MRS. CAUDLE'S CURTAIN LECTURES.
MR. CAUDLE HAS BEEN AT A TAVERN WITH A FRIEND.

Poor Mr. Ha! I'm sure I don't know who'd be a poor woman! I don't know who'd tie themselves up to a man, if they knew only half they'd have to bear. A wife must stay at home, and be a drudge, whilst a man can go anywhere. It's enough for a wife to sit like Cinderella by the ashes, whilst her husband can go drinking and singing at a tavern. You never sing! How do I know you never sing?—It's very well for you to say so; but if I could hear you, I dare say you're amongst the worst of 'em.

And now, I suppose, it will be the tavern every night. If you think I'm going to sit up for you, Mr. Caudle, you're very much mistaken. No; and I'm not going to get out of my warm bed to let you in, either. No; nor Susan shall sit up for you; nor you shall have a latch key. I'm not going to sleep with the door upon the latch, to be murdered before the morning.

Faugh! Pah! Whew! That filthy tobacco smoke! It's enough to kill any decent woman. You know I hate tobacco, and yet you will do it. You don't smoke yourself! What of that! If you go among people who do smoke, you're just as bad, or worse. You might as well smoke—indeed better. Better smoke yourself, than come home with other people's smoke in your hair.

I never knew any good come to a man who went to a tavern. Nice companions he picks up there! Yes; people who make it a boast to treat their wives like slaves, and ruin their families. There's that wretch, Prettyman. See what he's come to. He does not now get home till two in the morning; and then in what a state! He begins quarrelling with the doormat, that his poor wife may be afraid to speak to him. A mean wretch! But don't you think I'll be like Mrs. Prettyman. No; I wouldn't put up with the best man that ever trod—how ever you may appear at the door-mat. No Mr. Caudle, that you won't.

You don't intend to stay out till two in the morning! How do you know what you'll do when you get among such people? Men can't answer for themselves when they get boozing one with another. They never think of their poor wives, who are grieving and wearing themselves out at home. A nice headache you'll have to-morrow morning—or rather this morning; it must be past twelve. You won't have a headache! It's very well for you to say so, but I know you will; and then you may nurse yourself for me. Ha! that filthy tobacco again! No; I shall not go to sleep like a good soul! How's people to go to sleep when they're suffocated?

Yes Mr. Caudle, you'll be nice and ill in the morning! But don't you think I'm going to let you have your breakfast in bed, like Mrs. Prettyman. I'll not be such a fool. No; nor I won't have discredit brought upon the house by sending for soda-water early, for all the neighborhood to say, Caudle was drunk last night! No; I've some regard for the dear children, if you haven't. No; nor you shall have broth for dinner. Not a neck of mutton crosses my threshold, I can tell you.

You won't want soda, and you won't want broth! All the better. You wouldn't get 'em if you did, I can assure you.—Dear, dear, dear! That filthy tobacco! I'm sure it's enough to make me as bad as you are. Talking about getting divorced—I'm sure tobacco ought to be good grounds. How little does a woman think when she marries, that she gives herself up to be poisoned! You men contrive to have it all of your own side, you do. Now, if I was to go and leave you and the children, a pretty noise there'd be! You, however, can go and smoke no end of pipes! You didn't smoke! It's all the same, Mr. Caudle, if you go among smoking people. Folks are known by their company. You'd better smoke yourself, than bring me home the pipes of all the world.

Yes, I see how it will be. Now you're gone to a tavern, you'll always be going.—You'll be coming home tipsy every night, and tumbling down and breaking your leg, and putting out your shoulder; and bringing all sorts of disgrace and expense upon us. And then you'll be getting into a street fight—oh! I know your temper too well to doubt it. Mr. Caudle—and the knocking down some of the police.—And then I know what will follow.—It must follow. Yes, you'll be sent for a month or six weeks to the treadmill. Pretty thing that, to put upon the treadmill with all sorts of thieves and vagabonds—and there, again that horrible tobacco!—and ruff-raff of every kind. I should like to know how your children are to hold up their heads, after their father has been upon the treadmill? No; I won't go to sleep. And I'm not talking of what is impossible. I know it will happen—every bit of it. If it wasn't for the dear children, you might be ruined and I wouldn't so much as speak about it, but—oh, dear, oh, dear! at least you might go where they smoke good tobacco—but I can't forget that I'm their mother.—At least they shall have one parent.

