

BASE BALL.

The Indianapolis Club Wins at Omaha—St. Louis Wins a Game at Louisville—Cincinnati Defeated at Pittsburg—Other Games.

OMAHA, May 5.—The Indianapolis Club defeated the Omahas again to-day by a score of 11 to 0. The visitors won the game by good stick work and sharp fielding. The home team was very weak at the bat and fielded loosely. The same clubs play again to-morrow.

Louisville Put in Her Pony Battery.

LOUISVILLE, May 5.—Louisville put in her "pony" battery to-day, and was badly done up by the St. Louis Club. The game was close and interesting until the seventh inning, when costly errors by the home club and heavy hitting by the visitors knocked the interest out of the game. The heavy batting of both clubs was the feature of the day. Score by innings:

Louisville.....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 4
St. Louis.....0 0 2 0 3 0 0 7 12

They Solved Bagley's Delivery.

BALTIMORE, May 5.—The Baltimore Club solved Bagley's delivery to-day, and won a game from the champion Metropolitanans. The score by innings is as follows:

Baltimore.....1 5 4 1 3 0 2 0 1-17
Metropolitan.....0 0 1 0 0 0 2 1-4

Boston Wins at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 5.—The game to-day between the Philadelphia and Boston Clubs was in direct contrast to the fine exhibition of fielding in yesterday's game. Each team to-day seemed to try to exceed the other in making errors. Quite a display of bad temper was exhibited in the sixth inning between Whitney and Hackett, the Boston battery. Captain Morrill was obliged to come in and admonish the two men. Whitney, after this episode, appeared to be "frayed." He was baited hard by the home club the remainder of the game, and made two wild pitches and a terribly wild throw, in which a base runner went from first to third base. The two final innings were played amidst great excitement. Score by innings:

Philadelphia.....1 0 0 0 2 1 0 3 1-3
Boston.....1 3 0 5 0 0 0 0 0-9

Peoples Pitched for Cincinnati.

PITTSBURG, May 5.—After suffering defeat three times at the hands of the Cincinnati Club, the home team turned the tables on them this afternoon and won a splendid victory. Peoples pitched for the Porcupolians, and his fellow-players were kept busy hunting the leather. Fifteen hundred people were present. Score by innings:

Pittsburg.....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 2 3-5
Cincinnati.....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1-1

A Soft Snap for Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 5.—The Memphis Club defeated the Birmingham here to-day, by the following score:

Memphis.....0 0 4 2 0 4 0 3 0-18
Birmingham.....0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0-2

Prevented by Rain.

DETROIT, May 5.—It was intended to play the postponed game of last week to-day, but the rains of last night and to-day decided otherwise, and the Buffalo nine left for home before noon.

Brooklyn Won Easily.

NEW YORK, May 5.—About 2,000 spectators witnessed the game at Washington Park, in Brooklyn, to-day, between the Brooklyn and Athletic Clubs. The home club won easily, through heavy work at the bat. Both clubs fielded finely. Score by innings:

Brooklyn.....1 2 0 0 0 0 0 2-7

A Close Game.

NEW YORK, May 5.—The second game between the Providence and New York League Clubs was played at the polo grounds to-day. The game was finely contested and interesting to the end. Umpire Dacker was frequently hissed, his apparently unjust decisions arousing the spectators to the highest pitch as his ruling, it was claimed, virtually gave the game to the Providence. In the seventh inning Dacker got a base on balls, Carroll was apparently thrown out at first, but Dacker said "no." The New Yorkers scored their last run in the eighth inning on hits by O'Rourke and Carroll. Score by innings:

Providence.....0 0 0 0 1 0 3 0 0-4
New York.....1 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 0-3

The Nashville Americans Defeated.

COLUMBUS, May 5.—Columbus beat the Americans to-day. Score:

Columbus.....1 2 1 3 0 0 2 0 0-9
Americans.....1 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0-2

A Hard Ball to Catch.

A correspondent of the Sporting Life says: Apropos of the attempt of a number of ball players to catch a ball dropped from the top of the Washington Monument, and the opinions expressed as to the ability of any one to accomplish the feat, the question arises if any of them has an idea of the velocity acquired by a ball dropped from a height of 550 feet by the time it strikes the ground. The experiment was tried by Paul Hines, Sam Trotter, Charles Snyder, Phil Baker and others, but none succeeded in holding it. Now the fact is that a ball so dropped has a velocity of 187 feet per second when it strikes the ground. This velocity can be better comprehended by comparing it with a batted ball. The longest hit which the writer has any knowledge of was made by George Wright at Indianapolis, when the ball struck the ground a few inches over 300 yards. The ball, in this instance, was hit into the air at an angle of about 45 degrees—the most favorable angle for a long hit. Without giving the formula, I will state that as near as can be calculated, the angle and the distance being given, the initial velocity of the ball in this case is found to be about 100 feet per second. Allowing the same ball to have been hit in the same direction, at the same angle, with sufficient force to give it the same velocity at the starting point that it acquires in falling from the Monument top, it would have gone 544 feet. Would any of the players like to take hold of a line hit, of the same force, at short field?

