

Hayes' Appointments.

The people of the country irrespective of party who desired a change in the system of appointments to office and a different class of men to fill the varied and responsible offices of our national government system do and can not feel a sense of relief after noticing the appointments made thus far by the executive.

The only exception that may be taken is that of giving the Treasury portfolio to Senator Sherman. That Mr. Sherman, as financial ability no one will deny, but his political course has been bitterly sectional and non-conciliatory. He has been one of the desperate leaders, advocating desperate means and measures and his connection with the approval of the Louisiana frauds and those who perpetrated them are of too recent date and generally known to recapitulate. His course during the last political campaign and the settlement of the Presidential contest subsequent to the election has been on the principle that "the end justifies the means," in order to reverse the sentiment and choice of the people as expressed at the polls and that the Republican party be thus continued in power. A disgraceful path he trod, and the majority of the people were so unfavorably impressed with him at the time of his elevation to membership in the Cabinet family.

But the country hopes for the better, hopes that in the discharge of his responsible duties he will moderate in his political tone and temper instead of agitating sectional strife, give attention to the promotion of peace and the cause of civil service reform.

To the balance of the cabinet no valid objections can be filed and the country at large will trust the cause of official reform in their hands. The appointment and distribution of the smaller offices thus far is generally commendable and satisfactory. That radical reforms were necessary in the civil service was universally conceded and any steps in that direction will be approved by the people.

But can we carry out the necessary reform in opposition to the party leaders to whom belongs the credit of turning a terrible defeat at the polls into a victory, by counting according to their ideas what the result should have been and thus place upon him the crown he now wears. They are the men who will prove his great foes in the introduction of reforms and who will endeavor to strangle this civil service infant. The President apparently desires to nurse and the country demand, shall be reared up to the stability and strength of manhood. Time will tell.

J. Don Cameron's Leadership.

Seldom in the history of a State does a single person or family wield the extended power and influence in its politics as does the Cameron family in our Commonwealth.

A generation has passed since Simon the elder entered the Senate of the United States having secured a majority by illegitimate means. He has been ever since a leader in politics grasping office for pecuniary interest and power. During the last administration he was a power behind the throne, principal actor in the arena of national politics and legislation. He exercised autocratic sway over his subject. Others were dismissed for no other reason than that they honestly and efficiently performed their trusts and were superseded by men known to be willing to do just as their master's bidding.

His son Don was pressed into the cabinet as Secretary of War against the wish of the better class of his own party. The war minister at the head of the Pennsylvania delegation overthrew Blaine at Cincinnati by making their own wishes themselves against their own defeat and that of the Republican party of the Commonwealth, for Blaine was their choice and idol.

Their united power and energy was employed in connection with the employment of all doubtful means to secure the election of Hayes. Being defeated by a large popular majority of the opposition, who also had a handsome majority of the Electors they agitated the breach and defeated the choice of the people.

But what was the reward asked for these labors? A continuance of power with the reappointment of J. Don as War Minister. Witness the acries of the trained office-holder and office-seeker. The Governor and his lieutenants in office, the Congressmen, the Republican portion of the Legislature, the Pilgrims of Philadelphia, office-holders in the state in general rushed to Washington to secure his reappointment. Yet all this is in opposition to the wishes of the better elements of the party. The favorite son is rejected and now comes the climax. After making sure of the re-election of the son, the father resigns. J. Don is rushed through caucus as the nominee and elected by the Legislature to succeed the venerable paternal predecessor in the senate. The people protest, the press rebels, but the whip is cracked, Cameron's power is supreme, the subordinate fill up the ranks, the heir apparent assumes the royal purple and the dynasty is perpetuated.

Great moral and consistent party. Civil service reform is advocated during campaigns to satisfy the rank and file, only to be followed after an election by the appointment of men who are strangers to the sentiment and whose official conduct reverses the signification of the term.

Mr. Hayes ought to understand distinctly that if there be any breach of the public peace in Louisiana, the responsibility will rest upon him alone. That Packard is seeking to bring about a disturbance, in the hope that it may in some way help his desperate fortunes, has been evident for some time; but Packard would long ago have abandoned his lawless pretensions were it not for the passive countenance he receives from the President, by whose consent the military power of the United States keeps this man in possession of the State House at New Orleans, and whose plan of another eight-by-seven commission has given him fresh hope of a more active support in store for him. Had Mr. Hayes promptly given effect to the fair promises he made when he entered upon his duties, and by withdrawing the troops from the State House and the lockless interference, that usurpation of authority, which has been the sole hindrance to the restoration of peace and good government in Louisiana, there would have been no opportunity for disturbances of any kind, the authority of the Nichols government would have been quietly recognized and the problem which now perplexes the President would have been settled forever. But his courage failed him at the moment courage was most required; he faltered when he most needed to go forward with firm step; and though the existing state of affairs is not of his creation, it is he who has made its continuance possible, and whatever mischief may spring from it now the responsibility will be his alone.—Times.

$100 FOR THE POOR. A NOBLE CHARITY FROM AN HONORABLE MAN.—A gentleman of our borough who was, quite against his will, on the day of the last election, drawn into a bet of one hundred dollars that Hayes would be elected President, and who has just received the wager, has placed the money in our hands to be distributed among the most deserving charities in our town. The editor will be obliged to all who will by letter call his attention to such personal or other charities as they may think deserving that he may dispose of this trust advisedly.—Belleville Republican.

The Spring term of the Penn Hall Academy will begin on Monday April 16th next. This institution has earned for itself a reputation which is perhaps second to none of its class in Pennsylvania. Its able principal, Prof. D. M. Wolf, ranks high as a Christian educator, and parents can safely commit their sons to the care of a gentleman who manifests such deep solicitude for the moral as well as the intellectual training of his pupils. May the Penn Hall Academy have continued success.

THE POOR HOME QUESTION. The sentiments of the citizens of this portion of the county are universally in decided opposition to having a Poor House, and such desultory facts as have reached us as to the working of such institutions in counties where they have been adopted, warrant us to oppose the project, in the interest of the tax payers. It shall be our purpose however to gather all possible information on the subject and place it before our readers that they may be better enabled to arrive at an intelligent conclusion on the question.

The following "local" is from the Williamsport Gazette & Bulletin: "Samuel C. Bryan, formerly of this city, is engaged running a portable saw mill for Mr. J. F. Fillman, near Lundell, Union county. He writes: "Owners of oak timber near here have received large orders for car building material from the Lehigh Valley railroad company and other roads. The timber on Penn's Creek is of excellent quality and is much sought after by car-builders. The Lewisburg Centre and Spruce creek railroad will open up a large scope of good timber lands. Track laying is progressing slowly but surely under the superintendence of Col. Moore, contractor, and by early spring I think it will be ready for travel as far as Spring Mills, Centre county, twenty miles west of here."—Leisvburg Chronicle.
