

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

The House Again Refuses to Consider the Appropriation Bill.

The Apportionment Bills Awaiting the Signature of the Governor to Become Law.

The Senate Congratulates Messrs. Cleveland and Hendricks—Talk of an Extra Session—Other Notes.

The Appellate Court bill—a substitute for that of Senator Welr—was passed by the Senate yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Bailey's bill permitting saloons in certain cities to be kept open till 12 o'clock, midnight, was defeated in the Senate yesterday by a vote of 21 to 17.

The House yesterday concurred in the Senate amendments to the Congressional and Legislative apportionment bill by a vote of 58 to 38.

The Militia bill was called up in the House at 4:30 yesterday afternoon, and Mr. Helm spoke upon it till the afternoon adjournment.

A committee of three was appointed yesterday, on motion of Representative Reeves, to investigate the condition of the new State House fund, with instructions to report to-day, whether any legislation is necessary for a continuation of the work.

The House joint resolution providing for a constitutional amendment lengthening the term of the General Assembly to 100 days, was read a first time in the Senate, and notice was given of an attempt to be made to put the resolution on its passage to-day.

A motion to allow each member and the clerk of the Prison Committee $30 for expenses incurred in visiting the prisons, was defeated in the House yesterday by a vote of 40 to 29, but the clerk, Mrs. McChesney, was allowed $20 for her expenses and services.

A communication from Koscusko Post, G. A. R., asking that the Orphans' Home be separated from the Asylum for Feeble-minded, and that Goar be removed from the office of Trustee, was yesterday presented to the Senate by the Lieutenant Governor.

The Committee on Mileage and Accounts yesterday presented the expense accounts of the special committee to investigate the affairs of the new Insane Hospitals and the Knightstown Home. The expense will aggregate in the neighborhood of $1,200. No action was taken on the claims.

There is still some talk of an extra session of the legislature, but a majority of the Democratic members are opposed to it and are doing all in their power to prevent its necessity. In conversation with Representative Cory yesterday he gave it as his opinion that no extra session would be held, and believed that all the necessary business of the House could be satisfactorily accomplished in the remaining days of the session.

The Senate yesterday passed a joint resolution, introduced by Mr. Zimmerman, congratulating Messrs. Cleveland and Hendricks on their peaceful and triumphant election, and wishing them a prosperous term of office. An attempt was made by the Republicans to refer the matter to a special committee, but the motion was rejected. The resolution was then passed and a copy was ordered sent by telegraph to the President and Vice President.

On the call of counties yesterday afternoon a member introduced the Appropriation bill, and an effort was made to have it considered. A vote on the subject showed that fifty members were opposed to its consideration and but forty two in favor of it, and the bill again went over. Of the fifty voting against the consideration of the bill a large majority were Republicans, they voting solidly with a few Democrats. It is thought that the bill will be passed to-day, yesterday's vote showing that the sentiment in favor of passing the bill and adjourning on Monday had increased considerably since Tuesday.

EMMETT'S BIRTHDAY.

Celebration at Masonic Hall by the Emmet Guards—Address by Governor Gray.

A large number of ladies and gentlemen were present at the Masonic Hall, last evening, to witness the 107th anniversary exercises of Robert Emmet. Governor Gray was master of ceremonies and, after an overture by F. A.'s orchestra, delivered the following address:

I congratulate my Irish-American fellow citizens on this occasion, for their patriotic devotion to the memory of their martyred countryman, Robert Emmet.

Today, March 4, 1885, is the 107th anniversary of his birth, an event which occurred in the city of Dublin, March 4, 1778, and which established an epoch in the history of his native land.

Dr. Robert Emmet, State Physician, the father of the martyr patriot, was, if we are to credit authentic history, deeply religious, and his son should be liberally educated, and we hear of him at several schools and academies during his boyhood, and finally, at the age of fifteen, entering Trinity College. Such facts lead to the conclusion that the martyr was a studious youth, and at an early age became profoundly versed in the history of his country; and, as a consequence, must have obtained a thorough knowledge of the wrongs it had endured by English invasion, subjugation and degradation.

