BETSY LANE.

HICKSVILLE

There will be church at Cat Sunday. We are sorry to hear of Jess Young losing his fine horse and two mules.

Know What Was Coming. "Fa, what is an idiot?" "I can't give you a brief definition, son, but I can point out to you some fine examples."

Good Example. Wife—it's quite noticeable by Harold is getting to look more and more like you every day. Before he'll be a perfect imitation of his ther.

Parental Anxiety. "Were you successful in your interview with the girl's father?" "Not exactly. The old man demanded to know if I was prepared to support him in the same style his daughter was accustomed to do."

As a Woman Will. "Your wife seemed pleasant enough at the reception. Seemed to give me quite a little consideration."

Hog Meat. "I once printed a poem for the rural subscriber and today he sent me another valuable contribution for his pen."

"Eh?" "A prime pig."

TRUE TO EXPERIENCE. The House Manager: What's the idea repeating that picture of the man at the telephone with a coil in reading "several days have elapsed?"

The Producer: Realism, the man's still waiting for the number he called.

Afraid of Mice. There was an old lady of Nantuckee who never stirred out of her house but she carried her cat in her basket for fear of meeting a mouse.

A Bald Assertion. "You've got to be pretty smooth to get to the top nowadays."

"Right! And you usually get smooth on the top before you get there."

Hazy Recollection. "Why didn't Maud Muller marry to Judge?"

"My recollection is that she threw him over because the judge fined her for speeding."

Musical Comedy. "A musical comedy?" "Yes."

"Who wrote the book?" "A prominent dancing master."

Blanche's Make-Up By KATE EDMONDS (© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Mrs. Laura Peaslee sat in a comfortable rocking chair in the broad, airy hallway of her home, listening idly to the gay chatter and laughter of a group of merry girls.

Except for the loss of her husband, life had been very pleasant to the wealthy widow. She had an ample fortune and many valued friends, and in adopting her favorite niece she had added a new joy to existence.

It was concerning him that the bright quartette of young ladies were making so much noise. They all knew Deslyn except Miss Virden.

"We must all look our prettiest, you know," laughed Agnes. "Aunt Laura says Deslyn is surely going to carry one of us away with him."

"Well, don't flatter yourself, plain homely sister of mine," retorted the mischievous Frances. "It was always Nellie with Deslyn, and Nellie will certainly be the fairy princess."

"Yes," remarked Miss Virden in her feline way, "with that cream and peaches complexion of yours, Nellie, ordinary and artificial charms like ours will stand little show."

"Artificial!" bridled the circumspect Agnes. "Oh, on that score the reference was exclusively to myself, dear," explained Blanche. "I confess to the guilt of a make-up, girl. Come, Nellie, you were so kind as to invite me to visit with you overnight, and I brought my toilet case with me."

Blanche eyed the strong, healthy, natural girl, whose bright eyes and glowing cheeks told of sunshine, pure air, a quiet home life and—love.

They had a great time of it as Blanche opened the toilet case. She showed them how she brought the cherry red to her lips.

"And at night, dear—you see this muslin cloth. It is a beauty mask. Now look—I saturate it from the green bottle, I lay it over my face, and in the morning when I take it off the skin is clear and smooth as a baby's."

The next morning a hurry call came from Agnes, an unexpected invitation to a picnic. Blanche had to slip early. She left her toilet case behind her.

Nellie paused with a smile as she observed the open toilet case. Then she looked into the mirror. "Suppose I take my nap in a beauty mask. Why, I'll try it just for fun."

She laughed as she saturated the piece. Two hours later, just as Mrs. Peaslee entered the house, she was startled by a frantic scream. She rushed up the stairs. There was Nellie staring into the mirror. Her beautiful face was raw blotches.

WAYNE COUNTY MAN IS KILLED IN INDIA

Thomas Martin, 33 years old, was instantly killed July 25 when he fell from the skeleton work of a bridge in the course of erection over the Indus river in India.

According to relatives, Mr. Martin left the United States about 8 months ago and went to India to take charge of the construction of the bridge spanning the Indus river for the American Bridge Company, with which concern he had been associated for several years.

It was stated in the cablegram that Mrs. Martin is bringing the body back to this country and will arrive probably during the early part of September.

Mr. Martin was a native of Greenbrier-co., but removed to Dunleith, Wayne-co., about fifteen years ago where shortly afterward he married Miss Gaiel Pymale.

Throwing a Monkey Wrench into the Machinery

Allowing eye-disorders to go without correction is much the same as throwing a monkey wrench into the machinery. Often serious damage is wrought to

THE EYES by such carelessness or neglect. An examination by our expert oculist, who is also a registered physician, will often reveal such disorders and make possible their correction before too late. Don't wait. See us at once. LAKE POLAN, M. D. Huntington Optical Company 324 9 St. Huntington
