Grand Total of All Trip Contestants Votes Cast 2,750,272

Honolulu, T. H., May 28, 1910.

We, the undersigned, were selected as judges in the Bulletin's Yosemite-California Contest, and do hereby certify that we have counted the votes cast up to 8 o'clock May 28, 1910, and find the results of said count to be correct as follows:

(Signed) J. E. SOPER,
 R. IRWIN,
 CHAS. MARQUES,
 J. COOPER.

This twenty-eighth day of May, Nineteen Hundred and Ten.

MISS EMMA SASAKI, An Indomitable Contest Worker, is to be awarded an extra trip.

"other" votes be issued for someone else.

The men campaign managers of some of the contestants may have made arrangements whereby they could make an exchange of votes, but such was positively not the case among the contestants. They constantly and consistently carried out every promise to the other candidate they had made; even in the last hours of the contest, when to do so meant defeat.

How They Worked. Now that the contest is over it is fair to all to tell for whom the different trip contestants had their chaperone votes issued.

The leading candidates worked together as follows: Miss Pangelinan and Mrs. Beggs; Miss McCabe and Mrs. Moore; Miss Sasaki and Mrs. Siemson. Miss Cockett gave what votes she had subscription orders for to Mrs. Blake. Mrs. Siemson received support also from five or six other active trip contestants. In this order the women worked together to the end and hotly refused every tentative offer made them to switch their support. And these tentative offers were not made by the women contestants, either, but by some ardent men advocates, who all, no doubt, believe that in politics the main thing is to win.

"Like Politics." "It is like politics," was the constant remark of a busy man worker on Saturday, as he stopped for a moment from the search for votes.

And, like politics, at near the end of the election, constant rumors of alarm were sounded in opposing camps by some man who doubted that Miss So-and-So was going to have her votes issued for Mrs. So-and-So, as promised. But these hurried, anxious, busy men spoke without knowing. The women, though, trusted each other, and with good reason, as the contest result shows.

Trying to Explain Today. The aftermath of it all is that the rumor-spreaders are explaining to their wives or their women relatives or friends: "I didn't hardly think it was so, but I heard it."

Men Say, "Women Are Fairer." Gathered together Sunday, a half dozen of these men, who were trying to baffle the other and secure victory, laughed among themselves at their own alarms of the day past, and one of them summed it all up with the remark: "Well, women are fairer and squarer with each other than men are." "Whether it is politics or not?" asked another. And they all said, "Yes."

Contest Department Was Busy.

The impact of demands for subscriptions and ballots struck the contest department before 8 o'clock Saturday morning, and this notwithstanding that over fifty subscriptions had been received when the office was kept open until 9 o'clock the night before. A vote-issuer accused one of the workers of gathering votes by moonlight, and such, so to speak, must have been the case, for this particular worker was the last to bring in orders Friday evening and the first to appear Saturday morning with a list of names.

With the arrival of the Mauna Kea mail, the contest department was half submerged. Letter after letter was received by this mail, and it seemed that every one on Maui and Hawaii had waited to send in their subscriptions for the final day. Many of these letters were, in fact, packages containing votes and orders, and came in by special delivery and registered, as the outside island contestants wisely did not wish to chance a misdelivery.

By noon the contest department was fully submerged, for the local candidates had all got out early and they began coming in with long lists of subscriptions that they had held for the final day. At this time a request was made to the editorial department for an assistant, and another helper was allowed the three vote-writers.

The rush in the contest department slackened down at shortly past 6 o'clock until only two vote-issuers were needed. For this the vote-writers were thankful, as it allowed time for dinner, a privilege that had not seemed possible to secure an hour before.

The Closing Hour.

At a little past 7 o'clock the order rush was renewed, for less than an hour remained in which to secure ballots. Subscriptions on which votes had not been issued were brought in, then more orders, and final instructions were given as to the issuing of ballots on payments on which only part of the votes had been taken out. The crowd of vote-getters were augmented then by a number of candidates or their friends bringing in their vote reserve and depositing them in the ballot box.

In addition, a number of people began to arrive who wanted to see the final count, and with their arrival came the judges to see that the rules as to the closing hour were adhered to. By a quarter to eight the office room of the Bulletin was jammed, and the crowd extended out into the street.

Big Subscription Order.

It was at 7:45 o'clock that the contest climax came. Two contest workers came at that time with a list carrying 111 yearly subscribers to the Evening Bulletin. Those familiar with the vote issue quickly figured up the number of votes that could be secured for such a large number, and the total showed that it amounted to four hundred and forty-eight thousand votes.

In this list there were thirty-four clubs of new subscriptions and three clubs of old subscriptions. A club consisted of three subscriptions, and the vote issue for a new club was twelve thousand and five hundred, and for an old one eleven thousand. This included the standing vote issue with the club offer tant was in effect until the close of the contest.

The suspense among the contest-

MORE RUSSIANS ARE COMING

It is reported that there are a large number of Russians coming on the Nippon Maru, due to arrive here shortly. This information does not come through the regular channel, via Mr. Atkinson.

It was noticeable yesterday that the Russians who have been in this country for some time are fast losing the distinguishing Russian mark of identification and are adopting the clothes made to fit the climate.

few people living in Lahaina to aid her, she said, "Well I am going to try." Success came to her for trying.

Two more trips will probably be awarded contestants who practically tied two of the successful candidates. These trips will go to Miss Sasaki, who finished in third place with only a few votes separating her from the competitor in second place. Miss Sasaki, with indomitable energy, continued her campaign to the very last, when it seemed that her chance of success was impossible.

Mrs. W. C. Moore, due to the hard and faithful subscription work of her husband and herself, seemed a certain leader until the very last hour. There was a very small difference between her total and Mrs. Beggs at the final count. She entered the contest late but the tremendous vote she received gives evidence of the number of people who would like to see her a member of the party. Their wishes will undoubtedly be respected if arrangements are made for the larger number as now anticipated.

This double contest for the selection of a chaperone and four members to constitute a travel party to spend six weeks on a visit to Yosemite Park and California, began on March 7th. It was one of the most successful ever conducted by any Hawaii newspaper and brought the Bulletin over six hundred new daily subscriptions in the three months. The greater portion of this circulation gain was made right here in Honolulu. The election of a chaperone has centered the interest of the outside island readers in that part of the contest and accounts for the small number of trip contestant votes in District 3. In order to elect a resident of Maui as the chaperone, the Maui readers gave their support to the district contestants on Oahu. The same was true on Kauai and many of the Honolulu candidates owe much of their success to supporters who live on the Garden Island.