I am persuaded that young Emmet not only learned of Ireland's sufferings from books and tradition, but that his father had impressed upon his youthful mind vivid pictures of the humiliations of his countrymen. During his last, his immortal speech, delivered before the tribunal that sentenced him to wear a martyr's crown, Emmet is reported as saying:

"If the spirits of the illustrious dead participate in the concerns and cares of those who are dear to them in this transitory life, oh, ever dear and venerated shades of my departed father, look down with scrutiny upon the conduct of your suffering son and see if I have even for a moment deviated from those principles of morality and patriotism which it was your care to instill into my youthful mind, and for which I am now to offer up my life."

Robert Emmet had been taught to revere liberty and independence; to abhor slavery and degradation. He had the spirit of America's Patrick Henry, and his battle cry, "Henry's," was "Give me liberty or give me death."

I have said, and I believe the date is correct, that Robert Emmet was born March 4, 1778. His accounts agree that he was executed September 20, 1802. His whole life, therefore, from the cradle to the scaffold, embraced the brief period of twenty-five years, six months and sixteen days. He was young in years, and yet he lived long enough to secure an eternity of fame. He stirred for liberty, not only for himself but for all his downtrodden countrymen, and he asked his blood from fountains in all lands where liberty had a shrine or a worshiper. He had read of America and her illustrious apostles of liberty. He had heard the Lexington shot of defiance and the Yorktown shout of victory. He had read the DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, and his ear attuned to the melodies of freedom, had heard the sound of the bugles of old independence bell at Palladium when it rang out to the world the joyful tidings that a new Nation was born; and he had read the pledge of life, fortune and honor made by the immortal signers of the child of liberty that it should not perish.

I imagine that young Emmet became inspired by such knowledge to make one more trial to emancipate his country from British bondage. Was it treason? Such was the verdict of the British Court. Treason to what? To his country? No. To his God? No. To truth, to liberty, to liberty? No. There is not a liberty loving man or woman in Ireland, or in America, who does not profess against the British, resist and you, his countrymen, who revere his memory and celebrate the anniversary of his birth, honor your God and your country, so do not crowd me with your aspirations for liberty, but in the heart, burning under the burden and infamities of years, crowded with a fiercer hope, any cause against mighty odds. And Ireland now, or hereafter, as in 1802, when Emmet raised the standard of the great and glorious England, brood and riveted letters, must be led by young Irishmen. I have only words of eulogy for the young man who, in the face of a world whose soul glows with holy ambitions to be free. He may not know when best to strike, or how best to aim the blow, but knowing that it is his duty, he will strike, he will strike for liberty and his native land.

History records this fact that the plans devised by Robert Emmet in 1802 and 1803 for the liberty of his country did not succeed. But the question arises: Has the time arrived for Irishmen to confess failure? As I read history, England began the work of subjugating Ireland as early as 1170. In 1155-700 years ago 327 years before the discovery of America by Columbus, 672 years before the work of subjugating Ireland, as early as 1170, upon the scaffold with a martyr's halber around his neck, passed there by England, whose bosom and heart had burned with the fires of rapine and tyranny, whose mouth was filled with the pious praises of the living God, while her hands were busy with the blood of innocent and devoted boys and daughters of the Emerald Isle.

Conceive that it would be premature to render a verdict of failure against Emmet, and such a verdict will not be given by the Irishmen of to-day.

From the time of King Henry II, 1155, to the death of Cromwell, A. D. 1658, Ireland was constantly in an insurrectionary condition with more than one desperate struggle to crush the work of subjugating Ireland, as early as 1170, when another effort was made to secure emancipation. During all this extended period, a period of long persecutions which did not subside until the year 1793, when the work of the soil of the work of England's British power, when another effort was made to secure emancipation. During all this extended period, a period of long persecutions which did not subside until the year 1793, when the work of the soil of the work of England's British power, when another effort was made to secure emancipation.