Taverns! Never did a man go to a tavern who didn't die a beggar. And how your pot-companions will laugh at you when they see your name in the News! For it must happen. Your business is sure to fall off; for what respectable man will buy toys for his children of a drunkard? You're not a drunkard? No; but you will be—it's all the same.

You've begun by staying out till midnight. By-and-by 'twill be all night. But don't you think, Mr. Caudle, you shall ever have a key. I know you. Yes; you'd do exactly like that Prettyman, and what did he do, only last Wednesday? Why, he let himself in about four in the morning, and brought home with him his pot companion, Leamy. His dear wife woke at six, and saw Prettyman's dirty boots at her bedside. And where was the wretch, her husband? Why, he was drinking down stairs—drinking. Yes; worse than a midnight robber, he'd taken the keys out of his dear wife's pockets—ha! what that poor creature has to bear!—and had got the brandy. A pretty thing for a wife to wake at six in the morning, and instead of her husband, to see his dirty boots!

But I'll not be made your victim, Mr. Caudle, not I. You shall never get at my keys, for they shall lie under my pillow—under my own head, Mr. Caudle.

You'll be ruined; but if I can help it, you shall ruin nobody but yourself.

Oh! that hor—hor—hor—i—ble to—bac—co!

Mr. C. has remained down stairs till past 1 o'clock, with a friend.

A pretty time of night to come to bed Mr. Caudle. Ugh! As cold, too, as any ice.—Enough to give any woman her death, I'm sure. What! I shouldn't have looked up the coals, indeed? If I hadn't, I have no doubt the fellow would have staid all night. It's all very well for you, Mr. Caudle, to bring people home—but I wish you'd think first what's for supper. That beautiful leg of pork would have served for our dinner to-morrow, and now it's gone. I can't keep the house upon the money and I won't pretend to do it, if you bring people every night to clear the cupboard.

I wonder who'll be ready to give you a supper when you want one; for want one you will, unless you change your plans. Don't tell me! I know I'm right. You'll first be eaten up and then you'll be laughed at, I know the world.—No, indeed, Mr. Caudle, I don't think ill of every body; don't say that, but I can't see a leg of pork eaten up in that way, without asking myself what it's all to end in if such things go on? And then he must have pickles, too! Couldn't be content with my cabbage—no, Mr. Caudle, I won't let you go to sleep; it's all very well to say you go to sleep, after you have kept me awake till this time. Why did I keep awake? How do you suppose I could go to sleep, when I knew that a man was below drinking up your substance in brandy and water for he couldn't be content upon decent, wholesome gin. Upon my word, you ought to be a rich man, Mr. Caudle. You have such very fine friends. I wonder who gives you brandy when you go out?

No, indeed, he couldn't be content with my pickled cabbage—and I should like to know who makes better—but he must have walnuts. And you, too, like a fool—now don't think to stop me, Mr. Caudle; a poor woman may be trampled to death, and never say a word—you, too, like a fool—I wonder who'd do it for you—no, I won't let the girl going out for pickled walnuts. And in such a night too! With snow upon the ground. Yes, you're a man of fine feelings, you are Mr. Caudle; but the world doesn't know you as I know you—fine feelings indeed! to send the poor girl out, when I told you and your friend too—a pretty brute he is, I'm sure—that the poor girl had got a cold and chilblains on her toes. But I know what will be the end of that; she'll be laid up, and we shall have a nice doctor's bill. And you'll pay it, I can tell you—for I won't.

What you were out of the world? Oh! yes, that's all very easy, I'm sure I might wish it. Don't swear in that dreadful way! Ain't you afraid that the bed will open and swallow you? And don't swing about in that way. That will do no good. That won't bring back the leg of pork, and the brandy you've poured down both of your throats.—Oh, I know it! I'm sure of it! I only recollected it when I'd got into bed, and if I hadn't been so cold, you'd have seen me down stairs again, I can tell you—I recollected it, and a pretty two hours I passed, that I left the key in the cupboard—and I knew it—I could see by the manner of you, when you came into the room—I know you've got at the other bottle. However, there's one comfort: you told me to send for the best brandy—the very best—for your other friend, who called last Wednesday. Ha! ha! It was British—the cheapest British—and nice and ill I hope the pair of you will be to-morrow.

