Conkling on Garfield.

Ex-Senator Conkling recently expressed himself very freely and very bitterly as well, over President Garfield. It may be that Garfield has fully as much contempt for Conkling, as Conkling possibly can have for the President...

He had trusted in them and he had been deceived in the most execrable manner.

Whether Conkling's charges against the President are true or not the public has no means of knowing. The above however shows the high regard our great Republican leaders have for each other.

Give the South a chance. Let the politicians accord her "a breathing time of day," amid this surfeit of talk about her want of enterprise and energy. The fact is she is making rapid strides in manufacturing. Cotton factories are going up; furnaces being erected; iron and coal are being largely mined...

The Sunbury Democrat reminds us that "politics makes strange bed-fellows. Last fall it was the rebel brigadiers that came in for a full share of Republican abuse for being in control of the Democratic party. Now the scale is turned, and if there ever was a time when the rebel element controlled the legislative department of this government it is now, when the rebel brigadier and "boss" repudiator from Virginia, General Mahone, by his vote, gives the Republicans, with the casting vote of the Vice President, the control of the United States Senate.

Gould, the King of Monopolists.

When the Supreme Court of the United States sustained the Constitutionality of the celebrated Thurman bill, which compelled the Pacific railroads to pay millions of dollars into the Federal Treasury they had withheld from the government, Gould declared that not only Thurman, but also Wallace, of this State, McDonald, of Indiana, Kernan, of New York, and Randolph, of New Jersey, who had ably sustained Thurman in the Senate, should also be defeated. With the aid of the Republican party he made his threat good. At the same time he largely contributed to the election of Garfield for what reason the public may infer when they see him dictating an appointment to the Supreme bench. Gould unblushingly testified before a Congressional committee of investigation that he had contributed immense sums of money to defeat certain candidates for Congress and elect others. He is supposed to be able to command majorities in both Houses of the newly elected Congress, he holds the President in his grip, and has made a fair start towards fastening his talons upon the Supreme Court of the nation. Can it be said, then, with truth, that we have not kings in America as well as upon the other continents of the earth? If the Radical party is not gotten out of power we will soon have them in name as well as in fact in the United States. —Clinton Democrat.

In less than three months President Garfield has most admirably succeeded to prove to the country that he is the merest trading politician without even a streak of the statesman in him. He has already thoroughly distracted and divided the Republican party and his entire administration promises to be a turbulent and stormy one. The better class of Republicans are beginning to see what a small man they have elevated to the Presidency. But that is no business of ours and they are entitled to all the credit they can make out of it.

All but twelve States will in the future hold their State elections in November on the same day at the general election for President. Four States, Colorado, Georgia, Ohio, and West Virginia, vote in October; California, Maine, and Vermont in September; Alabama and Kentucky in August; Oregon in June; Louisiana in May, and Rhode Island in April.

An extra session of the U. S. Senate adjourned sine die on Saturday last. The session was remarkable for its bitter quarrels over the nominations of President Garfield. Some very discreditible appointments—namely that of Stanley Matthews for Supreme Judge—were confirmed, while that of Wm. E. Chandler, for Solicitor General, was very properly rejected.

The star route contractors who are now being pushed to the wall are said to have given $40,000 in a lump to carry Indiana for Garfield's party last October. Naturally they cannot understand what kind of a reformer this man James is.

The Democrats of Virginia have called their State Convention for August 4. The State Committee met at Richmond on Wednesday of last week, and its members were very sanguine of success in the coming contest against Mahone and the Radicals.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C. May 22, '81. Adjournment was reached yesterday, nearly all the Presidential nominations having been previously acted upon and all but one confirmed. The one politician who was so bad that no Democrat would vote for him even to oblige the administration was Wm. E. Chandler, nominated for the position of Solicitor General. Being a lawyer without experience and an unscrupulous politician who would have made of his place a bureau for misrepresentation and oppression of the south for political effect. The Democrats very cordially united to defeat him. Chandler was not by any means the only one who ought to have been beaten, for the lot was not a very creditable one, and several men named were conspicuously unfit for the positions assigned them, or any other position, and the Senate Democrats have a kindly feeling for the President and let him have his way.

The sensation of the week was of course the resignation of the New York Senators. It was a very important event. Administration men at first looked upon it as simply an exhibition of spite, and a confession of defeat, on the part of Senator Conkling. They are rapidly changing their minds on the subject. Mr. Conkling has not that kind of strength which makes him a Lurbo candidate for a Presidential nomination, and he is not an agreeable man in his ordinary intercourse with others. But a newspaper man has lived to little real purpose in Washington who has not discovered that for four or five years past Conkling has steadily gained in influence and in the respect of his fellow legislators while others of less solid but more "popular" ways have as steadily lost. Mr. Conkling in or out of office, is today the ablest and most influential man in the Republican party, and has a capacity for mischief which I am glad to believe will not hereafter be exercised so freely or at least so effectually in the interests of the Republican party and against the restoration of good feeling between the northern and southern people. There is a half official statement to-day that the president will at once make a great many appointments—three hundred or more. He can appoint in the absence of the Senate. I have not learned why the appointments were delayed until after adjournment. The superintendent of the Census Gen. T. A. Walker, will enter upon other duties this fall. The General is one of the original Republican civil service reformers, and the only one of them, so far as I can recall their names who did not abandon the idea [like Grant or Tremain] like Schurz, or carry it to absurd lengths like Curtis. Gen. Walker's census work is the best ever done, and I don't believe he has refused or given employment to a single man because of the man's politics.
