"Deed, Miss Marjle, I don't like dese hemb fats."

Aunt Debbie stood with arms akimbo, occupying the greater part of the tiny kitchen. Mrs. Blair, arranging a mass of dahlias in an old fashioned jar on the dining room table, smiled on the old negro commiseratingly.

"We don't find it quite so roomy as the old place in Virginia, do we, Aunt Debbie? But after the mortgage was foreclosed Lesley's civil service appointment was a godsend. I don't know how the child ever got the idea of standing a civil service examination. She always was a queer child, though." Mrs. Blair sighed as if the thing. If mammy were to die we would be absolutely helpless."

Dr. Fenton noted his patient's pulse and listened to her heart, then looked at Mrs. Blair in a puzzled manner.

"Her heart's all right—rather unusually strong. Has she been eating anything that might give her acute indigestion?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Mrs. Blair helplessly. "I was asleep when she called me, and she groaned several times, then became absolutely unconscious."

"Has she been drinking?" The doctor sniffed the atmosphere suspiciously.

"No, indeed!" said the girl indignantly. "Mammy never was intoxicated in her life. I spilled that on her trying to force some down her throat."

The doctor, after several minutes' work, finally held some strong ammonia to his patient's nostrils, and she opened her eyes.

"Take dat dar stuff away," she said indignantly. "Do you want to kill me 'cause I's a willness old nigger?"

Dr. Fenton patted her shoulder indulgently.

"There—there—I guess you are not dead yet. It's a sign of a good constitution when they recover and begin frowning and fuming. Shows they have grit enough to pull through all right. Where do you feel bad, auntie?"

"In ma head and back, and ma legs, and a awful misery in ma stomach. I reckon I'm mos' done for."

"I'm going to give you a powder that will stop all the misery, auntie. You must stay in bed tomorrow, and I'll come in and see how things are going with you. I expect you have taken cold and have neuralgia and cramp. You'll be bustling around as lively as anybody in a few days."

"Be sure to come tomorrow, doctah. I'm scart plum to death," the old negro whimpered.

One night long after Aunt Del's recovery Dr. Fenton sat in the tiny parlor of Mrs. Blair's apartment, and a casual observer might have thought he was noting Lesley's pulse.

"And to think I saw you going in and coming out of this building for a whole year before I had an opportunity of meeting you. I tried my best to find a mutual acquaintance, but couldn't. If that blessed old mammy hadn't caught cold I might never have known you. Do you like the way that diamond is set, dearest?" he asked, holding the girl's slender hand at arm's length to admire the very new and glittering ring.

"It's just—lovely," she said. "Everything is lovely. I don't believe there's a single disagreeable thing in the world. Let's call Mam Debbie—I haven't told her yet."

When Aunt Debbie came to the door and heard their news she laughed in an enjoyment too large for the small apartment.

"You think you are surprisin' your old mammy, do you, little missie? Lawd, chile, I seen it comin' long befo' your children thought of it."

When she reached the seclusion of the kitchen she sat down and rocked to and fro in silent merriment, her checked apron held over her face.

"Thank de Lawd! Little missey won't be no old maid," she chuckled, "but dey certainly is one culled pussan dat would ha' made a fine actress. An' wasn't I cute to select a time when little missey would put on dat blue fluff wrapper? I knowed she looked like one of de Lawd's angels in it. I didn't have no misery—I didn't have no nothing—but dem powders sho' did make me sleep."