There's only the bare bone of the leg of pork; but you'll get nothing else for dinner, I can tell you. It's a dreadful thing that the poor children should go without,—but, if they have such a father, they poor things, must suffer for it.

Nearly a whole leg of pork and a pint of brandy! A pint of brandy and a leg of pork. A leg of leg—pint—

And mumbled the syllables, says Mr. Caudle's MS, she went to sleep.

EXTRAORDINARY FRESHET—Great Loss of Property. The Buffalo correspondent of the Rochester Daily Democrat, writing from that city on the 3d inst., gives the following extraordinary intelligence:

"An extraordinary excitement has prevailed at Queenston and Lewiston for the last 3 days. The ice has disappeared from here with great rapidity. Such has been its movement over the falls of Niagara, accompanied by a strong North wind, that the Niagara river has been completely broken up.

"The ice yesterday (the 2d) within a mile of a respectable tradesman, Mr. Caudle, to be put upon the treadmill with all sorts of thieves and vagabonds—and there, again that horrible tobacco!—and ruff-raff of every kind. I should like to know how your children are to hold up their heads, after their father has been upon the treadmill? No; I won't go to sleep. And I'm not talking of what is impossible. I know it will happen—every bit of it. [For the American Republican.]
Messrs. Editors.—The trade of this country with Canton is principally done through New York, Boston having, with this exception, the balance of it.

During the past twelve months there have cleared from Baltimore and elsewhere for the East Indies, as follows—Bark Pioneer; ships Stephen Lurman, Orphans, and Cincinnati; and brig Lady Adams, Canada, and Argyle.—Several others (new) cleared hence, but were owned by merchants at the Eastward, having been built here for their account.

These vessels were nearly, if not altogether, loaded by Baltimoreans, notwithstanding which they will all return to New York, because they will there find a ready market for their cargoes.

Now, had there been a concert of action between the owners of the above vessels and cargoes, causing them all to return to our port, the stock of teas in our market would have increased purchasers to buy, as the assortment would have been large and various, and the competition sufficient to guarantee as low a price as elsewhere.

Some may say the experiment has been tried and failed. I deny the assertion. True, one of our oldest and most enterprising houses made an effort to sell one or two cargoes of tea in Baltimore, and our own trade compelled them to desist by still continuing to give the New York market the preference in making their purchases; but we say the experiment was still untold, for we had not the large assortment and the competition which the return of the vessels named herein would have afforded by making this their port of discharge—two requisites for opening a market successfully for a new import.

Now if I am right in my supposition that the cargoes of the above vessels coming into our port in the course of twelve months would have created a market here for teas, then I am also right in asserting that the Baltimore capital invested in the trade is sufficient for the same purpose, and concert of action is only necessary.

Will not then those engaged in the Canton trade take some steps to redeem our city, that our capital may no longer pay tribute to other cities? Surely they will do so.

It behooves us as a community to look around us at the present moment. If we make the effort now to create a market here for the various articles we are indebted to the Eastern ports for, we may yet, before the completion of the Canal to Cumberland, fortify ourselves against its evil effects and place us in a position to assist our Railroad on the Ohio.

I have already shown in my first communication, that the coal contract between the railroad company and the coal company will cause an increase of 40,000 tons of shipping to take off the same. The tea trade would add another link to the chain binding the West to us.

In a cargo on Baltimore account received at New York a few months since, we noticed a consignment of one of our large Grocers. His teas were brought to this market, and here sold. One must admire the spirit which actuated him, and I trust others will hereafter follow his example. JOHN SMITH, of Jno.

