CONSEQUENCES OF ADVERTISING. The Boston Journal of Wednesday relates the following consequence of advertising:—"Geo. W. Warren inserted an advertisement in our paper of Saturday, stating that he was about to dispose of his large stock of goods at very reduced prices, and his store has been thronged—flooded—inundated with customers ever since—inasmuch that the enterprising proprietor and all his clerks are actually exhausted with their continual labors in waiting upon their visitors.

We might mention several similar cases in this city among those who advertise in our columns, but as they enjoy a kind of monopoly, to which they are rightfully entitled,—and about which those who do not advertise, have no right to grumble,—we will not particularize.
