping-stone between the Occident and the Orient. This fact is strongly emphasized by her cosmopolitan population—meaning as it does that all lands will be interested in her development.

Miss Helen Leech—My impressions are as varied as the changing lights and shadows on mountain and valley, or the shifting opaline of your wonderful ocean. At first I thought the chief charm was the tropical verdure, then the delicate softness of the fleecy clouds floating aimlessly around the mountain-tops, but now I am convinced it is simply the combination, forming a "dolce far niente" more to be desired than any land known to ancient or modern mariners. Had I been asked to give my impression in one word it would have been easier, as I should have said, "Perfect!"

Isabelle Ware Morgan—With what joy upon the sixth day of my voyage from San Francisco, early in the morning was I awakened to view the entrance to Honolulu harbor. As we passed Diamond Head, close to the seaward slope, the lighthouse may be observed, and then looking back of the ragged reef skirting the coast line, upon which the waves dashed high, the valley full of mists, and rainbows, the brilliant colorings of hills, and trees, the ever-changing shades of blue and green of the mighty ocean, constitutes the most magnificent landscape, never to be forgotten. The custom of garlanding friends upon their arrival in Honolulu, with the fragrant lei is a most delightful one, and nowhere can be found a more hospitable, merry, and music-loving people, than in Honolulu. The word "Aloha" is generously extended to all, and nothing is ever too much trouble for the residents, if it can in the smallest degree add to the pleasure of strangers in Honolulu. I may end by saying I hope the time will come when I may spend many weeks in Honolulu.

J. J. Penny—This would be a good place in which to live" was the first impression of the writer on arriving at Honolulu. Time has only served to emphasize that view. The universal cordial hospitality of her citizens of all classes, the clean, well-kept streets, the restful, comfortable and inviting appearance of her homes—the mansion and cottage alike—with their spacious, shaded and tastefully arranged grounds, suggest the appropriateness of the name Paradise of the Pacific. What could be more desired than a home in such a city and among such a people?

Grace Hortense Tower—A little fragment of heaven dropped into the ocean, and called for convenience's sake—Honolulu.

John D. H. Browne—I am indebted to Bishop Restarick and family for the most generous hospitality and the most gracious and thoughtful attentions, but in addition, I have been charmed and gratified with the reception everywhere shown us. I cannot imagine anything further being done than the Promotion Committee and the citizens of Honolulu have done for our pleasure and profit. I leave the islands with an intense desire to advance their interests, and with a deep-seated regard for the Hawaiian people.

Irving S. Watson—If your Uncle Samuel has any possessions more beautiful than these island gems of the Pacific, the Southern California Editorial Association wants to know where they are. We never expect to see anything more luxurious in tropical growth, and we are sure that the royal, warm-hearted and genuine hospitality that has been tendered us can never be exceeded by any people in any land. Your good-fellowship has captured our hearts. Your luxuriant tropical foliage, your wonderful tints upon the hillsides, and your soft sea breezes have captured our senses, and we go back to our California homes to send on the good word about this wonderful land.

Each member of the visitors editorial party has wished to "say something back" to the good people of these beautiful isles for the many happy days in the tropics.

Here is what they say:

R. C. Springer—Aw! What's the use! Nothing to it! These islands are all to the merry! Say, kid, if those people back in the States knew what this country was—you would be building fences around the islands to keep 'em off. There may be other places like this outside of books; but I'm the Missouri kid!

Mrs. Harry Iles—With Los Angeles, the metropolis of California, linked to the islands of Hawaii by a line of steamers, we can see great possibilities for both places. They have much to offer in exchange, and we could promise them an extensive tourist travel, with a circulation of many such glorious impressions as we are to carry away with us.

G. Ray Horton—Somebody once said that no great truth ever takes hold of a man without making him its missionary. Henceforth am I to be a Mainland missionary for Hawaii, preaching its glad gospel of the tropics and urging people to turn their weary steps toward the Paradise of the Pacific.

Edgar Johnson—Hawaii has the most beautiful women, the most interesting and big-hearted men, the best hotels, the most accommodating railroad, steamship and newspaper men, Long live Hawaii, and may it ever prosper!

D. J. Bastanchury—I dearly love all of the people of the city of Honolulu and may become one of your permanent residents within a year or two.

Miss May Moore—This is the most interesting trip of my life.

Mrs. McDwitt—A grand country with a bright future.

T. P. McDwitt—I am in love with your good-looking young ladies and may move my paper down here; am sorry we cannot stay with you three months.

Paul Moore—This is the grandest the best-managed trip in the history of the Southern California Editorial Association.

Mrs. Clara H. H. Davis—The vegetation in this climate is so much more varied and luxuriant than in ours that I feel as though your hospitality must also be affected by the climate. We are proud of the noted Californian hospitality, but you have outdone us. Our trip has been a series of such delightful surprises that words utterly fail in expressing our appreciation. We only await the chance to "get back at you."