THE HORRORS OF SUPERSTITION. The "festival of Charak Pujah" is thus described in "Duff's India." The revolting ceremonies afford an idea of the barbarous practices of these heathen people:

This festival derives its name of Charak Pujah, from charak, a discus or wheel; in allusion to the circle performed in the act of seining, which constitutes so very prominent a part of the anniversary observances. An upright pole, twenty or thirty feet in height, is planted in the ground. Across the top of it, moving freely on a pin or pivot, is placed horizontally another long pole. From one end of this transverse beam is a rope suspended, with two hooks attached to it. To the other extremity is fastened another rope, which hangs loosely toward the ground. The devotee comes forward, and prostrates himself in the dust. The hooks are then run through the fleshy parts of his back, near the shoulders. A party, holding the rope at the other side, immediately begin to revolve round with considerable velocity. By this means the wretched dupes of superstition is hoisted aloft into the air, and violently whirled round and round. The torture he may continue to endure for a longer or a shorter period, according to his own free will. Only this being reckoned one of the holiest of acts, the longer he can endure the torture, the greater the pleasure conveyed to the deity whom he serves; the greater portion of the merit accruing to himself, and, consequently, the brighter the prospect of future reward. The time usually occupied averages from ten minutes to half an hour; and as soon as one is ended another candidate is ready, aspiring to earn the like merit and distinction. And thus on one tree, from five to ten or fifteen may be swung in the course of a day. Of these swinging posts there are hundreds and thousands simultaneously in operation in the province of Bengal. They are always erected on the most conspicuous parts of the towns and villages, and are surrounded by vast crowds of noisy spectators. On the very streets of the native city of Calcutta, many of these horrid swings are annually to be seen, and scores around the suburbs. It not infrequently happens that, from the extreme rapidity of the motion, the ligaments of the back give way, in which case the poor devotee is tossed to a distance, and dashed to pieces. A loud wail of commiseration, you now suppose, will be raised in behalf of the unhappy man who has thus fallen a martyr to his religious enthusiasm. No such thing! Idolatry is cruel as the grave. Instead of sympathy or compassion, a feeling of detestation and abhorrence is excited toward him. By the principles of their faith he is adjudged to have been a desperate criminal in a former state of being; and he has now met with this violent death in the present birth, as a righteous retribution on account of egregious sins committed in a former.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE OR MORTGAGE. IN VIRTUE of a power to sell, contained in the deed of mortgage, dated 18th July, 1838, of record in Liber T. K. No. 381, folio 71, &c. one of the land records of Baltimore county, from Abraham Hyam, as mortgagee, to Patrick McCauley and John H. B. Latrobe, trustees of the estate of Joseph B. Latrobe, deceased, and in pursuance of the Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at December session, 1836, chapter 249, entitled an act relating to mortgages in the city of Baltimore, the undersigned, as attorney of the said mortgagees, hereby give notice that on Thursday the 17th April, 1845, at 10 o'clock, p. m., on the premises, he will proceed to foreclose the said mortgage by a sale at public auction to the highest bidder, of the property described in said mortgage, as follows: All that piece or parcel of Ground situated, and lying in the city of Baltimore, on the North side of Camden street, fronting the street, and containing back 100 feet, between Pratt and Enoch streets, it being a Lot leased by George and Benjamin C. How and to Charles D. Gorsuch, on the 1st December, 1837, at the yearly rent of $48, and assigned by said George and Benjamin C. How to the said Patrick McCauley and John H. B. Latrobe, on the 1st January, 1838. The debt due on said mortgage, and to satisfy which the above sale will be made, amounts principal and interest, to this day, to the sum of $1,444.44.

The terms of sale are: Cash; one third in six months, and one-third in 12 months. The credit payments to bear interest from the day of sale, and to be secured by approved endorsed notes, or the whole in cash, at the option of the purchaser.

JOHN H. B. LATROBE,
Attorney of Mortgagees.

TOOTHACHE! TOOTHACHE!

This aggravating pain can be cured in a few minutes without pain or inconvenience, so that it may be filed and rendered a valuable tooth for life, thereby obviating the pain and danger of having it extracted, by BR STINSON, 51 HANOVER STREET, 5 doors above Pratt, who guarantees a permanent cure in all cases. Also, Filing, Sealing, Plugging, regulating or removing the irregularities of Children's Teeth.

