BALTIMORE.

Since the departure of Villani's Italian Opera Troupe, after a brief but brilliant career of unvarying success, the project of building an Opera House, or Academy of Music, has been agitated in our community. We hope the interest which has manifested in this idea will not be allowed to vanish as suddenly as the event which suggested it, towards its execution at no distant day.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Mr. Green replied that he would waive his right to open the debate, reserving the right to answer to be submitted by him. He expressed the hope that the majority had no desire to open the debate, but all the friends of the bill were disposed to allow a fair hearing to all sides.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Mr. Douglas remarked that during the past ten days he had read the various newspapers rumors and reports to the effect that he and his friends from Michigan and California, (Messrs. St. Louis, Douglas, and others) had been formally read out of the democratic party, and he held them there. He now rose for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee whether there was any truth in those statements.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Mr. Allen replied that he knew nothing of any matter having been read out of the party on that occasion. Mr. Douglas said that during fourteen years past he had never seen any such thing, and he thought it was a very particular measure was a party matter, and he thought the responsibility of reading men out of the party.
