Could we Recall Departed Joys.

Could we recall departed joys, As price of parted pain, Oh! who that prizes happy hours Would live his life again?

Such pleasures pass as once we shed, No pleasures can repay— Loss of oblivion, joy and grief! We're thankful for to-day.

Calm be the current of our lives, As rivers deep and clear: Mild be the light upon our faith, To guide us up and cheer!

For streams of joy that burst and foam, And leave their channels dry, And deadlier lightnings ever flash The brightest in the sky!

Monday Evening's Exhibition.

Have you the honor of the acquaintance of Seragg, gentle reader? No. Then you should have—"a fellow of infinite jest." He rooms with us under the charitable and high-pitched roof of Madame Slouchkroustye—a Polish exile. Consequently we know his aspirations, from the sublime to those that are not so, which are frequent—speaking of the latter.

Three weeks ago last Saturday he allowed us to enter into the knowledge of a fact. He had begun to take dancing lessons and told us so. We approved of this erratic course, as we always do of any course this benign youth determines to follow previous to a consultation with his friends. Well, he has taken lessons this far along, and to-day we saw him up to the grand total of results.

First!—all schottische off the ceiling of our domain; rain now comes through between the laths.

Looking-glass disfigured by a compound fracture. It went up with a Highland Fling and came down with a smash.

Wash-bowl and pitcher polkaed into a thousand pieces, long since used as small-arm ammunition against cats while engaged in their unapproachable duets, rendered on our back porch with great vocal power. Half a dozen new linen shirts, a fine cloth dress coat of a delicate plum tint, a crimson dotted silk velvet vest, etc., to a great length, all seriously damaged by the upsetting of a coal oil can into our open trunk. Seragg did it in doing the Valsevienne. Told us that he was willing to be excused. Now we are getting tired of Seragg's in this "department of effort."—So is Madame Slouchkroustye, the Polish exile. And yesterday, by the way, when the perspicacious youth "balanced" against the servant girl, causing her to distribute impartially a gigantic bowl of gravy over the dinner table, her gown, and the Polish exile's cap, etc., to a great length, all seriously damaged by the upsetting of a coal oil can into our open trunk. Seragg did it in doing the Valsevienne. Told us that he was willing to be excused. Now we are getting tired of Seragg's in this "department of effort."—So is Madame Slouchkroustye, the Polish exile. And yesterday, by the way, when the perspicacious youth "balanced" against the servant girl, causing her to distribute impartially a gigantic bowl of gravy over the dinner table, her gown, and the Polish exile's cap, etc., to a great length, all seriously damaged by the upsetting of a coal oil can into our open trunk. Seragg did it in doing the Valsevienne. Told us that he was willing to be excused. Now we are getting tired of Seragg's in this "department of effort."—So is Madame Slouchkroustye, the Polish exile. And yesterday, by the way, when the perspicacious youth "balanced" against the servant girl,
