

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, it continues, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria. Physicians Recommend Castoria. "Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better." JOHN J. LEVY, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio. "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm." EDWARD FARRIS, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y. "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a safe and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments." J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo. "Your Castoria is a delicious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies." VICTOR H. COPPEMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

WHAT I SAW IN THE WINDOWS

BY THE OBSERVER.

I am just one of the 200,000 on these islands, and for the last ten or twelve years I have been hitting all of the high spots, trying to keep up with the progress the city is making, and that job has kept me so busy that I have paid no attention to the changes that have been going on.

I must confess that I have used my observing powers but very little until this morning, while waiting on the corner of Hotel and Fort streets for a friend who did not show up on time. I looked down Fort street toward King and counted nineteen automobiles lined up on either side of that street in that limited space; then I harkened back a few years and called up a mental blueprint of a projection of a building that used to stick out into the street, making a sort of Cape Horn that occasioned the pedestrian to take to the street if he would pass it.

But my mind did not stay long in that old and gone past. No one's mind can long remain with Honolulu's stagnant period when surrounded with the bustle and business of today.

Still growling over the delinquency of my friend, I sauntered down Fort street. Store windows never did appeal to me, but today I could not help but notice how attractive many of them were. I have had the honor of living in the second largest city in the world, and I can say, without a blush, that the windows of the stores of this city compare very favorably with those in large cities on the mainland.

After a night spent in fighting mosquitoes, I thoroughly appreciated the display made by Benson, Smith & Co. The Honolulu Photo Supply Co. next caught my attention. Years ago I used to dabble in the art of photography, but had long since quit on account of stress of business. I was not sure that the pictures in the window were enlargements from kodak films, so I butted into the store and they told me all about how it was done. Shoes! That's where I shine. I pride myself on my knowledge of shoes, for I have worn shoes ever since I was a year old—but, say, the man standing in the door of the Manufacturers' Shoe Co. told me more about shoes in five minutes than I have learned in the last thirty-five years. He noticed the alligator in my right shoe, and said "Corn?" I acknowledged a bad one on my right little toe, or my little right toe, and I got a lot more information about corns that I did not think existed outside of what I knew about them, for I have had that corn ever since I have worn shoes. I have got an idea that I know where I am going to buy the next pair of shoes and see if what he said about his shoes is so.

The next window, if I remember right, belongs to Whitney & Marsh. The display in that window is awful pretty, although it did not particularly interest me, only from the fact that the lady with whom I board simply raved over the display in Whitney & Marsh's window, and, of course, I had to have a look.

When I had reached Henry May & Co.'s store and took a look at the two windows, I forgot all about that delinquent friend. Here is where we live. Milk in one window and mush in the other. The man who dressed that window thoroughly knew his business and certainly made no mistake in the combination. The next window gave me a start. Although I am not up in lace, I know something pretty when I see it, and you can just bet that that window was about the prettiest thing on that side of Fort street. It seemed that there were lace enough there to supply all of the United States, and I was wondering how Jordan happened to get stuck on such a big lot. Again I butted in and asked them about it. "Why, bless your innocent soul, we have not near enough to last out this sale," answered the manager, for it happened to be that I had sought for the information from the right source. "Our lady clerks are dealing out laces so fast that it is a positive fact we shall have to have more help behind the counters." I asked him what was the special attraction in the lace line. Were the ladies all going to wear peck-a-boos? "Why, man alive, look at the prices marked on those in the window. The city never saw such a slaughter in lace before." I passed on, dreaming of Spanish signoritas with lace shawls wound around their heads, and lace stock—Whoa, Bill, back up, here were some more shoes. The thought struck me that I would see if McInerney knew as much about shoes as the fellow up the street, so in I went. Well, they have got me guessing now, and I have concluded that I will buy a pair of shoes in each city and try them out.

I did not have time to go up on the other side of the street, as my friend showed up, but I am going to tackle it again soon, for it's lots of fun "shopping."

SAYS WOMEN OFFENDERS ARE WORSE THAN MEN

Russia's Chief of Prisons Also Declares the Judges and Officials Are Lenient.

NEW YORK, September 17.—"The most dangerous criminals are women. But everywhere they are treated best—because they are women."