Dr. S. will insert ARTIFICIAL TEETH, from one to a full set, in the latest and most approved manner. He has particular attention to the best of the profession, and warrants his operations to give perfect satisfaction in all cases. Those troubled with teeth that have been improperly inserted or requiring new ones, would do well to call as early as possible, in order to have generally all obstacles to the operation. Persons doing so may rely on being treated in a skillful manner and at prices that cannot fail to please.

Dr. S. has an article for filling teeth that are too much decayed to be plugged with gold, which will render them serviceable and durable. This article is entirely unlike the cements now in use, as it never turns, or changes color.

All operations performed in the most desirable manner, and at very reasonable charges. Office hours from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M.

FROM BRAZIL. We have advices from Rio to the 1st ult; and Bahia to the 5th. The Empress was safely delivered of a Prince on the 23d Feb. Flour was steady and Coffee scarce at Rio; Bahia was glutted with U. S. produce and manufactures.

ARRESTS IN NEW YORK. The present police force of New York, since assuming their duties on the 20th of January last, have made 1552 arrests.

PHILADELPHIA, WILMINGTON AND BALTIMORE RAIL ROAD. A correspondent of the U. S. Gazette says:—

The Bostonians have made a dip into the stock of this Company, to the amount of at least ten thousand shares, causing it to advance to $25 within a few days past.

The reduction in the fare on this road from four dollars to three, has been commended by the Stockholders, on the ground that a lower scale of prices than that heretofore adopted by the Company, will ensure more patronage and consequently more profit. Hence it is, that in New England, (where three cents per mile is regarded as a high price,) these Companies have been most successful, which have adopted the lowest rates!

It is estimated that one half of their revenue arises from freight, carried at about 3 cents per ton a mile!

We understand that the late reduction in the charges of the Wilmington and Baltimore Company have increased the business of the line very materially, and it only needs a continuation of moderate prices, and the substitution of a heavy rail for the few miles of flat bar which yet remain, (and which will combine economy of money and time,) to secure to the route a large and inalienable patronage.

THE PRESIDENT AT CHURCH. We learn from the Madisonian, that President Polk and family attended the 2d Presbyterian Church, in Washington, on Sunday. He intends taking seats there.

BARRADORS. Papers to the 5th of March have been received. Rewards have been offered for the detection of the incendiaries who set fire to Bridgeton. The sugar crop is good, and 5000 hogsheads have recently been shipped in one day.

GUILTY. William Hurley, aged 17 years, has been tried in Philadelphia for the murder of John G. Merrow, another youth, and found guilty of manslaughter, with a recommendation to the mercy of the Court.

ARREST OF GAMBLERS. Peter Myers and Nathaniel McCurrey, have been arrested and held to bail in Philadelphia, on a charge of keeping a faro table.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY. Wm. H. Cleveland, of Newburyport, Mass., was knocked down in Philadelphia on Sunday night and robbed of $50 and his watch.

WEST'S PATENT LAMPS. No. 15 SHARP STREET, Between Baltimore and German streets.

Important improvement in the use of artificial light by the introduction of WEST'S PATENT CYLINDER LAMPS. Suitable for Stores, Parlors, Workshops—in fact every situation where a good light is required. The great object attained is that the Lamp can be burned out perfectly dry when the wick is not more than an inch in length, consequently the light will never go out when there is any oil in the lamp, which entirely obviates the necessity of replenishing it with oil, the most needed. In point of brilliancy it surpasses gas, and not half the expense; it is also devoid of that flickering light, so unpleasant from the gas burner.

Also, on a sale at public auction to the highest bidder, of the property described in said mortgage, as follows: All that piece or parcel of Ground situated, and lying in the city of Baltimore, on the North side of Camden street, fronting the street, and containing back 100 feet, between Pratt and Enoch streets, it being a Lot leased by George and Benjamin C. How and to Charles D. Gorsuch, on the 1st December, 1837, at the yearly rent of $48, and assigned by said George and Benjamin C. How to the said Patrick McCauley and John H. B. The terms of sale are: Cash; one third in six months, and one-third in 12 months. The credit payments to bear interest from the day of sale, and to be secured by approved endorsed notes, or the whole in cash, at the option of the purchaser.
