

Capt. Jackson Wants all Mountain People to Become Socialists.

Will Start on Tramping Trip in Spring Trying to Convert Eastern Kentucky to His Doctrines.

The conversion of all the mountain-country people of Kentucky to doctrines and the practices of Socialism is the task to which Capt. George M. Jackson, formerly of Winchester, Ky., but now of St. Louis, has dedicated the remainder of his life. Capt. Jackson himself became a follower of the principles of Socialism in 1902 and, as was the case with the first converts to Christianity, he feels called upon to devote his life to the advancement of the cause. He is sixty-six years old, and in the spring will re-enter the campaign he began some weeks ago.

His campaign will be prosecuted by him on foot, and he plans to traverse the entire eastern part of the State, speaking personally to every man who will hear him, until he shall have become too old and infirm to do active work for the cause he represents. Last year he started the first of his series of expeditions. He accompanied R. R. Perry, editor of the Winchester Sun-Sentinel, to Natural Bridge, on an excursion annually given by Mr. Perry, and from there set out on foot through the hills and valleys of the eastern counties. On that trip he visited the counties of Irvine, Estill, Powell, and Lee. It is his plan to lecture in all the school houses which he comes upon. In his walks through the mountain roads he calls at every home and, button-holing the man of the house, in-jects into him some of the cardinal principles of Socialism.

"In my campaign of last year I converted many," said Capt. Jackson, at Winchester a few days ago, "and I have sowed seed that will bear fruit in abundance. I found that what I teach is largely new to those whom the adoption of Socialism would help most. They grasp the proposition quickly and each convert is good for more. I show plainly that the Socialist is not an anarchist, but that the anarchist is the rich man who betrays the best interests of his neighbors for pelt."

Capt. Jackson is a Kentuckian. He left the State thirty-three years ago, since when he has resided in St. Louis. He came to Louisville for the Home Coming, and from there went on to Winchester, where he participated in the Home Coming of Clark county.

His father owned and operated the famous Red River Iron Works, where Clay City now stands, in the years before the war. The Estill furnaces also were the property of his father. It was at the Red River furnaces where George M. Jackson, then twenty years of age, organized the first Federal company of infantry and was made its Captain. The organization was affected on August 6, 1861, and two days later the Company reached Camp Dick Robinson. It was attached to the Fourth Kentucky Infantry during the war. During the campaign of 1860 Capt. Jackson edited and published a Bell and Everett paper at Winchester.

His purpose for the evangelization of the eastern part of the State is to start his campaign as soon as spring arrives. He plans to walk through the mountains from Winchester to the Jamestown Exposition along the Wildcamp Road over which his paternal and maternal great-grandfathers, in 1729, came to settle in what is now Clark county. His great-grandfather Jackson settled at Jackson's Ferry on the Kentucky river at the time when the products of that part of the country were shipped to market at New Orleans by flatboat. Jackson's Ferry became an important commercial point.

Capt. Jackson is not unprepared for the taking up of the doctrines of Socialism by his earlier political ventures. In Missouri he worked for the nomination and the election of Peter Cooper on the Middle-of-the-road Populist ticket. He labored for that party's interests until he became identified with Socialism in 1902. He was secretary of the State Committee of that organization in Missouri, and twice ran for Congress on the Greenback ticket.

Although Capt. Jackson is an ardent and a conscientious Socialist, he is a wealthy man and is the owner of much valuable real estate in Eastern Kentucky. He was reared in Winchester. His politics does not affect the degree of his popularity with those of all parties and he has only to tell his name and lineage to anyone to the east of the lug-grass to be given a careful hearing. On many of his trips he meets cousins that are many times removed, but who trace their parentage back to the same great-grandfather, who came into Kentucky along the Wildcamp road soon after Boone had discovered the advantages of the State.

Life in Kentucky.

An aged woman who had lived most of her life in Kentucky was near death and requested that she be taken back to Chicago. She had lived on the shores of Lake Michigan when Chicago was a frontier village. The Chicago Inter-Ocean is moved by this occurrence to speculate for the space of half a column upon the homing instinct that often manifests itself in men and women years after all of those whom they knew and loved "at home" have died or gone away.