Meridian Rink. The Meridian Rink will be open this evening. Go and hear those new pieces that the band has been practicing; they are of a classic character, and will stir to enthusiasm the very heart-strings of the soul. "Poetry of Motion" is in the city and will doubtless grace the occasion with his presence. He must be seen on skates to be appropriately appreciated.

SCIENTIFIC TESTS.

How Miss Fay, the Spiritualist, Hoaxed Professor Crookes.

Following is part of an interview between a reporter of the Pall Mall Gazette and Mr. Maskelyne, "the St. George of the Spiritualistic Dragon": "Professor Crookes is always held up as an apostle of spiritualism. I said, 'and his name is universally quoted by the believers as the scientific authority on the subject, some even going so far as to say that his investigations have assisted him in some of his scientific discoveries. Do you know anything about the matter?' answered Mr. Maskelyne, with a quiet smile, 'but then my attention was attracted to the scientific authority on the subject, some even going so far as to say that his investigations have assisted him in some of his scientific discoveries. Do you know anything about the matter?'

"I never could find out which Fay's manager, or who the 'medium' was, which was offered to expose all the 'scientific tests' applied to her by Professor Crookes and others if I would guarantee a sum of money. I declined to do so, as I considered that there was nothing requiring explanation more than I could do myself, but I valued myself as proving my 'work' that the little woman had fooled the Professor. Some time after that the manager informed me that certain eminent spiritualists had paid Miss Fay a visit, and that she had left very hurriedly for America, leaving him behind. Of course, before the receipt of this letter, I was perfectly well acquainted with the whole of Miss Fay's 'medium' operations, which I never yet been properly explained to the public, the description given by Irving Bishop and his pupil, Stuart Camberland, being ridiculously incorrect—as they well know. I will show you the exact method.

"It may be remembered that Miss Fay's performance was managed in this way: There was a three-sided screen erected upon a raised stand, with a curtain to draw down in the front. Her husband, after giving a lecture (?), introduced a fascinating little blonde, some strips of calico about a yard in length were provided, and the committee appointed by the audience were requested to assist Mr. Fay in tying the medium. The left wrist was taken and the strip securely fastened round it, and the knots were sewn up with thread by the committee. The right wrist was then tied behind her back with the ends of the same strip, about five inches from the left, but in the manner well known to conjurers, the slip-knots so that the hand could be easily freed. Look here!"

And Mr. Maskelyne whipped a piece of black tape from his pocket, and within a minute had tied first my right and then my left wrist with double knots, and, as I expected, in the secret manner. To the great amusement of the audience, he then got out of that, he said: 'there's a slip knot there.' I tried without avail, and could not even find the slip, so cleverly was it concealed. 'Look,' he went on, 'this is all that's required.' And without using any of the forces that I had, he drew back the left, but in the manner well known to conjurers, the slip-knots so that the hand could be easily freed. Look here!"

Stonewall Jackson at the First Bull Run. General John D. Imboden, whose battery bore the brunt of the artillery charge at Bull Run, relates some of the incidents of the battle in the following: "Several other batteries soon came into line, so that by the time Griffin and Ricketts were in position near the Henry House we had, as I now remember, twenty-six fresh guns ready for them. The fighting was renewed, and was terribly bloody, and it was not until the guns were properly aimed and the fuses out the right length. This was the work of but a few minutes. On retreating to the left of the line of guns, I stopped to see General Jackson's permission to rejoin my battery. The fight was lost then at about 4 o'clock. His wife claimed, 'General, you are wounded.' He replied, as he drew a handkerchief from his breast pocket, and began to bind it up, 'Only a scratch—a mere scratch,' and called away along his line. 'General Jackson's wound, received under the circumstances I have described, became very serious when inflammation set in, and he bearing, three days after the fight, that he was suffering with it, I rode to his quarters. In a little farm-house near Centerville. Although it was barely sunrise, he was out under the trees bathing his hand with spring water. It was much swollen and very painful, but he bore himself bravely. His wife and baby had arrived the night before. His little daughter Julia was still in long dresses, and I remember tossing her, to her great delight, while breakfast was being made ready on a rude table under a tree. Of the circumstances of the battle was the only topic discussed at breakfast. I remarked to Mrs. Jackson's hearing, 'General, how is it that you can keep so cool, and appear so utterly insensible to danger in such a storm of shell and bullets as rained about you when your hand was hit?' He instantly became grave and reverential in his manner, and answered in a low tone of great earnestness: 'Answaid, my religious belief teaches me to feel as safe in the midst of it as in bed. God has fixed the time for my death. I do not concern myself about that, but to be always ready, no matter when it may overtake me.' He added, after a pause, looking me full in the face: 'Captain, that is the way all men should live, and then all men would be equally brave.'

