IRELAND'S BIG DAY WITH SONG AND STORY WILL BE CELEBRATED

America owes a debt of gratitude to the Irish race. No other has done more to place America in the proud position she occupies today. History records that St. Brendan discovered America centuries before Columbus was born, and also that in the crew that sailed with the great Admiral was a son of the old sod. In the Revolution, the Irish did their duty loyally and well. In the great civil struggle, they never flinched. In the rebuilding of the East and the West, the North and the South, they have taken a noble part. And today they are still in the vanguard, doing their duty, manfully and true. With his sunny disposition, love of right and honor, and his big warm heart, the Irishman has won a place in the affections of the great American people, and St. Patrick's Day has become almost a national holiday. In honoring this day, the Irishman but proves his greater love for the glorious banner to which he owes fealty. The Irish are essentially a race of mirth and music. Each year the local Irish and their friends have commemorated the 17th of March. Tonight a splendid program of exercises will be presented at St. Louis College Hall, commencing at 8 sharp, as follows:

More than a score of persons, who were waiting for the cars at the corner of Sixteenth and Pololu streets, were recently scattered pell mell by the advent of a live feed wire in their midst. The wire fell sizzling and spluttering high among them and there was a frantic rush for safety. Through the hissing of the wire and the screams of frightened women a panic was nearly started. Two women fainted. In the course of an hour the street car company repaired the damaged wire.

Men should not indulge in boasts of their religious assurance. False lives have no right, saintly lives have no need, and in ordinary lives it is out of place.
