THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

THE most brilliant and elaborate function in the annals of Honolulu society was given last Monday night at the Alexander Young hotel, when Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young, after fifty years of wedded bliss celebrated their golden wedding. The hotel in its garnitures of flowers and decorations, presented a picture that reminded one of the Arabian nights, or one could well imagine they had been transported to fairyland. The reception was held in the main ballroom, which was banked with American Beauty roses and orchids. The entrance to this room was decorated in white; on the right of the doorway was arranged large baskets of white fairsies, while to the left were grouped several tall cut glass vases, containing white calla lilies over four feet high. Over the large archway of the door were massed white roses. The decorations in white were symbolic of the wedding that had taken place fifty years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Young received their guests in an alcove that was composed of orchids and cloth of gold lilies. This alcove was banked with maidenhair ferns, the tall Kentia and the rare Alivia palms making a solid background of green, while here and there were sprays of orchids and tall vases of lilies. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young received under four golden wedding bells. The tapers were composed of myriads of tiny electric lights, and the bells were suspended by broad yellow satin ribbons. Choice maidenhair ferns and rare baskets of orchids were hung overhead, while numerous baskets of trailing asparagus vine and a drapery of smilax rounded in a bow of tropical verdure. At half after eight the guests began to arrive. Over a thousand friends and acquaintances had been invited, and the reception lasted until ten o'clock. It was indeed a beautiful sight to see Mr. and Mrs. Young surrounded by their family, the sons and daughters assisting in receiving their numerous guests. Many members of the family had journeyed thousands of miles over land and sea to participate in this joyful event. The receiving party included Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young, Mr. and Mrs. Dredge of Oakland, Cal.; Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Young of this city, Dr. and Mrs. Howard of San Francisco, Dr. and Mrs. Anderson of Honolulu, Mr. and Mrs. von Hamm of Hawaii, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McNail, and Miss B. Ruth Young of Honolulu. Shortly after ten a short program was rendered. Mr. Dredge, one of the sons-in-law, came in bearing two swords that were crossed in front of Mr. Alexander Young. A platform had been constructed for the occasion; the music for a Highland dance was played on a piano that was completely concealed by American Beauty roses. Five of Mr. and Mrs. Young's grand children appeared in Scottish costume. They were the Misses Beatrice and Gladys Dredge, little Miss Pauline Young, Master Archibald Young, Jr., and Master Nelson Young. These five children saluted their grandparents; the three younger children formed a body guard for the two Dredge children, who danced a Highland Fling in honor of the bride and groom, who are of Scotch descent. The dancing was enthusiastically received by the audience. The next number on the program were two Scotch ballads, sung by Mrs. Mackall of this city. Mrs. Mackall possesses a high rich soprano, and her voice is not only powerful but sympathetic as well and it is always a treat to hear her sing. The hit of the evening was made by Miss Beatrice Dredge, who danced a Golden Shower dance in her grand-greats' honor. This dance had been especially arranged for the occasion; little Miss Dredge appeared in a billowy costume of soft golden silk. This little girl is an extremely graceful dancer and her graceful motions and the numerous intricate steps of the dance called forth the admiration and applause of those who witnessed it. At the conclusion of the dance, the little girl showered her golden offering over her guests. Parents as a tribute to their golden wedding. Congratulations by those present, on the past fifty years of wedded happiness, and well-wishes for as many more along the same line, contained the known quantity of a solid. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young would have been crushed to the floor by their weight. At the conclusion of this program, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, led their guests to the main ballroom, which had been reserved for the young people to dance in. The two ballrooms of the Young are connected by a roof garden, and this garden was a blaze of electric lights. The illumination would have done credit to New York city. The sides of the garden had been enameled with canvas to serve as a protection in case of rain. However this was unnecessary as the night was perfect. It being a typical Hawaiian evening with millions of stars overhead, and the roof garden was swept by a breeze which were keenly enjoyed by the dancers as they promaded between waltzes and two-steps. The setting of this garden reminded one of the month of May in California, and the sentiment was expressed by the visitors from the mainland that it was hard to realize that it was midwinter. The canopy forming a promenade for the guests, was festooned with pink roses and at intervals were suspended hanging baskets of pink carnations intertwined with maidenhair ferns. On the Ewa side of the roof garden was hung a mammoth golden wedding bell composed of over a thousand electric lights. The ballroom was decorated in golden California poppy, and the beautiful flower was used in great profusion. Hundreds of electric lights were strung from the center of the room to the corners and covered with yellow silk shades made to resemble poppies. A huge basket of this same flower was suspended in the center of the room. The centers of the flowers were lighted by miniature electric light bulbs and produced a novel effect. On this occasion many beautiful toilettes were observed. Mrs. Alexander Young wore a grey crepe meteor, with an overdress of grey chiffon cloth, studded in pearls; a superb diamond crescent was the only jeweled ornament worn. Miss B. Ruth Young was clad in cream satin, embellished in lavender and pink velvet roses. Mrs. Howard wore a yellow chiffon trimmed in pearl trimmings. Mrs. McNail looked beautiful in white satin with an overdress of point lace, caught with pink roses. Mrs. Dredge was hand some in black chintilly lace over gold satin; a priceless pearl necklace was worn. Mrs. Sullivan wore an imported gown of cream silk crepe, with a garniture of pink roses. Mrs. von Hamm looked stunning in a French gown, one of Paquin's models of grey chiffon over grey satin. Mrs. McNail was clad in a handsome black gown. Mrs. Archibald Young wore an embroidered lavender chiffon embellished in rose point lace. Mrs. Anderson wore a handsome black frock. Miss McMahon looked beautiful in a pink crepe frock of pastel blue. Mrs. Broese wore a French gown of white net, heavily embroidered. Mrs. J. F. C. Hansen wore a black spangled gown with a corsage of American Beauty roses. Mrs. Clinton Ballentyne wore a beautiful robe of white lace. Mrs. Robert Shingle's gown of light blue satin with a stole effect of gold was much admired. Mrs. George Davies was beautifully clad in white satin with a bertha of real lace. Miss Matson wore a baby blue satin princess, heavily embroidered. Mrs. Clive Davies was gowned in pink crepe. Mrs. Arthur Wilder wore an apricot satin; a diamond aigrette was worn in the hair. Mrs. George Herbert was handsome in a superb black satin gown. Mrs. Baird wore a light blue meteor crepe, with touches of silver. Mrs. Mae Damon wore a cloth of gold gown with an overdress of fine net. Mrs. James Dougherty was a picture in pink crepe de chine, spangled in silver. Mrs. Matson's gown was among the handsomest; it was of mauve satin, embellished with rose point lace. Mrs. Arthur Berg was clad in white chiffon, modeled in the prevailing fashion, bordered with yellow roses. Mrs. Robert Atkinson wore a white lace robe.
