THIRD LANCASTER COUNTY FAIR A HUGE SUCCESS

Friday Saw Greatest Crowd Ever Assembled Here. Full Premium List Covers All Departments.

Friday, the fifth and biggest day of the Third Lancaster County Fair, was Educational Day, and it drew the greatest crowd ever assembled in Lancaster. Cloudless, crisp, cool weather made an ideal day for such a gathering and a crowd estimated at between eight and ten thousand participated and witnessed the event of the day. At a few minutes before 11 o'clock, the school parade proceeded from the Central School on its way through thronged streets, marching nearly all of the way down Main street and returning the same way. At the head of the parade rode Chief Orr, head of the police department, and several other mounted policemen, Chief Marshal B. Cunningham and a number of other marshals and fair committeemen. Following close came a very creditable school float from Rich Hill. This was decorated in autumn leaves and bore several suggestive mottoes, among others the school slogan, "Our Ideals, Three-in-One—Physical, Mental, Moral." Inside the float were several high school pupils and other representatives of the school; came behind on foot. Next came Riverside in the line of march and then Antioch, whose original floats attracted much attention. In front was a representation from life of the teaching of a recitation, the teacher presiding over a modern school room. This float was attractively decorated. Just behind and attached to the float, was another float, representing the "old-field" type of school, with older pupils seated on split log benches, spelling out their lessons. Following in order came the Caston, Craigville, Ferguson, Van Wyck and Douglas schools, all of which made good showings.

Next in order came a float which attracted much attention, that of the night school at the Lancaster Cotton Mills. The automobile was covered with the white cotton fabric manufactured at the mill, with festoons of soft cotton, strings of shuttles covered the framework and the "harness" and other parts of the mill machinery were suggestive of the work which engages the labors of these workers who devote two nights each week to study. Flags of the State and nation decorated this float and the school's enrollment was given as 123.

The "Red Rose" float was covered with white and strewn with red roses, while ten pretty little maids appeared with flower faces, sparkling eyes and bright cheeks peeping out from red rose petals surrounded by green leaves. This effective float represented the Central School of Lancaster.

Dry Creek came next in line of march and made a good showing. Immediately following came the beautiful mill school float, a white draped automobile, covered with red hearts and soft robes of cotton. Miss Ruth Riddle, clad entirely in white, representing the "Queen of Hearts," drove the car and behind stood the imperial figure of His Majesty Lawson Caldwell, representing "King Cotton" in his robes of state. The imperial figure was clad in a red robe, trimmed in cotton ermine. He wore a kingly crown and wielded a sceptre of state.

The automobile parade followed that of the schools, having been postponed from Thursday on account of the rain that day. Miss Kate McManus drove a beautifully decorated car, in which yellow chrysanthemums formed the color motif. With Miss McManus, who was dressed in yellow and black, rode several young women similarly attired and a dog with big upstanding bow of yellow ribbon sat next to Miss McManus at the steering wheel.

Mr. J. M. Yoder's car, decorated in flags and farm products, attracted much attention. With Mr. and Mrs. Yoder rode several members of their family and other relatives. A number of other cars followed in the parade.