This is the statement of Commissioner M. Etienne de Krouloff, Chief of the Russian prison department, who is here as a delegate to the International Prison Congress, to be held next month in Washington. Everybody has read horrible tales of the cruelties inflicted on Russian prisoners, including the women prisoners, so M. Krouloff was asked just what penalties could be inflicted on women in his country.

"We have 8,000 women prisoners in my country, including those in Siberia," he said. "Many of them are suffering for crimes quite as serious as those for which the majority of men prisoners are arrested. Yet there are two penalties which we never inflict on the women. Whatever they do, they are never whipped with the knout. And they never are sent out of the prisons to labor."

"Our women are kept in prisons separate from those of the men. The staff in the women's prisons is in a great measure composed of women. They are sent to Siberia, of course, and the severity of the exile varies with individuals; but they are protected even as in the home prisons."

"Only when a woman does engage in crime she is always more to be dreaded than a man. She can do everything that a man criminal can do and more. She can kill, rob, burn, plot—and she can induce hundreds of men to do likewise, if she has the least pretension to beauty or magnetism. And while a man may be very bad himself, he is much less to be feared than his woman colleague. She is herself—plus as many men as she knows."

"Yet I assure you the woman criminal is well treated in Russia, as she is everywhere."

The war with Japan there have been many, many murders in my country, a perfect outbreak of lawlessness. There have been women among the murderers, proved guilty. But in all our records of the last troubled years you can hardly find a single instance where we have sentenced a woman murderer to death. Our judges will not do it—because she is a woman."

GERMANY FACING A BIG DEFICIT

The Government Postpones Increase in Taxation Until After Next Election.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—The government is still struggling with the problems of revenues which failed of solution through the fiscal legislation of 1909. It has been rumored for some months that the government intended to introduce at the next session of the Reichstag a bill providing for additional taxation.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, however, has recently had a conference with the cabinet, at which a decision was reached to postpone action in the matter until after the elections to the Reichstag, which, it is expected, will be held in the autumn of 1911. The conclusion generally accepted is that the government is unwilling to risk the political effect of new fiscal legislation prior to the election.

It appears probable that the revenue for the present year from new taxes will fall $10,750,000 short.

Watch Your Temper

A BAD DISPOSITION IS A GRADUAL GROWTH WHICH CAN BE DISCOVERED IN TIME.

WHO has not shinned and at the same time pitted the woman with a bad temper? The supposition, as a rule, is that she has inherited it or that it comes from bad health or nerves. As a matter of fact, nine cases out of ten come from mere habit.

The candidate for a bad temper is usually a spoiled child whose whims and pettishness have been submitted to by a weak willed mother. From winning to snapping is a quick change for humans as well as dogs, and once a woman realizes she can have her way by being ugly she generally goes on getting it that way.

An indulgent husband usually completes the work of demoralization, and the spoiled woman snaps and snarls at her over every trifle, so that he lives in a state of continual nervous apprehension. The shrews are not made in a day. They are the results of a slow process of many days' lack of self control and self indulgence. The bad tempered woman is above all things selfish. She cares only for her own comfort and sacrifices every one else to it. If she is arguing anything she insists upon being right regardless of the feelings of others. She keeps up her declaration that so and so is so far beyond the limits of politeness or consideration. If you have the misfortune to hold an opposite opinion and she can prove you wrong it is her pride and utmost determination to do so.

If you don't want to be ill tempered and feared by all in your old age watch yourself carefully now. Avoid moods. They grow upon one. The woman who comes down to breakfast at odds with all the world and prepared to find fault with everything is sowing for herself the seeds of a villainous disposition.

Examine yourself and try to see how many times you have lost your temper and made yourself disagreeable to others in a day, in a week, etc. You may be surprised at the result, and certainly if you see the tendency to find fault and be disagreeable increase you can be warned in time to prevent the souring of your disposition as well as some very unpleasant episodes which are bound to follow the woman who has a bad, uneven temperament.

SOME HANDY MAKEOVERS.

An old mackintosh can be converted into a very useful apron for washing day. Wide white tape makes a splendid clothline, durable and clean. An old straw hat serves for a peg basket. A small box covered with carpet is a capital footstool. A tin with a few small holes punched in the bottom makes a flour dredger.

Of White Marquissette

WHITE marquisette is one of the most popular fabrics just now. It will be used a great deal for theater gowns this fall.

The pretty model here shown has a tunic with a very heavy white silk embroidery edge. This figure also has the Simone sleeves. The belt is gold.
