PRaises FROM THE GREAT FOR THE "HOME TOWN PAPER"

The "Home Town Paper" is everywhere receiving the eulogies of the great. Listen to the words of Dean A. R. Mann, of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University:

"The home town paper as an aid to community consciousness and development, deserves the support of all who believe in the highest possibilities of rural life. No one familiar with the great good done by the country press—a journalistic institution peculiar to the United States—can be indifferent to its continued successful service to rural affairs."

"For the past half-dozen years the college of agriculture has consistently tried to help the country papers in New York because it believes in them and in their mission. THERE IS NO OTHER COMMUNITY INSTITUTION OR ACTIVITY WHICH IS NOT IN SOME MEASURE SERVED BY, AND IN A MEASURE DEPENDENT UPON, THE LOCAL NEWSPAPER, when that paper is a going concern, as it should be. Since the college believes in whole-hearted support for the home town paper, it is glad to give every encouragement to the home town paper week."

"New York's country papers are rendering conspicuous service to the interest of farm and ome, and they deserve the support of all those who believe in these two great bulwarks of the best in American civilization."

Are you supporting yourself, your business and this town's interests, economically, morally, educationally and spiritually, by supporting your "Home Town Paper?"

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

A COLUMN DEDICATED TO TIRED MOTHERS AS THEY JOIN THE HOME CIRCLE AT EVENING TIDE.

In no country is it more important to have good manners than in our own, and yet here there is a great deficiency and care and instruction in this particular. Sometimes we censure girls for laughing loudly in public, yet if they have never been taught otherwise how can we blame them? Sometimes a girl will get on a crowded street car and make such caustic remarks that one man will finally feel compelled to give her his seat. We are not excusing him. Perhaps he should have done so in the first place, but the girl certainly cheapened herself and gave an unpleasant display of her disposition.

Good manners are not in the least difficult to cultivate. They mean nothing more than thoughtfulness for others. Contending too much for your rights stirs up the selfish feeling of others, while a readiness to yield them awakens generous sentiments and leads to mutual accommodations. The greater your advantages have been, the more polite and considerate you should be to others who are not so fortunate as to possess the opportunities you have had. If you wish to be well bred, you must carry your manners with you. Good breeding is not a thing that can be laid aside and put on at pleasure. True politeness is accompanied by the calm self-possession which belongs to a noble simplicity of purpose, and unless you cultivate it and exercise it upon all occasions and toward all persons it will never be a part of yourself.

Correct Speaking.

One of the most pleasing things in young people is the habit of correct speaking. Let us advise all our young readers to acquire it in early life. The longer you live the more difficult the acquirement of correct language is; and if the golden age of youth, the proper season for the acquisition of language is passed in abuse, the unfortunate victim, is very properly doomed to talk slang all his life. Money is not necessary to procure this education. Every one has it in his power. He has merely to use the language which he reads, instead of the slang which he hears to form his taste from the best poets and authors of the country, to treasure up choice between phrases in his memory, and habituate himself to their use, avoiding at the same time, that pedantic precision and bombast which show the weakness of vain ambition rather than the polish of an educated mind.

We are taught so many things in this world—science, literature, history. Our school curriculums are full of the things that others have learned, yet not one word teaches us how to live and most of us spend our entire life running about like frightened sheep trying to learn and a lot of us die without finding out. We use all our energy doing and have none left for thinking or for being happy. How much better it would be if we could learn to go a little slower and stop and get our bearings every day.

Poem by Uncle John

THE OLD LOG FIRE-PLACE.

How well I recollect it, from childhood's happy days, we gathered there around it, an' enjoyed its cheery blaze. The back-log's ponderosity held blessing's to enjoy—the forestick and the fillin' charmed th' happy girl an' boy. An' the smoke that up the chimney, wove its fitful, dreamy wreath, seemed playin' movie-phantoms to the embers underneath.

I recall the fairy-pictures that abounded in the glow of that plain, old-fashioned fire-place, that my child-hood used to know—and they seemed to dance an' smile at me, from out the golden flame, till I mighty nigh concluded that I knowed 'em all by name. It's curious, how they came again, when a feller's eyes is shet, bringin' back the old home fire-place, that a feller can't forget!

It gripped my youthful heart-strings with a super-sized content, which never has forsook me through the journey I have went,—and the most profound pleasures which I now and then enjoy, is to conjure back them visions, which I looked on when a boy, an' 'jes' monopolize 'em, as a feller will, you know, that loves the old log fire-place of the precious long ago.
