

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Every habitation is not a home, Alas! We have seen a beautiful house, stately appointed, supplied with every luxury...

See here, boys! Whatever you try to do, do it the very best you can; do it better than it was ever done before...

There is a class of laborers who never strike and seldom complain. They get up at five o'clock in the morning and never go to bed until ten or eleven o'clock at night.

an o'clock at night. They work without ceasing during the whole of the day and get no other pay than food and clothing.

To the true man or woman there can be nothing more agreeable on earth than the business of home-making; and all who are not home-makers miss the best part of their mission in life.

Home is a haven of rest to a man after a hard day's work. Mother, you may be tired after a trying day with the children, but remember that others have trying days, too.

If the mother is in the habit, in her common conversation, of coloring the facts, of exaggerating what she hears and relates, can she expect her children to grow up with a love and reverence for the truth?

ELLIOTT COUNTY SMALL POX.

The following is a reply from Dr. A. M. Lyon, of Sandy Hook, to an attack made on him by John M. Waugh in regard to the small pox in Elliott county, addressed to the State Board of Health of Kentucky.

Gentlemen: I have recently received a local paper and found an article of criticism upon you and the Elliott County Board of Health. This criticism was made by the Commonwealth's attorney of the 2nd Judicial District upon our action to control a prevailing epidemic of small pox in our county.

immune from it but our steps were to protect the honest, sober, good hearted people of Elliott county. It is sad for a father or mother to be taken from their children. It is very unfortunate for a father to lose his children or their mother.

When we notified Cisco in writing, which was signed by the secretary and chairman, he refused to obey but threatened to place the Elliott County Board of Health in jail. He talked with a man at the hotel who had broken

A Business Should be as Big as Its Job

If bigness is of benefit to the public it should be commended.

The size of a business depends upon the needs which that business is called upon to serve. A business should be as big as its job.

Swift & Company's growth has been the natural and inevitable result of national and international needs.

Large-scale production and distribution are necessary to convert the live stock of the West into meat and by-products, and to distribute them over long distances to the consuming centers of the East and abroad.

Only an organization like that of Swift & Company, with its many packing plants, hundreds of distributing houses, and thousands of refrigerator cars, would have been able to handle the varying seasonal supplies of live stock and meet the present war emergency by supplying, without interruption:

First--The U. S. soldiers and the Allies in Europe by shipping as much as 800 carloads of meat products in a single week!

Second--The cantonments in the United States.

Third--The retailers upon whom the American public depends for its daily supply of meat.

But many people ask--Do producers and consumers pay too much for the complex service rendered?

Everyone, we believe, concedes the efficiency of the Swift & Company organization--in performing a big job in a big way at a minimum of expense.

Swift & Company's total profit in 1917 was less than 4 cents on each dollar of sales of meat and by-products. Elimination of this profit would have had practically no effect on live stock and meat prices.

Do you believe that this service can be rendered for less by any other conceivable method of organization or operation?

These questions and others are answered fully and frankly in the Swift & Company 1918 Year Book sent free on request. Address Swift & Company, U. S. Yards, Chicago