It should be remembered that a righteous cause does not die with its champions. If it were otherwise, the cause of Ireland would have been irrevocably sealed long before Emmet fell to satisfy English vengeance. I do not believe the time has come to sound the death-knell of Ireland's liberties, the rights, the truth never die. They are immortal. England by murdering Emmet gave a grander glory to the cause he espoused.

Fellow citizens of Irish birth and of Irish lineage, do you not in fancy sometimes see Robert Emmet standing upon the scaffold? Young, erect, undaunted, serene, England, personified in the hangman, by his side England places the halber about his neck, adjusts the knot. It is a supreme moment for Ireland. Arrangements are completed. England steps back and Emmet stands alone before the world, as grand a figure as tyranny ever imposed upon the altar of his hate. England stands back and Emmet dies for Ireland. That list of atrocious perjury transpired eighty-two years ago, and to-day Ireland is independent. It is independent in 1802 and 1803. Emmet and his band of United Irishmen perished all for liberty. England has not relaxed her grasp upon Ireland's throat, nor removed her despotism from her prostrate form. England continues her persecutions, nor does she modify the heat of the flames through which she compels Irishmen to pass. Imprisonment, eviction, exile, banishment and death continue to scourge Ireland; but Emmet is remembered. Emmet's scaffold stands out sharply outlined in the memory of Ireland's devoted sons and daughters. I swell from earth monuments of his noble proportions, not dark and gloomy as a warning to the living to abandon hope and yield to despair. No. The scaffold upon which Emmet yielded up his life for his country has become a monument of England's tyranny and Ireland's glory, and to-day Emmet's labors and Emmet's death should inspire Irishmen to maintain the same for the emancipation of their country, not by dynamic conspiracies, but by every means recognized by civilization as legitimate for a people to employ to break the arm of their oppressors, regain their liberties, and restore their right to self-government.

It may be said that I have dwelt too earnestly upon Ireland's afflictions and Emmet's death, and in speaking of the scaffold have forgotten the birth of Emmet, but it is in honor of the death of the patriot which, like twin Bethlehem stars, light our way to his cradle. I imagine that Emmet's home was a shrine where liberty-loving Irishmen worshipped, and that a mother's lullaby songs and a father's prayers were devoted to freedom and independence. There is joy at the birth, but when the death of Emmet shall have worked out its predestined blessings, Ireland and the friends of Ireland everywhere will rejoice that the love of liberty, placed in the breast of every human being by an all-wise Creator, and never intended to be effaced by the hand of man, has once more triumphed over its oppressors.

"Last Words of Emmet" was sung by Mr. A. Smith followed by an address by Hon. W. H. Calkins. "The Isle That's Crowned with Shamrock" was then sung by Miss Annie Abramson, after which came a violin solo by Mr. M. H. Spades, followed by a recitation, "Shamrock's Head," by Professor D. Han chett. The remainder of the programme was as follows:

RAILWAY NEWS.

The L. W. and B. to Be Extended to Worthington, Ind.—Other Items of the Rail.

The Chief Train Dispatcher of the Louisville and Evansville Air Line, has removed his headquarters to Huntington, Ind.

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois is now taking several hundred car loads of coal per day into Chicago, from mines in the vicinity of Vincennes.

J. M. Chesbrough, General Passenger Agent of the Vandalia, together with his family, will visit the New Orleans Exposition this month.

The reduction of rates on the Terre Haute and Southeastern, to three cents per mile for those who buy tickets at the stations, has not yet been made, but soon will be.

Eleven shares of the capital stock of the old Illinois Southern Road (now the Cairo Division of the Wabash), were sold recently in Mt. Carmel for the sum of five cents.

The Ohio and Mississippi Road is negotiating for the Jeffersonville Car Works. This will probably end the speculation in regard to the consolidation of the Ohio and Mississippi roads at Vincennes.

The official statement of the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad Company for January shows the gross earnings, including 68 per cent. of earnings and working expenses of the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, of $1,311,433; operating expenses, $1,144,856; net earnings, $176,578.