But is there ought to marvel at in the circumstance of anyone, who must soon die wishing that dislocation should occur in Chicago? Kentucky is a land where life holds out all of its brightest allurements. It was a Kentucky negress who sang:

"Ain't gwine ter die in springtime, Ain't gwine ter die in de fall; Since I cum ter think 'bout it, I ain't gwine ter die at all."

In Chicago, life has a harsher aspect, and there is less of a wrenching sensation incident to leaving this world, if one leaves it from the Windy City. Heaven—if Heaven be the destination of the spirit—holds more charms when compared to Chicago. If the other alternative is faced there is always the consolation that in the future one may say, "this, at any rate, is not Chicago."

The state of perfect preparedness for death has never been reached in Kentucky. Many virtuous and pious persons have been prepared to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but none has been prepared to leave Kentucky. A solution to the problem of leaving this world for a better one with as little regret as possible has been found. Leave via Chicago.

Circuit Judge Redwine has made an order dividing the coming term of the Carter circuit court between Grayson and Olive Hill, twelve days at the former and ten days at the latter. The court convenes at Grayson the 4th Monday of October and at Olive Hill on November 7th. The order further requires the circuit clerk to open an office at Olive Hill for the filing of papers etc., and the Sheriff and Jailor to be present at the sitting of the terms. The act creating the court does not say that the Clerk shall open an office or appoint a deputy nor does it say that the Jailor "shall furnish fuel, lights, etc." as does Judge Redwine's order, but does say that all the expenses of the court shall be borne by the town asking for the division. But this is a matter that will be properly adjusted by all parties concerned. A fine court room has been provided for the new court, also a new vault for the records and cells for the prisoners.

Thursday night Harve Coleman's saloon at Devon was the scene of a cowardly and treacherous shooting which may cost the life of "Bill" Rutherford, of Williamson.

Rutherford is a special officer and Thursday went to Devon, and up Knox creek, to execute summons on some witnesses who were wanted before the Mingo circuit court. In the evening he returned to Devon to await the coming of No. 3, on which he could return to Williamson.

About 11 o'clock at night quite a crowd had congregated at Harve Coleman's saloon, Rutherford among them, all awaiting the arrival of the train.

Suddenly the whip-like crack of a rifle was heard and Bill Rutherford was seen to stagger and run out into the darkness of the night. He returned immediately saying he was shot, and examination disclosed a ragged wound just above the heart where the treacherous bullet had entered. Dr. Richardson, of Devon, was hastily summoned to attend the wounded man who was bleeding profusely. He extracted the bullet, which had lodged just under the skin on the man's back.

Rutherford was carried to the train and accompanied to his home by friends. He is in a critical condition and suffers much.

No clue to the perpetrator of the deed was found, although careful search was made by several of the people present.

Evangelist Sam Jones Dead

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 15. — Rev. Sam P. Jones, the well-known evangelist, of Cartersville, Ga., died early to-day of heart failure in a sleeping car on train No. 4, of the Rock Island railroad near Perry, Ark. Mr. Jones had been conducting a most successful revival at Oklahoma City, I. T., and left there last night for his home in Georgia. He desired to attend a family reunion to-morrow, it being the fifty-ninth anniversary of his birth. Mrs. Jones and his daughters, Mrs. Annie Pyron and Miss Julia Jones, were with him when he passed away.

Mr. Jones arose from his berth in the sleeper about 5 o'clock this morning and complained of sickness in his stomach. He drank a glass of hot water and immediately afterward collapsed. The Rev. Walter Holcomb, who has been associated with Mr. Jones for a number of years, took the dying man in his arms, and in a few minutes the evangelist breathed his last.

The body has been embalmed and will be shipped to Cartersville this afternoon, where interment will be had. The funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. George Stuart, the Rev. J. A. Brown, of Mississippi, and the Rev. Holcomb.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION WILL MAKE NO CHANGE.

No matter which candidate is elected, Foley's Honey and Tar will remain the people's favorite remedy for coughs, colds and ineffectual consumption. It cures colds quickly and prevents pneumonia. A. J. Nussbaum, Batesville, Ind. writes: "I suffered for three months with a severe cold. A druggist prepared me some medicine, and a physician prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I then tried Foley's Honey and Tar and eight doses cured me." For sale by Louisa Drug Co.