Mrs. G. Ray Horton—Love it is said is like the letter H, because it leads in Hope, Harmony, Happiness and Heaven, is at the end of wrath, and keeps entirely out of discord. We of the Editorial party have found in the past two weeks that it leads also in Honolulu, Hilo, Hawaii, and Hospitality.

Mrs. H. G. Tinsley—Honolulu is a name to conjure with—a place once seen never forgotten; a kaleidoscope of color, riotous in red, green, orange and purple. One can see the glorious Mediterranean when looking upon the waters that lap the shore of this garden spot. It is a dream that I want to dream again. Superlative adjectives have been exhausted and a new dictionary is required to describe this Eden on earth—Honolulu.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Van Leuven—Our impressions of Honolulu and the Hawaiian Islands is favorable in every respect. The right royal welcome and the lavish attention and entertainment accorded to us, so far as we are concerned, indescribable and our appreciation is inexpressible. The song of our hearts shall be, Aloha, forever.

Mrs. J. L. Matthews—The beauty of your islands is simply beyond expression. We have had one of the most pleasant times of our lives, and will carry away the happiest memories of Hawaii. I believe I am safe in saying that nowhere in the world is the wonderful hospitality of your people equalled.

Mrs. Edgar Johnson—I am happy to know that I am going to have the pleasure of expressing myself on Honolulu, its beautiful and magnificent surroundings, and its hospitable people in particular. They make you feel at home. The glad hand is always outstretched and a bright smile in evidence. On our arrival here and just before we landed, I saw a very pretty rainbow, and while looking at it wished that foliage and flowers could be so beautiful. A few hours later my wish came true and words cannot express my thoughts while driving out with Mrs. McCandless through the residence section, viewing the lovely homes and seeing foliage of every color. The volcano was simply grand and Aloha was observed on every face of our reception committees here and at Hilo. The Luau is something unique and is a feast we will long remember. On our return here from Hilo we felt more welcome. Even the faces of the little brown folks were aglow with smiles.

L. F. Doolittle—There is no place on earth like Hawaii, and my impressions are that none of us would want it any different from the visitors' point of view. I believe it to be the place where the finest tourist crop in all the West—even rivalling our own Southern California—can be harvested, and that the Promotion Committee is on the right track to reap that harvest.

Mrs. L. F. Doolittle—It must be delightful to live in a climate where you always have the "good old summer time," where there are no winter clothes to stow away every fall and to be hauled out every spring; where there are no furs for the moths to corrupt and where, they tell us, that thieves do not break through and steal. One should be willing to forego an occasional cold snap for the sake of such luxuries.

Mrs. I. S. Watson—So much has been said already by different members of our party in praise of the tropical beauty of Hawaii, and the continued and continual hospitality of her people, that I hesitate to add anything lest we weary by our much speaking. Yet the fact remains that all I've thought or heard or dreamed of this country and her people is true to the last letter. I wonder more and more that so many races can dwell together in unity. I marvel at the complicated work done by the public school teachers and other workers. I realize that we do not understand conditions at all, but we do understand warm welcomes and hearty hand-claps and as we go to our homes our hearts will ever be sending back "a friendly salutation" and "Aloha" will spring unbidden to our lips.

Paul W. Moore—The courtesies shown us by the townspeople, the interest manifested by them in the localities from which we have come, their evident desire that we be pleased with their city and contingent territory, their willingness to impart information and give directions have been pleasurable features not always accorded the tourist and traveler.

Miss May C. Moore—I expected to see about thirty thousand pineapple plants, but have seen thirty million instead. In the same ratio has been the cordiality of our reception and entertainment. The good people of Honolulu and the islands left nothing undone to make us feel that we are kindred and not aliens.

Mrs. J. J. Penny—Honolulu is a veritable Garden of Eden—an Eden so perfect that the trail of the serpent can not be found on it.

Miss Winifred Martin—"I drink to the general joy," and boundless future prosperity of Honolulu and her people, individually and collectively, who have made us wish to remain forever in this emerald isle of the Pacific. I drink again to long life for the Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Company, whose handsome souvenir passes embellished with Manager Balcenye's autograph have enabled us to "do" so satisfactorily and completely the city and beautiful suburbs.

F. M. Jenifer—It's an old story but always a pleasant one to give my impressions of Hawaii; as to the trip, it has been all right; couldn't give everyone the best steamer, but intelligent editors know that and they give a fellow a chance when he is trying to do his best. I am willing to come again to this Pacific Paradise with this crowd.

J. F. Davis—This has been the finest trip of our lives. I have been all over the world, but the hospitality of the Hawaiian people has never been equalled. I would not have missed this trip for any amount of money, and I will do all I can to advertise the Hawaiian Islands. I am thinking very seriously of selling out my California property and coming back here to live.

Maeter Frank Davis—Says he has had the finest time of his life, and wants to return to Honolulu to live.
