"Mules" Find Still.

Two 50-gallon copper moonshiners still complete, hot and running, was discovered by officers on Shoppe's creek about 100 yards from the county road on the banks of a small stream, Friday.

Deputy Sheriff Edmund Cyrus working for the "Mules," otherwise known as the Farmers Mutual Protective Association, assisted by Charles McSorley and John Huff, both members of the organization, were principals in the discovery and confiscation.

Upon the arrival of the raiders, territory within the vicinity of the still was notably deserted. Yet the odor of white mule was strong and hot liquid was oozing through the copper coil. A careful search after the still had been found, led to no clue as to the whereabouts or identity of its owners.

The still and two gallons of liquor were brought to the court house in Catlettsburg. No arrests have been made.