Couldn't Beat an Army Officer.

On a Western train a number of passengers sought to while away the tedious hours with a game of poker. The game ran along for several hours, a man dropping out occasionally and another one taking his place, but two of the players stuck to their posts from first to last. There seemed to be rivalry between them, and in a measure neglecting the other players, they devoted their attention almost entirely to each other. Finally the other players retired and watched the combatants. The stakes became larger and larger and the work keener and keener. The well-dressed, slouch-hatted, military-looking man was all composure; the one with the big comb e o, belt and fierce mustache seemed nervous. He was losing. The pot, however, won were small; those he lost ran up in the hundreds. "Stranger," he said finally, "I'm going to quit while I've got a stake left. May I inquire who you are?" "Certainly," replied the other. "I am Colonel—of the regular army."

WAR TIMES IN GEORGIA.

Home Life Amid the Stirring Scenes of the Great Rebellion.

The days of my childhood, says M. M. Polson, in the Valdosta Times, were spent amid stirring scenes and troublous times. Southern ports were blockaded by Federal gunboats and the frontiers beleaguered by Federal armies. Did you ever see a "Georgia button"? Those shirt buttons were queer looking things. With their own hands our industrious mothers spun the thread, and needles were needless in those days. Provided with needle and thread, they selected the site for the proposed button and began sewing in and out, round and round until, by a simple operation, it was done. Some were sewed on fast. The button was made altogether of thread, and possessed a decided advantage—it never came off—it lasted just as long as the button hole. Home-made tumblers were an ingenious contrivance. A round bottle, while it could be obtained, was selected and a cork put over the top once around it. One person held one end of the cord, another held the other and moved the bottle quite rapidly, until the glass became hot, when it was plunged into cold water, which caused the bottle to break in two quite smoothly. Queer tumblers they were and they were used for many a purpose. They did simple operations, it is true, but still find an old-fashioned spinning-wheel. Ah, me! How sweet was the hum of the old wheel as the shadows crept slowly eastward, and the "swish, swish, swish" of the cards kept time to the dreamy music. And the old Georgia loom, with its queer-looking beam and foot, with its "bang" and "click" of the shuttle and muffled "queer" of the beam have lulled me to sleep many a time. My dear old mother worked with untiring energy to furnish "coppers and checked" for my little breeches. In the manufacture of hats there was wide field for the exercise of their inventive minds. The tender shoots of the saw palmetto, planted in round, square or "notched" strips, was most frequently brought into requisition. But then there were cloth hats made of that same homespun by cutting conical pieces of cloth, sometimes of different colors, and sewing them together at the points, and then the top of the crown and the brim made separately. These funny hats were worn by some of the last conscripts, and gave them the name of "hop eared millish." Shoemakers were exempt, and they showed wonderful skill in the manufacture of shoes. The ladies of the town and other points, as well as the shoes are made for use and not for show. When any one was so fastidious as to desire black shoes the shoemaker employed a solution of vinegar and rusty nails to blacken the leather. Soap was made from the ashes of oak and hickory. Negroes and boys were allowed to wear their hair in a top and great heaps of oak and hickory, guarding the ashes carefully from the rain until cool when they were taken home, thrown into a hopper and leached the lye being used for soap-making and for "setting" the dye in coloring the home-made cloth. Going to Deadman's Bay and other points, as well as a picnic for the boys. The dirt dug from the sandy beach, boiled down the brine which arose in them, and then returned, after having made a sufficient quantity to supply the neighborhood. But sometimes the salt gave out, and they hadn't time to go to the coast, so they just scraped off the soil of the left footed muck, and the committee had insisted on sewing up the right-hand knots as well, as at rare intervals they did, the contraptions was met thus. The medium had a knife concealed in her dress, and with it she would cut off her bonds close up to the left wrist, restach a square loop upon the left, but in the manner well known to conjurers, the slip-knots so that the hand could be easily freed. Look here!"