A Vandalia official says there will never be a local pool at Terre Haute. The Vandalia, with its tracks all around that city, would want about 90 per cent. of the business, and the Bee Line would claim about the same. This same official says that the next six months will see fewer pools every where.

Evansville is making a desperate endeavor to get the shops of the Louisville and Nashville located at that point, and a gentleman from that city says that they will in all probability succeed in bringing about the removal. It is understood that the city will offer the railroad company a sufficient amount of ground upon which to build their shops, free of charge, although the latter does not ask a bonus. The removal of the shops would involve the expenditure of an enormous sum of money.

At Evansville, and also at Washington, Ind., the matter of extending the L. W. and B. Railroad north to Worthington is being agitated again. The Evansville Journal says that M. H. O'Neill was in Evansville Wednesday and had an extended interview with D. J. Mackey, and as a result of that interview Mr. O'Neill will present a petition to the Board of Commissioners next week, asking for a railroad election to see whether an appropriation shall be made by the people to aid the invaluable enterprise of extending the L. W. and B. R. R. north to Worthington as speedily as possible.

The time of the election will be fixed either for the 7th or 14th of April next. A clause will be embodied in the petition annulling all claims to the tax voted by the previous election. Further than this Mr. Mackey says he will pay all costs of the previous election, and has authorized Mr. O'Neill to ascertain the costs of the same and draw on him for it. Not only this but he will also deposit a reasonable sum of money as an earnest of his good faith in this matter. The amount of the tax asked is two-thirds of two per cent., which is one and one-third per cent. This township will therefore be called on for about $20,000. Steele Township for $6,000, and Elmore Township for about $4,000. Mr. Mackey guarantees further that for this tax he will build the road to Newberry by the 1st of September, which is the time of wheat threshing, and gives the farmer shipping facilities for the crops of the coming season. The road is to be completed to Worthington by January 1, 1886.

Abraham Lincoln in a Quarrel. (Chicago Journal.) A resident of this city, while recently on a visit to Kentucky, came in possession of the following correspondence, which has never before been made public. It explains itself.

A. Lincoln, Esq. DEAR SIR—On our first meeting on Wednesday last a difficulty of words ensued between us, which I deem it my duty to notice further. I think you were the aggressor. Your words imported insult, and whether you meant them for such is for you to say. You will therefore please inform on this point, and if you designed to offend me, please communicate to me your present feelings on the subject and whether you persist in the stand you took. Your obedient servant, WILLIAM S. ANDERSON.

W. S. Anderson: DEAR SIR—Your note of yesterday received. In the difficulty between us of which you speak, you say you think I was the aggressor. I do not think I was. You say my words imported insult. I meant them as a fair set-off to your own statement and not otherwise, and in that light alone I now wish you to understand them. You ask for my present feelings on the subject. I entertain no unkind feelings to you, and none of any sort upon the subject except a sincere regret that I permitted myself to get into an altercation with you. Yours truly, A. LINCOLN.

Brimstone for Congregationalists. [New Bedford Standard.] A good story is told of three clergymen—two Congregationalist and one Universalist—who reside not over a thousand miles from New Bedford. Two of them were talking when the third joined them, and putting a cigar in his mouth, said to his brother

Congregationalist, "Mr. — give me a nuth."

There was some hesitation about granting the request, so number three turned to his Universalist friend with his request, which was granted.

"Well, here is a Universalist with brimstone about him," said the smoker.

"Yes, sir, we keep it for our friends," said the deliberate Universalist.

That was a pretty sharp fellow in Oxford County who at one stride gulled a whole town and caught a rich widow not long ago. When the assessors of taxes came around he told them they might tax him for $10,000 in money at interest, although he was supposed to be poor and worked in a mill for $1.50 a day. The fame of a man who was sufficiently honest to uncover concealed taxable property of his own record spread through the town, and he was lionized. He made an impression on a wealthy widow and married her. After the wedding the assessors had to abate the tax on the succession $10,000, and the woman had to support a worthless husband. He was not worth a dollar.—Law-ston (Me.) Journal.
