TO ANOTHER DAY.

The proposed visit of a board of United States Engineers to this city to inspect the lock and dam has been postponed to a later day. On the day originally named it would have been impossible to see either the lock or the dam. The river had taken a sudden and submerging rise and the big waterway improvement was out of sight. Comparatively few people know that the Louisa dam is the first of its kind to be built in the United States, and it has always been an object of great interest to the engineer corps of the army. The dam is a monument to the skill and ingenuity of our former townsman, Mr. B. P. Thomas.

AT FEDERAL HILL.

All Kentuckians and particularly those who heard Prof. T. J. Coates' delightful address at the M. E. Church South a week or so ago, will be interested and pleased by reading the following from the Bardstons Standard:

"On Sunday last a party visited Federal Hill, birthplace of the famous song, 'My Old Kentucky Home.' On reaching the grounds a bountiful supply of estates was spread on the well-kept lawn. The party then proceeded to explore the grounds. The first place visited was the never-falling spring, where all dipped their cups into the purest of water. Stone steps lead down from either side to the water, which flows through an old-time spring house, the stone work still remaining. Just to the spring, is a huge moss-covered stone on which sat Stephen Collins Foster while jotting down the outlines of his famous song, 'My Old Kentucky Home.' The party followed the path that Mr. Foster trod years ago up to the grand old brick dwelling, which stands to-day, without modern improvements or additions, just as it was when built 118 years ago. Wandering through the spacious hall they gazed with wonder and admiration on the antique desk where Mr.

Foster sat while completing the song that is sung by Kentuckians the world over. Among the adornments are curiosities and souvenirs from the sea and land. In the rear of the grounds are monuments which mark the last resting place of a number of heroes of the early days."
